NEW YORK Nov. 14—(AP).—La Marble's first official act as a pro was to accept a week's engagement to warble in a Broadway theatre, beginning December 26...Attention, Yanks and Giants: Both Hank Greenberg and Frank McCormick, voted the most valuable players in the two big leagues, are products of New York's Bronx...Around here the boys think Jimmy Wilson already has signed to manage the Cubs, despite denials from both sides.

Miss Marble bounced back into the papers yesterday by predicting Helen Jacobs would succeed her as queen of the amateurs....James Joy Johnston is burned up because Illinois ruled out his Tommy Tucker as an opponent for Billy Conn....A baseball man who usually knows what's going on wires that if Jim Farley buys the Yanks he'll use money provided by stockholders of the soft drink firm which recently made Farley an officer.

Calladine Nets Single Tally

PITTSBURG, Nov. 14 — (CP).—Pittsburg Hornets probably wouldn't have any trouble at all in leading the American Hockey League's western section if they had a half-dozen players like Lloyd Roubell.

As it is the Hornets are tied in points with Hershey Bears for second place in the section standing, and Roubell has had a lot to do with getting them there.

In seven games, the North Bayborn Roubell has slapped home five tallies, or exactly one-third of the Pittsburg goal production, to date and now leads the league in goal-getting. Despite Roubell's efforts, however, the Hornets have won only two and drawn one in their seven starts.

One of their victories was scored last night at home as they downed Philadelphia Ramblers, with whom Roubell formerly played, 2-1. Roubel got one of the goals and Harry Currie the other. The Philadelphia score went to Calladine.

In the other game of the night New Haven Eagles battled to their third draw in six games, ending up at 2-2 with Indianapolis Capitals. The New Haven goals went to Don Willson and Vic Myles, while Hec Kilrea and Jud McAtee scored for the Capitals.

Does Your Stomach Rebel After the Meals You Eat?

The bloated, heavy feeling after meals; the empty, sinking, gnawing before meals; the belching of gas and flatulency between meals; the rising and souring of food, all these, and more, fall to the lot of those suffering from stomach trouble.

Burdock Blood Bitters helps to stimulate the sluggish action of the digestive and intestinal system by promoting the flow of the important gastric juices so necessary for the proper digestion of food.

You will find when you take B. B. B. that digestion, assimilation and elimination are greatly improved by its use.

SevenBeachMen Given Spots By Sport Moguls

TORONTO, Nov. 14.—(CP).—The power in the Senior Ontario Rugby Football Union lies with Toronto Balmy Beach, unbeaten in six league starts, so it is no surprise to find Alex Ponton's players dominating the circuit's 1940 all-star team which was released to-day.

Seven Beach men are on the club selected for the Canadian Press by the coaches and sports writers in the O.R.F.U. cities. They are headed by the veteran Syd Reynolds, one of the two men to receive an unanimous call, and are rounded into a balanced squad of 12 with four Sarnians and one Camp Borden Soldier. Here is the team:

Fling Wing—Ralph Perry, Sarnia.
Half— Eddie Thompson, Camp Borden.
Half—Don Crowe, Balmy Beach.
Half (Secondary Defence)—Frank Seymour, Balmy Beach.
Quarterback—Bobby Porter, Balmy Beach.
Snap—Nick Paithouski, Sarnia.
Inside — Bruce Barron, Balmy Beach.
Inside—Bobby Reid, Balmy Beach.
Middle— Gord Shields, Balmy Beach.
Middle—Dick Norris, Sarnia.
Outside — Syd Reynolds, Balmy Beach.
Outside—Jim Butler, Sarnia.

Plenty Of Insurance.

The team, naturally, has all the requisites of an all-star club, with insurance for all the offensive departments in that every member of the backfield does more than one thing well. At their specialties, Perry and Seymour would handle the plunging, Crowe and Porter the passing, Porter the kicking and Thompson the running.

The wall behind which this backfield would operate is made up of an experienced group, big and strong with a man such as Jim Butler at one end who could drop back and do a capable kicking job as he has for Sarnia battery in recent weeks. The selectors went for experience in picking their linemen.

The host of men given one or more votes on the backfield was surprising in view of Balmy's clear-cut superiority through the regular season. The unquestioning eye of the selectors was caught only by Thompson, who labored so valiantly in a lost cause, and the union's No. 1 line smasher, Seymour.

Thompson got all nine votes, three of them for the quarterbacking job, and Seymour was dropped on only one ballot. Hamilton Alerts did not place a man on the team, but Odie Gibb and Hardy Awrey, the cub's best backs, were among those receiving mention.

Tribute To Paithouski.

Johnny Manson, who has come along as a fine relief for Porter, was the only one besides Thompson and Porter considered for the signal calling. The six votes given Paithouski were a grand tribute to the brilliant defensive work of the former Queen's University star. He is a bone-crushing tackler and has an uncanny sense for anticipating a play.

The selections for the rest of the line were made without trouble. The voters gave Norris six ballots; Barron, Reid and Shields four each and Jim Butler three. Ike Norris, a brother of Dick, and Balmy's Leo Deady each received two votes for outside.

Reynolds, a perennial all-star, made a great comeback this season after a brief retirement. In his 30's, the veteran has shown all of his old skill in nailing a man in the open field. He is almost as good defensively.

With the old Sarnia Imperials disbanded and only a few parts picked up in the battery club, and with Peterborough and Montreal Westmounts not operating, it was sure that this season's mythical team would look little like that of 1939. Only Thompson is a holdover.

Given Release

Tony Lazzeri, manager of the Toronto Maple Leaf Ball club, has been given his release from that team. It is reported to be highly problematical whether or not Toronto will even have a ball team next season.

National Horse Show, Week Of Surprises

NEW YORK, Nov. 14—(AP). — When the boys and girls start thinking of 1940's Grade-A comebacks in the next month or so, it might be a good idea to give a thought or three to the 55th National Horse Show.

And, while a large part of the story of the week-long National which closed last night at Madison Square Garden is contained in the comebacks of Chatter Chat, among the hunters, and Bar-Tender among the jumpers, you can't look back on the seven nights of this tanbark tete-a-tete without remembering three other developments of note in the show world:

1.—This was the "hard luck" show, which saw Chile's riders dogged by a 48-hour jinx that killed their fine old mare, Chilena, and injured their crack leader, Major Eduardo Yanez, while Uncle Sam's riders from out of Fort Riley, Kansas, mopped up in the team division.

2.—Wensleydale Pilot, a precision-stepper from John F. Cuneo's Hawthorn Farms stable at Libertyville, Ill., probably is the best harness horse around today, by far the head man in a field which is having an off-year in the matter of competition; and

3.—This is the year a rarity as unusual as a left-handed catcher turned up, with a white mane and tail, tagged Sweet Campernelle, turned out to be the best little lady in all the saddle horse division.

Chatter Chat, a Virginia-bred blue blood from the barn of Mrs. Ellsworth Augustus of Willoughby, Ohio, was No. 1 among the highly-regarded hunters, winning the open stake and the week-long point championship in his division. He was the champ in '36 and '37, but was injured while training for the show the following two years. This time, he bested the $250 Irish horse of uncertain breeding, Shamrock, owned by Samuel Weiss of Stamford, Conn.

Bartender was "it" among the jumpers. From the Maytop Stable of Southport, Conn., he stood out, came back to the top spot he held in 1937 and '38.

No Coalition Rule

TORONTO, Nov. 14—(CP).—Premier Hepburn said to-day the possibility of a coalition government for Ontario had not been considered because "there is no necessity for it."

Asked about the possibility of a coalition government in the future, Mr. Hepburn replied: "I am not a prophet."

Filly Fools Bookies In Maiden Plate

LONDON, Nov. 14 — (CP). — The laugh was on the bookmakers at Thirsk Park when Gollywog Filly, a two-year-old racing for the first time, captured the Sutton Maiden Plate.

The filly bolted on the way to the post and threw Gordon Richards, champion British jockey. When the bookies saw this they lengthened the horse's odds from 4 to 1 to 8 to 1.

Gollywog Filly then was led back to the post, got away to a good start, and took first place from the favorite, Samanga, by a head.

CanucksKeeping Hockey Alive In England

WITH THE C.A.S.F. SOMEWHERE IN ENGLAND, Nov. 14 — (CP). — The Canadian troops are going to keep hockey alive in England this winter.

A large artificial rink has been obtained by the Y.M.C.A. for use of the Canucks, and a boom hockey season is expected. Plans are being completed to enable teams from the two Canadian Divisions and Corps troops to play regular schedules.

Oscar Pearson, long-time physical director at Toronto Y.M.C.A., and for several years physical director at the Ottawa "Y" who now is organizing secretary of 1st Division sports, is setting up an office in the spacious arena building to devote much of his time to organizing the leagues. These will cover every unit which can raise a team.

"If the Hun raiders just leave the building alone, we should have an excellent hockey season" he said. "The Y.M.C.A. obtained the rink after some negotiations and it is now being fixed for our troops. It likely will open for the first game some time this month, and as far as I can learn will be the only rink in England going this winter."

The glass roof is being taken out and boarded up for safety. The rink is regulation size for hockey and the ice surface will be as good as most in Canada.

Pearson said considerable hockey equipment has been obtained for teams which haven't any and 600 pair of pleasure skates are at the rink available for the soldiers and civilians. There are 300 pair for men and 300 for women.

Leafs, Canadiens Meet Tonight In First Clash

TORONTO, Nov. 14—(CP).—The pupil and the teacher match their hockey brains tonight in the meeting of Toronto Maple Leafs and Montreal Canadiens in the feature contest of a two-game National Hockey League card. Their teams' brawn also will have something to do with the result, but Happy Day vs. Dick Irvin gives the meeting an added flavor.

In the other game, Chicago's surprising Black Hawks travel to New York to meet the Americans. Hawks lead the N.H.L. at present, and their only defeat was by Americans, 1-0, in the first game Chicago played this season. Americans could go into a first place tie by stopping the Hawks again.

But in the Day vs. Irvin go lies most of the interest. Day was one of the star defencemen and for many seasons club captain, while Irvin coached the Leafs. Happy succeeded Irvin to the Leaf coaching job when Tommy Gorman picked the quiet-spoken pigeon fancier to lead Canadiens out of hockey's wilderness this season.

It will be the first clash of the season between the league's only Canadian representatives, and it comes after both have played two games. They play tonight in Montreal and come right back in a return engagement at Toronto Saturday night, two games which should provide a good test of both teams' early mettle.

Eire's egg shortage is serious.

TRINITY'S NEW MASTER

CAMBRIDGE, England—(CP). — The King has approved the appointment of Professor George Macaulay Trevelyan to the Mastership of Trinity College, in succession to the late Sir Joseph John Thomson.

ARE YOU RUN DOWN OR DEPRESSED?

If you are run down, weak or depressed, or catch cold easily, it may be due to the lack of the vital vitamins A, D and C in your diet. You can make up for the lack of these vital vitamins if you take a steady treatment with Haliborange. Haliborange is the nicest way of taking Halibut Liver Oil, which is twice as rich as Cod Liver Oil in vitamins A and D. Vitamin C is in the fresh orange juice which makes Haliborange so delicious to taste.

Get a bottle of Haliborange. Take it for a week or two as directed. See how quickly it will restore your vitality.

A ROCKING CHAIR was blamed today for causing Memphis' 30th traffic fatality of the year. W. D. Cooper, 75, seated himself in a rocking chair in the back of a truck carrying his household goods. When the vehicle started, Cooper rocked out the end, striking his head on the pavement. He died of the injury.

Girls As Aides To Home Guards

CHRISTCHURCH, England, Nov. 12.—(CP).—Every one of the 200 "old sweat" in the Home Guard here think there is nobody quite like the Christchurch Girl Guides. Rain or shine, two of them turn up at the drill hall every night to run messages and go on errands for the company.

The Guides' best achievement was summoning the guard to duty on an emergency call one night when they cycled along miles of country roads and had the guardsmen at headquarters in two hours.

"Good heavens. How on earth did we get them here so soon?" the commanding officer asked when he saw his men massed on parade. "The guides have done it again, sir," an officer said.

When the company was being organized, Hazel Hornby, 16-year-old high school girl, and her friends went to headquarters to see if they could help. On bicycles they toured the countryside delivering postcards inviting men to join.

"When we formed the company, she trooped along with her girls and rather shyly asked if they could help," Major T. Woombell, commanding officer, related. "Help! Why they've nearly made this company. They've done us countless good turns."

Hazel blushed. "We like doing the work—the major is so nice."

Colored Clergyman Pleads Not Guilty

HAMILTON, Ont., Nov. 14 — (CP). — Rev. Jeremiah Hay, 54, colored clergyman of Chatham, Ontario, and Chicago, appeared before Magistrate J. H. Burbidge to-day and pleaded not guilty to a charge of false pretences. He was remanded one week. A charge of failing to register as an American citizen in Canada will also be heard on November 19.

Accused said he was formerly minister of the Chatham Community Church. He said he had been travelling through the province soliciting funds for support of the church and had collected "more than $300." He said his "percentage" was fifty per cent. plus expenses.

By Remote Control

MONTREAL, Nov. 14 — (CP). — President Pierre Dupong of Luxembourg said last night that a provisional government for the independent Grand Duchy has been set up in Montreal with the permission of the Dominion Government. Cabinet members of the little country will confer here with the reigning monarch, Princess Charlotte, Dupong said. He has taken up residence here and intends to remain here until next Spring. Princess Charlotte; her husband, Prince Felix, and their six children have also taken up residence here.

Rev. Riddell, Milton Minister, Speaks At Millbrook

MILLBROOK, Nov. 14—(ENS)—Reaching its 106th anniversary, Grace Presbyterian Church on Sunday observed the occasion with special services both morning and evening, a former minister, Rev. John Riddell of Milton being the guest speaker for the day.

Centreville Presbyterian Church, the other charge on the circuit, withdrew its service in order to worship with the Millbrook congregation, and St. Andrew's United Church cancelled its evening service that its congregation, too, might join with that of a sister church on its anniversary occasion.

Capacity congregations gathered both morning and evening, the messages brought by the visiting minister being of a deeply thoughtful and spiritual character, and leaving a lasting impression upon the minds of his hearers. The choir had special music for the services, and the guest soloist, Mrs. Chapman of Lakefield, who sang both morning and evening, was heard to much advantage in the selections chosen. Miss Phyllis Kidd presided at the organ, and the flowers banked within the altar, bringing both fragrance and beauty into the sanctuary, were largely the gift of Mrs. Milton Fallis, other members of the congregation, however, participating in this service also.

Rev. A. L. Sisco, B.D. of St. Andrew's United Church, assisted with the service at night, reading the lesson and offering the prayers. In the morning, Rev. Mr. Riddell spoke from the words: "I have fought a good fight, I have finished my course, I have kept the faith," from II Timothy 1:7, urging a fully consecrated allegiance to Christ.

At night the message was based on Psalm 124, with special emphasis upon verse 8: "Our help is in the name of the Lord, who made heaven and earth." "This Psalm was written not only on parchment, or on a scroll, but was deeply engraved on the hearts of the people of Israel."

Speaking of the last war, and its aftermath of depression, and of the scant advantage to the nations claiming the victory, the speaker went on to show Hitler's method of enslaving the conquered peoples in this struggle, "the only way to create a profit for the victorious side. God's chosen people were not able to overcome their enemies because they were thinking of their privileges and not of their responsibilities. We live here in a land that is far ahead of the Promised Land of Palestine, yet how much thankfulness do we show Him for it? We in Canada are the chosen people of God as far as peace and plenty are concerned in these days, but we need to be careful to recognize this fact, and its obligations."

In closing emphasis was placed upon avoidance of the worship of false gods, money, position, privilege, power, "for we do worship these as much as Israel ever did," and that will utterly unfit us for building the new world which must arise out of the present conflict. "Serve God and prosper; forget Him, and suffer," was the thought finally left with the listeners.

Rev. A. Raeburn Gibson, minister of Grace Church, took charge of Mr. Riddell's work at Milton for the day. The visiting minister was accompanied by his wife and daughter, Jean, who was born at Millbrook, and were guests of Mr. and Mrs. S. E. Eakins during their stay in the village. A number of former friends were called on before they left for their home on Monday afternoon.

Friends Do Honor to Harold Taylor

Taking advantage of the fact Corporal Harold F. Taylor was on leave from Hamilton visiting his home, friends from Burnbrae and Wellman's communities gathered at the residence of his parents, Mr. and Mrs. G. V. Taylor in Rawdon township to spend a social evening on Friday, and to wish him Godspeed as he prepares to take further advanced training at the Eglinton Hunt Club Airport in Toronto.

Roy Walker acted as chairman in the enforced absence of the minister, Dr. M. E. R. Boudreau and a program of a patriotic nature followed. An instrumental solo, Gerald Taylor; reading, Doris Pollock; duet, Annie and Bernice Fry; reading Mrs. Wm. Hume; solo, John Coggins; music, Mrs. Geo. Watson; music, Gerald and Maurice Clancy; duet, Annie and Bernice Fry; reading, Charles Carter; speeches, Mr. James Stewart and Mr. Carl Clancy.

Havelock Rally Has Fine Program On Education

HAVELOCK, Nov. 14 — (ENS). — "Educational Week" being observed in the local schools was emphasized at the November meeting of the Havelock Home and School Association, held on Tuesday evening in the school building. A most interesting program was provided for the occasion by the members of the teaching staffs, and several of the students, and presented before a gathering of sixty adult members and twenty-five pupils.

A survey of the various vocations, with individual descriptions of each, and valuable information on how to choose one, was given in a number of talks along different lines of this topic by the teachers. Miss M. Stillwell began with "Vocational Trends," followed by Miss N. Hall, who outlined the "Factors in deciding your vocation." The "Professions—ministers, teachers, doctors, dentists, lawyers, and nurses" were described by Principal R. W. Goheen of the High School, and Principal Allan Gay of the Public School presented information along the "Commercial line." "Home Economics" were outlined by Miss Edith Roberts, and "Engineering vocations given by D. C. Drinkwalter. Unable to attend because of illness, Miss N. Watson was to have described "Social vocations."

The musical education portion of the evening's program was presented by pupils from the two lower rooms in Public School, under the direction of their respective teachers, Miss L. Wing and Miss G. McNeely. Items included were as follows: vocal duet, "Canada," by Joan Paige and Betty Jennings; vocal duet, "Tra-la-la," Dorothy Ann Holdcroft and Joan Youmans; chorus by Miss Wing's class, "Clap Hands"; chorus by Miss McNeely's class, "Now The Day Is Over"; vocal solo, "Till the Lights of London Shine Again," Buddy Peters.

With the president, Mrs. C. Taylor, in the chair, the meeting opened with the National Anthem and the Lord's Prayer. The convener, Mrs. George Rigby reported that plans were complete for the "Amateur Nite" which the Home and School is sponsoring among the Public School pupils of this area. A good program is already assured, although the entries were not closed until today at noon. The executive reported also that five members from the local association had attended the Home and School convention which was held in Lindsay on October 25.

The parent attendance shield for this month was awarded to the pupils of Principal Gay's classroom. At the conclusion of the program, thanks was expressed by the president to the teachers and pupils for the splendid program which they had presented. The meeting closed with the singing of "O Canada."

C.P. Appoints War Writer To Ottawa Post

TORONTO, Nov. 14 — (CP). — Appointment of Edwin S. Johnson, former London superintendent, as Military Correspondent at Ottawa is announced by J. A. McNeil, general manager of The Canadian Press.

Mr. Johnson will arrive in Canada shortly to take up the newly created post. He will report and interpret Canada's military war effort with a background of experience as war correspondent with the Candian Active Service Force in England.

First appointed war correspondent with the 1st Division last February, his sphere of activity was appreciably enlarged in July when the Division was absorbed in a Corps under command of Lt.-Gen. A. G. L. McNaughton. Later he served for a time as correspondent with the 2nd Division at its training base. He will be succeeded alternately at corps headquarters by S. S. Robertson, London superintendent, and Ross Munro, formerly of the C.P. Press Gallery staff at Ottawa.

Johnson brings to his new position more than 20 years' newspaper experience, most of it with The Canadian Press. Appointed London superintendent in 1937, after working in Ottawa, Toronto and New York, he directed the bureau's output of news during the momentous pre-war years and in the early months of the conflict.

In the summer of 1939 he toured France, Italy, Hungary, Czechoslovakia, Austria, and Poland with W. Rupert Davies, president of The Canadian Press, acquiring background that was to be valuable in later months.

In France.

Shortly after war broke out he visited British General Headquarters in France with a party of Dominion ministers, the first Canadian correspondent to reach Headquarters.

Last June while serving as war correspondent with the 1st Division he packed his bags to leave with the Division for France and was at a Channel port to embark when the Division received orders to remain in England.

Johnson stayed to report the stirring story of the Division's advance parties who reached France and barely manged to effect a retreat to the Channel when French resistance broke down and the Germans swept into the area.

A native of Manitoba, Johnson began his newspaper career with the Winnipeg Free Press in 1919 after serving in the First Great War with the Royal Flying Corps. He entered the Canadian Press service in Winnipeg in 1924 and has held some of its most important news staff positions, including those of Parliamentary correspondent at Ottawa, night superintendent at Toronto and New York superintendent.

Crippled Woman Shelter Heroine

LONDON, Nov. 14—(CP).—Mrs. Mabel Letheridge and her 17-year-old daughter Susan are self-appointed waitresses to hundreds of underground shelterers. Nightly, even in the heaviest of raids, they distribute jugs of tea and chocolate free to people from working-class flats in the district.

Until recently they carried the jugs and cups over their shoulders but the people they helped clubbed together and bought them a second-hand pram.

Mrs. Letheridge and Susan looked after the catering themselves at first but when it grew into a full-sized proposition the mother appealed to other people in the district to contribute tea and sugar from their rations.

A heroine of the First Great War when she lost a leg in a shell factory explosion and won the O.B.E., Mrs. Letheridge treats her shelter excursions as part of her daily work. But she's proud of her daughter.

"Susan's the real heroine," she said. "I'm a war veteran, but young Sue's the plucky one. Bombs are something new to her but she's a chip off the old block."

Japan has started a new war on crime.

Double Output Of Parachutes In Canada

OTTAWA, Nov. 14—(CP).—Production of parachutes in Canada, now proceeding at the rate of 500 a week, will be doubled "in the near future," Munitions Minister Howe said in a statement to-day.

Mr. Howe said large-scale production had made possible a sharp reduction in cost of parachutes.

"We have two sources of supply within the Dominion and facilities are adequate for an output of considerably more than 1,000 parachutes a week if necessary," said Mr. Howe.

"With the exception of housings and a few other small fittings, all materials for manufacturing of parachutes are being made in this country."

About 13,000 parachutes had been ordered for the air services since the war started and about 4,800 had been delivered and are available for use, the Minister added.

There had been no shortage of materials and large stocks are on hand to take care of future requirements.

MORE ABOUT—

Food For Britain

Government ranks also agreed with the suggestion that something had to be done to relieve the situation.

The mid-week half-day in Parliament produced a detailed program for the rehabilitation of agriculture from M. J. Coldwell (C.C.F., Rosetown-Biggar). John Blackmore (N.D., Lethbridge) urged the necessity of utilizing the national credit not only to meet such domestic emergencies as that confronting agriculture but to help finance the war, without adding to the public debt or to taxation.

In the Senate Conservative Leader Arthur Meighen asserted Canada was not doing its part in the defence of Britain. Instead, the Dominion was "mesmerized by home defence" although defence of Britain was vital to Canada.

Senator Raoul Dandurand, Government leader, replied that Canada was doing everything Britain asked. Britain had not asked for more Canadian soldiers but had asked for help toward domination of sea and air. Towards that end, Canada was bending its efforts.

The 30-day compulsory military training plan was criticized for its inadequacy by Senator Meighen and, in the Commons by Capt. G. S. White (Con., Hastings-Peterborough). Senator Meighen termed its products "hothouse soldiers," while Capt. White submitted that with only one month's training these men would be "only an undisciplined mob" in an emergency.

Capt. White, appearing in uniform, criticized the lack of equipment provided for his non-permanent active militia unit, the Hastings and Prince Edward Regiment. The only equipment they had besides rifles and bayonets was what they had made themselves, he said.

A broad plan for marketing of all farm produce through boards having producer representation was laid before the Commons by Mr. Coldwell. The program called for acquisition by these boards of all farm produce, at parity prices, and suppression of speculation in food products, including closing the Winnipeg grain exchange. Packing and processing plants should be operated under co-operative or public ownership.

A Full Time Job.

The wheat surplus would yet prove an asset, Mr. Coldwell held, but the Government should be carrying it financially now, not the producers. Wheat growers should be given 75 per cent. of the guaranteed price set by the Wheat Board if their grain was properly stored on the farm.

A planning commission for the industry would guide future policy and co-ordinate the operation of the marketing boards. Among other things, it would arrange for export to Britain, without profit to Canada, of supplies of food now rationed in that country.

Mr. Coldwell urged the Government to define its war and peace aims. Democratic Canadians wanted the war to end in a lasting peace based on social and economic justice and the rule of law. That meant peace must be negotiated between peoples freed from threats of force. Collective security involving the establishment of an international authority superior to individual states would be necessary.

Pernicious influences were now at work disintegrating Canada's political democracy, John Blackmore warned the House. The first consisted of economic considerations, the second of emotional and intellectual considerations through distortions effected by propaganda.

Wants No More Taxes

Mr. Blackmore submitted a sub-amendment to the address in reply to the speech from the throne, regretting the government's failure to adopt a monetary policy which would permit a maximum war effort without increasing debt or taxation, and declaring the view that present financial policy would destroy the liberties essential to a true democracy.

In his speech he warned that expansion of national credit need not result in inflation. There were only two ways of dealing with inflation—either cut down the amount of money in circulation or increase the supply of goods in circulation.

Joseph Thorson (Lib. Selkirk) endorsed the recommendations of the Rowel-Sirois Commission. A national reform program was needed immediately to enable Canada to make its maximum war contribution and to lay the foundation for a strong Canada.

"If our financial structure was utterly inadequate for Canada in time of peace, it is even more necessary now than it would be in peacetime to make the changes recommended by the report," he said.

Joseph Bradette, Liberal-Cochrane, endorsed the recent suggestion of Premier Adelard Godbout of Quebec, that French-speaking Canadians should learn English, but he thought the same idea might be followed by the English-speaking majority. He approved the suggestion soldiers receive free transportation while on leave.

Aid To Britain

Senator Meighen urged the government to concentrate on helping Britain, even at the risk of facing some local schisms. "If any in this country in the party which I belong are instrumental in digging up these schisms," he said, "I will oppose them and support the government."

"What I fear is that we are not directing our efforts toward the essential, vital end," Senator Meighen continued. "I fear we are dissipating our efforts and our substance in activities which appear fine and popular but which never will win a war. If the history of national conflicts has taught us anything it is that there is only one way to win a war, and that is by having the decisive forces at the decisive point at the decisive time.

"Is Canada contributing to that way of achieving victory by sending to the actual theatres something less than 50,000 men?"

Senator Dandurand in his speech said Canada was answering the call for whatever Britain asked. Today, Britain was not asking for a single man for a regiment on the other side.

"Just now Great Britain is only asking us for what we are helping her with, and we are helping to the full in what she wants from us. Let there be no misunderstanding, if no more men are being sent it is because they are not asked."

Trade Steps Up

Senator W. D. Euler (Lib. Ontario) in a report to the Senate said Canada's foreign trade was up $600,000,000 over the previous year and showed a favorable balance of $345,000,000 as compared with the previous year.

Senator A. K. Hugessen (Lib. Quebec) read into the record a report outlining the work of the department of munitions and supply in the war effort.

Both Senator Meighen and Senator Dandurand paid tribute to Neville Chamberlain, former British prime minister who died in England last Saturday, and complimented Senator Athanase David (Lib. Quebec) and Senator Salter A. Hayden (Lib. Ontario) on their addresses moving and seconding the address in reply to the speech from the throne.

Referring to Senator David's remark that the hand of friendship was stretched out by Quebec in these dangerous times to the rest of Canada, Senator Meighen said he was eager to grasp that hand.

British Airmen Arrive To "Polish Up"

GODERICH, Ont., Nov. 13.—(CP).—A large contingent of British airmen who are to be trained by their own staff independently of the Commonwealth Air Training scheme have arrived here.

Transported to the Port Albert Air Navigators' School yesterday, the group required 15 coaches on a special train. They arrived in Eastern Canada on Sunday and came directly here. It is understood they are advanced fliers and will complete their training in night flying and navigation here and then return for active service in Britain.

The party was in charge of Wing Commander H. M. Groves. With him in addition to the large class of students were instructors, engineers, and mechanics. Equipment for navigation study was also brought from England by the group.

reported shot down at Poole on the south coast, after a fight with British Spitfires. The crew was said to have been killed.

Weather in the Strait of Dover moderate after last night's gale, one of the worst of the year, which hampered the activity of night raiders. Only a few planes were reported over London before an all-clear ended the regularly nightly attack on the city.

"Bombs were dropped in one district in the London area and at some places in east and southeast England," the Government reported in a communique. "In a town in East Anglia and in the London area a few houses were damaged. Elsewhere very little damage occurred. The only casualties are a small number of people injured."

London itself was quiet after a short raid, during which Royal Air Force fighter planes climbed up to engage Axis bombers.

Watchers on the shore of an east coast Scottish town reported seeing a German raider shot down in flames and another probably damaged by anti-aircraft fire.

2,875 Nazis Downed

British bombers, an authoritative source said, attacked a number of objectives in Germany during the night, including some in the R.A.F.'s 30th raid on Berlin.

In the 12 months since the first bomb of the war dropped on British soil in an attack on the Shetland Islands, November 13, 1939, the Government has reported 2,875 raiding planes shot down during assaults on the United Kingdom and shipping.

This represents approximate loss of about 7,200 men. Royal Air Force defence losses in this same period were reported at 815 fighters, but 403 of the pilots were saved.

Bombing casualties in the year were reported at about 15,000 killed and 21,500 wounded, 75 per cent in the London area.

Forestry Meeting For Young Farmers

Junior farmers of Central Ontario are being invited to a reforestation conference at Orono on Wednesday, November 20, which is planned as a means of arousing the interest of the younger men of the farms in the broad question of conservation and reforestation.

Groups are expected from the counties of Ontario, Victoria, Durham, Northumberland, Peterborough, Hastings, Prince Edward, Lennox and Addington. The program includes luncheon at noon and dinner at 5:30, and also a tour of the Ontario government's foresty station at Orono.

The general subject of discussion at the two sessions, one in the morning beginning at 11 o'clock (DST), will be projects through which young men's organizations may make some contribution to the cause of reforestation and conservation. One of the speakers will be W. H. Porter of the Farmers' Advocate, London, and either E. J. Zavitz or A. H. Richardson of the Forestry branch. Another subject will be some phases of junior work by either R. S. Duncan or A. H. Martin of the Department of Agriculture.

Man Pleads Guilty To Shop Lifting

Changing his plea, Colin Fraser pleaded guilty before Magistrate O. A. Langley, K.C., in police court this morning to shoplifting in Zeller's and Kresge's stores, the stolen articles being a suit of underwear and several pairs of men's stockings.

Charles Glover who appeared for Fraser pleaded for clemency. He said the accused had come here from Ottawa on essential war work and that the thefts had taken place when the accused was intoxicated and did not know what he was doing.

The crown intimated that it would like to know whether or not Fraser had a record and the accused was accordingly remanded for sentence to give the authorities a chance to satisfy their curiosity on that point.

Engineers Are Liking New Quarters

At the Peterborough Armoury today, Capt. G. S. Walker, O.C. 3rd Field Park Coy. R.C.E. was recruiting again. Eleven men are required by the company and the response seemed to be satisfactory

Capt. Walker impressed the Examiner with his earnest desire to see that conditions for the boys in his command are of the best possible. The officer welcomes queries from parents, and said that he would be only too glad to correspond with parents of the boys at Truro. Sometimes men in the service prove to be poor correspondents, and if the parents concerned with the 3rd Field Park Coy, find this to be true of their sons, Capt. Walker would be pleased to keep them informed, and would regard their confidence.

All reports reaching the Examiner to date, have pointed to the fact that the boys are comfortable, and although certain inconveniences have had to be tolerated especially at first, everyone is satisfied with present conditions.

Having just finished a refresher course at Kingston, Capt. Walker said he is anxious to get down with the boys. A lot has been learned in the past year, and the experience gained at Dunkirk has been put into effective practise; officer are now able to more clearly, and with more knowledge, instruct their men in defensive tactics. The protection of men against such menaces as the dive bomber and camouflaging against air attacks has advanced much in recent months.

Still at the Armour, the officer will remain in Peterborough until Friday night at least. The men needed are listed as one machinist (electrical and mechanical; two blacksmiths; one tinsmith; four engine artificers; one saddle and harness maker; one sawyer; and one plumber. Applicants may see Lt.-Col. F. L. Bradburn, M.C., recruiting officer, at the Peterborough Armoury, or Capt. Walker.

Students of the Collegiate Institute and Vocational Training School have sold approximately $3,700 in War Savings Stamps during the two months since they began on September 16 this work of helping the government and the country in this auxiliary plan of financing the war.

The total amount of War Savings Stamps sold by the students last week was $365, and the weekly average has been about $400. They have broadened their effort into selling War Savings Certificates in what may be called cash payments as distinct from the virtual instalment plan through the sale of War Savings Stamps. The students are also arranging to convert the books of sixteen stamps into certificates, just an extra facility for their "customers."

This co-operation by the student body began in a small way, and the effect of their sustained sales effort has now reached the substantial total of about $3,700.

Rambling Reporter

THE WIND SHE BLEW.

The rushing cold Otonabee flows on its turbid way, and often strange objects go floating down the stream.

The wind of early this week sent a strange object hurtling from its foundation on Mother Earth out to the broad expanse of the river. Then this object floated partially submerged downstream.

The floating hulk attracted the attention of a farmer on the east side of the water, and he immediately took a pike pole and snared it, then pulled it in close to shore. A stout rope and a team of horses, and the farmer had his prize securely in tow. He dragged it home and proceeded to set it up near his house, where it added the finishing touch to the quiet domestic scene. Now it is anchored securely once more—it has regained its place in the sun.

Dr. T. H. Hogg To Visit City

The twenty-second annual banquet of the Peterborough branch of the Engineering Institute of Canada will be held at the Kawartha Club Wednesday evening November 20, beginning at 7 o'clock.

The speakers will be Dr. T. H. Hogg, chairman of the Hydro-Electric Power Commission, and president of the E.I.C., and De Gaspe Beaubien, consulting engineer, Montreal, who is co-chairman with Walter Somerville of the War Savings Stamps committee for all of Canada.

The first banquet of the E.I.C. in Peterborough was held in 1919 and has usually been an event that attracted considerable attention from engineers beyond the local membership. It is expected that Mr. Beaubien will have something to say to the banquet assembly about the sale of War Savings Stamps.

R. L. Dobbin will be chairman of the dinner meeting.

Four Women Appear On Vagrancy Counts

It was ladies' day at police court this morning when four women were before Magistrate O. A. Langley, K.C., on vagrancy charges.

Two of them, married women, from Norwood who had pleaded guilty Monday were allowed to go without punishment after the Magistrate had given them a stern warning as to what would happen to them if they were brought before him again.

The women said that they had intended to go home last Saturday night—but didn't and Chief Constable Newhall said that they had been with a local man at a rooming house.

Two young girls also charged with vagrancy were likewise allowed to go with a warning after Chief Constable Newhall stated that the police would not offer any evidence against the two. One of the girls came from Picton and she had been boarding at the home of the other in Peterborough.

Trouble arose last night when the Picton girl smuggled the clothes of the other girl out of the house after the father of the Peterborough lass had forbidden her to leave. The two girls were arrested and the vagrancy charge this morning followed.

Eyes And Hernia Top List Of Rejections

OTTAWA, Nov. 14—(CP)—Hernia, defective eyesight, respiratory and ear troubles were prominent among the defects which resulted in 2,078 men who reported for training at the start of militia training periods on October 9 being sent home, according to information obtained from the Department of National Defence last night.

These rejections were made by military doctors out of a total of 27,599 men in the age groups 21, 22 and 23 who reported for training after having been passed as fit by civilian medical practitioners of their own choice.

Hernia caused the largest number of rejections, 288, or more than 10 per cent. of the total. Next to this came eye conditions, which accounted for 274 rejections.

Respiratory troubles caused 181 men to be sent home, and ear troubles, 160. Heart conditions caused 123 rejections, and urethetis, 116.

An even 100 men were rejected because they were below army standards and an equal number for skin diseases. Various deformities accounted for 90 rejections, and 80 men rejected had mal-formed feet.

Medical examinations of the second group of men called for training now are in progress. These are due at the training centres on November 22.

Skimpy Reports Of Raids Keep Nazis Guessing

LONDON, Nov. 14 — (CP).—Britain has definite and sound reasons for making reports of damage by German air raids vague, Home Security Minister Herbert Morrison and Sir Archibald Sinclair, Secretary of State for Air, said in a joint statement. The idea is to keep the enemy guessing.

Newspapermen trying to send out a well-rounded picture of the raids may chafe at censorship which deletes names of towns—even if the Germans specify they raided those towns. But there's a reason for the censors' action.

For instance, when the raid is in daylight in clear weather on a place which the enemy cannot fail to recognize it can be mentioned. At night, however, or in poor weather or even in clear daylight, but at a point far from the German base, the enemy frequently does not know where he has been. If the British authorities told him, the information would be a good test for his navigation methods and help in future.

Regarding mention of places referred to by the Germans, the Ministers said sometimes the German announcements are correct, but often they are wrong. Even when correct they may be no more than good guesses. The Nazis often mention places to try out a system of getting confirmation and denials from the British.

Similarly particulars of damage are kept vague because otherwise it would tell the Germans too much about the success or failure of their various bombs and bombing methods.

Mention of a raid on London is permitted because the Germans can hardly fail to know they are over the metropolis, even at night, but they often make big mistakes about where they are in other parts of the country. Generally, these raids elsewhere are classified according to district—the Midlands, Southwest, Merseyside for example.

Publication of a daily casualty total also comes under the ban. Taken with other facts in the enemy's posession, this might tell a good deal about the amount of damage done or the targets hit.

In general, the government takes the view that the enemy knows less about the result of his raids than he would like. The thing is like a jig-saw puzzle—all sorts of little scraps when fitted into place completed the picture. And German intelligence officers daily build up jig-saw puzzles from all sources of information, including British communiques and newspaper accounts.

Memorial Cross

The widow or mother of every Canadian killed in the war is entitled to a memorial cross like the ABOVE. If he was killed while serving with the Canadian forces, she will receive it automatically, but if he was with the British forces and was a resident of Canada on Sept. 10, 1939, she should apply to Ottawa.

Millbrook Bride Honored At Shower

MILLBROOK, Nov. 14—(ENS).—An enjoyable event of Friday evening was the miscellaneous shower in honor of Miss Helen Dorothy McDowell, a bride-to-be, whose marriage to Eric McKinstry of Peterborough takes place in St. Andrew's Church, Millbrook, on Saturday, November 16, Mrs. A. L. Sisco and her daughters Misses Barbara of Peterborough, Della Mae of Toronto, and Dorothy, being hostesses at the parsonage for the occasion.

The sister of the bride-to-be, Miss Madeline McDowell of Peterborough, and an intimate friend, Miss Bryar Edmunds, also of the neighboring city, were associated with the hostesses in arranging details of the happy gathering, which was attended by more than twenty guests.

The highlight of the evening was the presentation of the shower, Barbara Sisco and Madeline McDowell bringing in the large basket, tastefully trimmed in pink and white, and filled to overflowing with the gifts, and placing it before the chair of the popular bride-to-be.

That it was a surprise, and a pleasant one, was quite evident, the guest of honor voicing her thanks briefly but sincerely, and proceeding then with the task of opening the nicely-tied parcels and reading the messages of goodwill and esteem on the enclosed cards. Fine china, crystal, linens, silk hose, lingerie, and many other articles, both useful and beautiful, were included in the miscellaneous shower, the array of gifts, when the basket had been emptied of its contents, presenting a most attractive appearance.

Games, contests, and the service of dainty refreshments were other features completing an evening that will long remain a pleasant memory. Mrs. M. McDowell, mother of the bride-to-be, poured tea at a table lovely with lace cloth, pink folwers on the central reflector, and tall pink candles burning in silver holders, the young folk of the parsonage and their associate hostesses looking after the service of the guests.

Among those who attended the party, besides Miss Dorothy, who for some years past has held a responsible position in the office of the Johnson Motors, Peterborough, were: Mrs. William Edworthy, Misses Betty O'Brian, Winnifred Lord, Bryar Edmunds, Barbara Sisco, Madeline McDowell, and Margaret Dean, Peterborough; Miss Ruth Ball of Whitby, Mrs. J. Powell, Mrs. Armstrong, Miss Della Mae Sisco of Toronto, Misses Muriel and Thelma Ball, Mary Nattress, Jean and May Burnham, Mrs. M. McDowell, Miss Marjorie McDowell of Orono, Misses Beatrice McDowell, and Dorothy Sisco.

British Airmen Slowing Hun Aerial Attacks

OTTAWA, Nov. 14—(CP).—British fighter defences have noticeably slowed up the German aerial offensive on Great Britain, according to Air Commodore G. V. Walsh, recently air officer commanding Royal Canadian Air Force headquarters in Great Britain.

"They are certainly not getting the results they were because they now are getting some real snappy opposition," he said in an interview today. "The Germans now are using fighters as bombers. The fighters can't carry much of a bomb load. The idea is to come in quickly and get away fast. Their value is primarily as a nuisance."

Accompanied by Wing Cmdr. Wilbur Van Vliet of Winnipeg, formerly officer commanding No. 110 army co-operation squadron overseas, and Sqdn. Ldr. C. C. T. Graham, on the staff of Canadian Air Force headquarters overseas, Air Commodore Walsh answered questions from a group of newspaper reporters at Air Force headquarters here.

All three officers have returned to Canada to take posts in which their overseas experience will be of value in developing Canada's air program. They have not yet been assigned to positions.

71 Planes Chalked Up

The Canadian fighter squadron taking part in the defence of Britain has a fine record in stopping the German attacks. Wing Cmdr. Van Vliet said at the last report he heard before leaving England the Canadian squadron was credited with the destruction of 71½ enemy aircraft.

By half a plane is meant a case where half the credit is officially alloted to the Canadian squadron and half to another squadron.

The major developments in fighting aircraft since the start of the war were the steady introduction of heavier armoring and heavier armament. Both sides were putting more armor on their planes and as more armor was put on heavier guns were required to penetrate it.

British fighter aircraft were more manoeuvrable than the German fighters. The Germans did not like facing British fighters and for this reason small numbers of British fighters were able to disperse and defeat much superior numbers of enemy bombers and fighters.

From seeing confidential reports and comparing them with figures of air casualties officially announced Air Commodore Walsh said he was certain newspaper accounts of German aircraft shot down over Great Britain and British losses on continental raids were accurate.

"How do you account for the fact that German losses in bombing Britain have been heavy and British losses in bombing Germany have been comparatively light?" he was asked.

"I think the British fighter defences have a lot to do with it," Walsh said. "Most of the enemy planes shot down have been brought down by fighters."

Kawartha Film To Be Shown Next Tuesday

The initiative of the city council in trying to direct American tourists into the Peterborough section of the Kawarthas is reflected in the announcement of the first public showing of the technicolor film entitled "The Call of the Kawarthas" photographed and prepared for screeing by Alderman Fred L. Roy.

The council delayed this event until the sessions of the county council, and the pictures will be the feature of a dinner at the Empress Hotel next Tuesday evening, November 19. The county representatives will be the guests of the city, and invitations have also been sent out to the owners of summer resorts in the immediate area of Peterborough.

It should be explained that the filming of "The Call of the Kawarthas" was really conceived and authorized by the Peterborough Tourist Bureau and is paid for out of its funds, and also that the Bureau engaged Mr. Roy to do the camera and studio work. At the same time the city council has supported the Bureau and contributed a generous grant for its general program of tourist publicity.

There is a patriotic element actuating this publicity enterprise undertaken by the Bureau in renewed effort to attract United States tourists to come to Canada and Ontario and especially to this section of the Kawarthas. It is stimulated by the adverse propaganda circulated across the border last summer, that kept many thousands of American dollars at home instead of being spent in the ideal playground and fishing areas of this district.

American money spent in Canada by tourists can be an important factor in the exchange equation that will permit this country to buy the necessaries of war in the United States. That is one motive which prompted this film of the Kawarthas, and another is obviously to attract American visitors to Peterborough city and county, and that includes all the lake and water resorts around Rice Lake and along the Trent to to Hastings and Healey Falls, Havelock. Lakefield, Apsley, Burleigh Falls, Buckhorn. Chemong Lake and other places in this county.

The future uses of this splendid film is an entirely separate matter. Its showing here next Tuesday evening at the Empress will give merchants, manufacturers, sportsmen and citizens generally an opportunity of seeing for themselves what the city council is endeavoring to do in the face of the nation's war problem. Tickets for the dinner are only seventy-five cents, and it is hoped that a big crowd will turn out for this premiere of "The Call of the Kawarthas."

Representatives of both the Dominion and Ontario tourist bureaus have been invited. They will be shown something which they have recently advocated, films of our lake country and its attractions for publicity purposes in American cities.

Something has already been said about the Roy pictures as seen at a private filming for members of the council, and it is desired that local citizens and others from the county will see for themselves how the city council is planning to take the Kawarthas to United States cities through the medium of technicolor movies.

The city council did its share of advertising this year to expand tourist traffic into the Peterborough Kawarthas, but malicious propaganda in the United States is acknowledged to have had a decidedly deterrent effect on the number of Americans who were expected to come north last summer. The new movies are intended to be an additional, an ancillary form of what might be called counter-propaganda, depending upon the opportunities and the extent to which it can be carried out. At any rate the Peterborough film is now ready and it will be shown here next week for the purpose of informing the public of what the council has had in mind as a means of doing a job that should help to make this country's summmer attractions better known here and there across the border.

No Extra Pay

London, Nov. 14 (CP)

EVEN in prison, the war effort is being pressed. In one big jail prisoners are making sandbags, camouflage nets, gasmask cases, shipping cases, cartridge boxes and other articles. One prisoner just released said the inmates were anxious to do their bit and were willing to work overtime "even without the inducement of extra food."

Spirit Of Nelson Taken Wings Says N.Y. Times

NEW YORK, Nov. 14. — Summing up the British aerial exploit against the Italian fleet at Taranto with the words, "The spirit of Nelson and Drake has taken wings," The New York Times, in an editorial to-day declares that the crippling of the Fascist warships will liberate British seapower for action in other fields.

Under the caption, "The British Navy Strikes," the editorial reads:

The crippling of Italy's battle fleet at Taranto is a blow that will be heard around the world. Like the destruction of the French fleet at Oran, it liberates British seapower for action in other fields. Mr Churchill said yesterday that it would decisively alter the balance of naval power in the Mediterranean and affect the naval situation "in every quarter of the globe." Perhaps the British will now be able to detach one or two battle cruisers from the Mediterranean to hunt German raiders in the Atlantic. Perhaps (for the British are far sighted in naval matters) they will be still more daring and station two or three battleships at Singapore, where the next great naval threat to the Empire may come. If Italian battleship strength really has been reduced to only three, as the British claim, there is no longer the same reason as before for leaving the Far East undefended.

Credit to Admiral.

In a tactical sense alone the Taranto affair reflects shining credit upon Admiral Cunningham, the British Commander in the Mediterranean. He had been trying for five months, without success, to lure the Italian warships from their harbors He knew that bombs would have little chance of hitting and crippling such heavily-armored giants as the new 35,000-ton battleships of Mussolini's navy. He apparently decided to use "torpedo-planes" which dive close to the water and send torpedoes streaking to their target as acurately as from a submarine. His cunning and courage have been amply rewarded. The diving planes seem to have met no resistance except from anti-aircraft guns aboard the anchored Italian ships. It is another proof of the fact, first demonstrated in this naval war in the battle with the Graf Spee, that success goes to the commander who accepts risks and engages the enemy.

It must be galling to Mussolini to see his proudest battleships disabled, his crack regiments decimated in Greece, his troops in Egypt and the Sudan checked, his supply ships and transports sunk at his very doorstep in the Strait of Otranto. From one end of Italy to the other his naval bases and factories are now exposed to British bombers, some of them operating from the newly won bases off Greece. As he looks back upon his miscalculation of last June, as he feels Germany elbowing him aside and sees the walls of England standing, he may already see the folly of having plunged his long-suffering people into this war. As for the British themselves, their successes against Italy will come as sunshine in the long winter night. The spirit of Nelson and Drake has taken wings. It cannot fail to bring new confidence to the British people of their ultimate triumph over tyranny.

Tax Levies Cut $4 Per Capita In 148 Towns

TORONTO, Nov. 14—Five years of steady financial progress, particularly in the improvement of tax arrears and the reduction of debenture debt, are reflected in a survey of Ontario's 148 towns made public last night by Hon. Eric Cross, Minister of Municipal Affairs and Public Welfare.

The survey includes preliminary statistics compiled for publication in the department's annual bulletin. Seven of the municipalities in the town category are in the separated class and ninety-four are located in counties and forty-seven in districts. They range in population from Ojibway, with fewer than 100, to Timmins, with more than 25,000.

During the five-year period, 1934-39, the group of towns showed an increase in population of 14,747, from 475,369 to 489,116, although assessments declined from $303,149,880 to $280,869,602, a decrease of $76 per capita. Tax levies were reduced from $15,259,000 to $13,698,868, representing a per capita drop of $4.09.

Marked improvement in realizing upon tax arrears is also shown. In 1934 the towns had $8,981,782, or $18.89 per capita in arrears, while five years later arrears amounted to only $5,223,762, or $10.68 per capita.

The most substantial improvement, however, is shown in reduction of debenture debt. The debt of Ontario towns stood at $58,553,978, or $123.18 per capita five years ago. By the end of 1939 it had been whittled down to $40,173,536, or approximately 50 per cent on the per capita basis.

Floating Bridge Buffeted By Gale

On a business trip into Harvey township Tuesday afternoon Frank J. Hickey motored across the Chemong floating bridge while a tremendous wind was undulating it so severely that a car was almost lost from sight in the hollows.

In many places water was rolling across the flooring a foot deep, Mr. Hickey said today, recalling his snail's pace in low gear out where the gale was heaving the wooden structure and threatening to blow it apart.

The big timbers groaned under the strain of wind and waves, but Mr. Hickey said his only concern was about the possibility of some of the railing being wrenched off and thrown across his path. On his return trip he had a new appreciation of the strength of the bridge, but he took the road route around the head of the lake.

$5 For Anthem

Kitchener, Ont., Nov. 14 (CP)

CITY COUNCIL decided last night that it would not refund $5 paid as rent on a city-owned home by Lambro Gakeff, recently convicted of being a member of the outlawed Jehovah's Witnesses sect, and of instructing his children not to participate in patriotic exercises at school.

"Stand them up and let them sing 'God Save the King' and we'll give them the money," Ald. George Gordon said.

A letter received by council from Gakeff's daughter said that Gakeff had lost his position at a packing plant and would like to have refunded the money paid on a house here.

Americans Guns Of All Sorts Sent Britons

LONDON, Nov. 14 (AP)—Guns once used to bag buffaloes on the American plains were among weapons put into the hands of Britons today for defense of their home in the event of a German invasion.

Rifles, pistols and other guns of all kinds and shapes, each with at least twenty rounds of ammunition, are being received here from United States citizens as a gift of the American Committee for the Defense of British Homes.

The first shipment was distributed among Home Guard while an air-raid alarm was on. More are on the way, it was announced. One person alone sent 100 rifles and 50,000 rounds of ammunition.

One entire crate was packed with old-style buffalo guns. Another held rifles of an 1873 make, each in perfect firing condition.

Dr. A. P. Krueger of the University of California sent a business-like German-made Mauser automatic.

The first revolver from the first case opened and attached to it a yellow slip signed, "Edward Gray, 1621 T Street, N.W., Washington." His message said:

"Good friend, for heaven's sake forbear
To let the Germans come too near.
Blest be the man whose aim is straight,
But woe to him who draws too late."

The revolver was issued to an old Tommy of the last war, who said emphatically: "I know how to shoot quick and straight."

One foreign Embassy official in Washington said his gun was "only a loan" and requested that it be returned at the end of the war. It was not disclosed what nation he represented.

Mrs. Helen Parkins Gauntlett, executive secretary of Americans in British Outposts, said Mrs. Kermit Roosevelt gave one of the rifles, the property of her husband, who is now fighting with British forces in the Near East.

WON 2 FIRST PRIZES WITH HER BAKING

At the Canadian National Exhibition, Toronto

Mrs. William McClure, Brampton, Ont.

Mrs. William McClure carried off top honours for Tea Biscuits and for Fruit and Nut Loaf. She also won a prize for her Coffee Ring and was one of the four women who carried off the first four places in the white bread contest, using Robin Hood Flour. All four awards were made this year at the 1940 Canadian National Exhibition, Toronto. Like many other prize-winners—including those who won 1st, 2nd and 3rd prizes for white bread at this same exhibition — Mrs. McClure always uses Robin Hood Flour.

From her lovely farm home near Brampton, Ontario, Mrs. McClure has kindly sent her prize recipe for Fruit and Nut Loaf. "There is one thing to remember, ladies," says Mrs. McClure, "be sure to use Robin Hood Flour when you make this loaf. I have given this recipe to women who used other flours and they wondered why their loaf did not turn out like mine. I won 13 out of 17 entries last year, at various fairs and everything was baked with Robin Hood Flour. We are never without it at home and I wouldn't dream of baking to win a prize unless I had Robin Hood!"

It takes both skill and good flour to get best results in baking. Many women have the skill but do not have really good flour until they try Robin Hood. If your bread and other baking doesn't satisfy you—in spite of skill and care—the remedy is simple. Bake with Robin Hood Flour—It's guaranteed to give you absolute satisfaction or your money back with an extra 10%.

Mrs. McClure's Prize Recipe for Fruit and Nut Loaf:

- 1¾ cups Robin Hood Flour
- 3½ teaspoons Baking Powder
- ½ teaspoon Salt
- ⅓ cup Granulated Sugar
- ¾ cup Walnuts
- 1 Egg
- ½ cup Grated Orange Rind and Juice
- ½ cup Cold Water
- 1 cup Mixed Fruit
- 3 tablespoons Butter or Shortening, melted

1. Sift and measure flour.
2. Add baking powder, salt and sugar.
3. Beat egg until light and add to it shortening, water and orange juice.
4. Add fruit and nuts.
5. Make a well in dry ingredients and add the wet mixture.
6. Turn into a well-greased tin and bake in moderate oven 350°F. about 40 to 50 minutes.

10 Arrests Made In Truck Strike

TORONTO, Nov. 14.—(CP)—Ten men will appear in Toronto courts today to answer vagrancy charges as a result of their alleged part in activities arising out of the current strike of employees of two transport companies.

Toronto police arrested Jesse Gibbons, Stanley Waylett, John Carney, John Deadey and Wilfred O'Keefe, all of Toronto, last night after they allegedly stopped truck drivers Harry Brown and Leo Sittler on a city street and attempted to persuade them to abandon a large transport truck and go to union headquarters to sign up with the teamsters' union.

Companies involved in the labor trouble are the Martin and Direct-Winters transport companies.

DOROTHY DIX

Likes and Dislikes are Important In Marriage. Too Much Disparity Will Be the Cause of Unhappiness and It Is Better to Go Separate Ways Before Marrying.

Dear Miss Dix—I am engaged to be married to a girl and, while she is a splendid person and I love her very much, there are many points about which we disagree. We are always fighting about these and parting, and then making up again. While that doesn't seem to make much difference now, it would not be so good after we were married, and it makes me wonder if we shouldn't call it all off now and see if we can't find somebody else we could get along with better. Here are some of the things we disagree about: I enjoy swimming very much. She hates it. She likes dancing. I don't. I like automobiling. It bores her. She enjoys being alone. I love people and can't stand being alone. She is very shy. I am not. I have definite plans for the future with which she doesn't agree. As you see, our arguments arise from lack of co-operation. What about it?

NORMAND.

ANSWER—Well, of course, if you wait to find a girl who is an absolute rubber stamp of yourself and who has just exactly the same ideas and tastes and point of view that you have, you are slated to be an old bachelor. There isn't any such animal. The poet's dream of two souls with but a single thought, two hearts that beat as one is all hooey.

No Understanding Women

Especially can no man and woman ever be exactly alike in thoughts and desires. The difference in sex precludes that.

There is a man's world and a woman's world into which the other can never enter. No man ever understands why a woman acts as she does, nor does any woman ever comprehend why a man does the way he does.

No man knows why a woman cries when she is glad; why her idea of a perfect day is tramping the stores and looking at things she will never be able to buy; why she expresses her love by nagging; why putting on a new dress can change her whole attitude toward life, and so on and so forth.

Nor can a woman understand why a man will work himself to death to give his wife luxuries, but won't give her the supreme happiness of telling her that he loves her; why he goes sloppy when he is enjoying himself; why he will say: "It is a heavenly day. Let's go out and kill something"; why he will do a thousand things she doesn't want him to do and balk at doing a million things she wants him to do.

So there you are, and unless you can make up your mind that you care more for your girl than you do for your pet ways, don't get married. Because your desires and hers will clash at every turn and there will be storms aplenty.

And you know that when a husband and wife differ in their tastes they nearly always compromise by the husband doing what the wife wants to do.

Congeniality Is Important

Still and all, it is very important that a husband and wife should be congenial and I doubt extremely that any married couple are ever happy who do not have the same politics and religion and like the same kind of pie. The people we love and enjoy being with are those who yes-yes us, not those with whom we have to argue every point.

In your particular case you might give up your swimming and the girl might give up her dancing without too much sacrifice. But when it comes to your liking people and wanting to be with them and her wanting to be alone and not being a mixer, it is a different matter. That is fundamental in your characters and it will take a lot of love to bridge that gulf between you.

Don't Give Up Your Friendships

Dear Dorothy Dix — I am a widow past 50 and have a friend a few years older. Each of us have three children, all married. My friend and I have gone out together a great deal for several years, as we have the same interests and all of our friends have taken it for granted that we would marry. I would be glad to marry him, but he tells me that he does not ever expect to marry again. This puts me in a rather embarrassing position with my friends and I don't know whether to give him up or not in order to stop their speculating on the subject. If I did, I would be terribly lonely, as I would miss his companionship very much, and have nobody to take me out. What would you advise? TROUBLED READER.

ANSWER—Don't think of breaking off your friendship with this nice man just because your neighbors speculate about whether it is going to end in matrimony or not. Just laugh and tell them that you think that being a widow is such a nice, comfortable, peaceful estate that you haven't any notion of changing it.

When one's children are married, as yours are, they are so busy with their own affairs they haven't very much time for mother and you would have many lonely hours, except for the companionship of your friend. Don't throw away this pleasure just because of a little natural and not unkindly gossip.

And, anyway, how do you know how your little affair is going to end? Friendship often warms up into love and many a man who swore he would never marry again does so.

There Are Other Boys in the World

Dear Miss Dix—I am in love and dreadfully unhappy. I met a boy at a dance and knew at once that he was the only one for me. For three evenings he monopolized my time completely, but since then he seems to have forgotten me entirely and I have never heard from him. In desperation I ran after him shamefully and tried to find out all about his family and friends, which made him angry. What can I do to make him love me? If you can't suggest something, I shall take the only way out and kill myself. At least he might come to my funeral.

HEARTBROKEN.

ANSWER—It seems to me that it is a waste of powder for a pretty young girl to kill herself for one man when there are so many other attractive lads all about. Anyway, don't commit suicide until you have given the once-over to a few of the others and see if you can't find one who looks as good to you as your charmer. Like cures like, you know, as the homeopaths say, and certainly there is no such effective remedy for healing a broken heart as a new love affair.

Alas, I fear I can tell you no way in which to make a man love you who doesn't love. Love is a miracle that every woman must work for herself. Somehow, someway, she must make herself desirable in a man's eyes and how she does this neither he nor she knows.

If you don't hit a man's fancy, you don't, and that's all there is to it. And it is a waste of time and effort to try to win him. Just call it a day and look about for somebody else.

DOROTHY DIX.

We Noticed . . .

. . . .That this year, without the benefit of such a time-worn reminder as "do your Christmas shopping early," hosts of people are already busy purchasing their gifts, greeting cards and gay tinsel wrappings.

. . . .Perhaps the fact that large numbers of parcels are being made ready, or have been prepared for relatives and men on service overseas, has prompted this pre-season buying. Whatever the cause, it is gratifying to the clerks who look forward to the holiday season with slight misgiving, to contemplate a little less of that nerve-racking bustle.

. . . .Packages containing special "treats" for the soldiers, men in the naval division, and R.C.A.F. serving in distant parts, are pouring into the local post office, and gifts for relatives and friends in Britain are being mailed this week—which is said to be the dead-line if delivery by Christmas is to be assured.

. . . .Do remember that careful packing of the articles is essential for safe delivery. In many cases improperly protected bottles of fruit or other perishable foods spoil not only the contents of the package but other articles in the shipment as well.

WOMEN'S WORK AND INTERESTS

Preparations for Christmas Commence In Kitchen

(By MARY MOORE).

The first breath of suspicion about the genuineness of Santa Claus touched Marianne yesterday (and she is nearly eight).

Peter heard her coaxing me for reassurance that he was real and said, "Marianne, certainly there's a Santa Claus—who'd look after the poor German children if he didn't?"

Santa Claus and Our Heavenly Father are very closely associated in Peter's mind and it would be useless to tell them the legend because they believe in spiritual values so strongly.

However—for you and me Christmas starts (and stops!) in the kitchen.

Have you tried making Almond Paste yet? If not it is a good trick and nicer than the store variety and cheaper and you can use it for two or three different Christmas goodies that keep remarkably well.

Emem's Almond Paste.

Note: Add the orange flower water and almond essence when putting almonds through grinder as they facilitate grinding.

One pound blanched almonds, 1 teaspoon orange flower water, 1 teaspoon almond essence, 2 pounds icing sugar, 2 eggs. Put almonds through grinder with flavorings, using finest cutter. Mix sugar in well. Add well beaten eggs, and knead the mixture with the hands until it is perfectly blended. To keep almond paste roll it into balls or oblongs and wrap very well in heavy waxed paper, then in cloth, then keep in air-tight tin container.

To prepare Almond Paste for top of Christmas cake cut off a piece and roll out to size of top of cake. Brush cake with white of egg to make paste stick and press almond paste firmly down.

Genuine Almond Macaroons.

Gradually work the unbeaten whites of three eggs into ½ pound of almond paste (see recipe above), using the hands. In the same way work in 2 cups of powdered sugar until the mixture is free of lumps. Drop by small teaspoons two inches apart onto greased cookie sheets. Bake in moderate to slow oven—325 deg. Fahr.—until light brown. Do not bake too long or they will become brittle when cool.

These keep very well in air-tight box.

Simple Delicious Mincemeat (Meatless)

Four pounds apples (if you can get them Bishop Pippins are recommended by the reader who sent me this recipe), 1 lb. finely ground suet, 4 lbs. brown sugar, 1 pound choice seedless or seeded raisins, 1 teaspoon each cinnamon and nutmeg, ½ teaspoon cloves. Grind apples and suet and mix with remaining ingredients—cook over very low heat stirring often, until mixture darkens. Use an asbestos mat under pot as it burns readily. Store in crock—the fat comes to top and forms a fine seal—it will keep well and improve with age.

Perfection Mincemeat (Using Meat)

Two and one-half pounds chopped lean beef, 1 cup suit finely chopped, 5 quarts chopped apples, 1 quart cider and 2 quarts water, ½ cup lemon juice, 1 quart of additional juice—cherry, grape, diluted jelly, peach or any mixture of these or others; 2 lbs. raisins (or 1 pound raisins and 1 lb. currants), 3 lbs. brown sugar, 1 teaspoon each cinnamon, nutmeg, mace, allspice, ½ teaspoon cloves. Cook very slowly over very low heat 3 hours, stirring. Seal. Makes at least 6 quarts.

Mincemeat Cookies.

One cup shortening (or half shortening and half butter), 1½ cups sugar, 2 well-beaten eggs, 3½ cups flour, 1 teaspoon baking soda, ½ teaspoon salt, 1 teaspoon cinnamon, ½ teaspoon cloves, 2 cups rich mincemeat, 1 cup walnuts. Cream the shortening and gradually cream the sugar into it, then add the well-beaten eggs. Sift all the dry ingredients together, then sift them into the creamed mixture. To this then add the mincemeat and walnuts. Drop by teaspoonfuls 2 inches apart on greased cookie sheet and bake at 375 deg. Fahr. until golden.

Those who take their Christmas cookie-making quite seriously want Lebkuchen—these little cookies are jewels and if you have never made them now is your chance to have a rare treat.

Lebkuchen.

Boil together until it forms a syrup 1 pound honey and 2 lbs. brown sugar—about 10 minutes slowly. While still warm add 2 lbs. brown sugar, 6 eggs (1 at a time) and stir one-half hour. Add ½ lb. blanched almonds, ¼ lb. each chopped citron, lemon peel and orange peel, 4 teaspoons cinnamon, 4 tablespoons baking powder—enough flour to make a stiff dough. Let stand overnight. Roll out, cut and place almond on top of each cookie and bake. They are usually cut in oblongs 3 inches long and 1 inch wide. These cookies are hard at first, but soften and flavor improves after being kept two weeks in airtight box. (This recipe comes from an old German lady residing in the States).

The following recipe for Plum Pudding is not sensational—I think it is a good recipe—not too rich for children nor too simple for the taste of experienced Christmas diners—it improves with age and re-heats and slices without crumbling.

Plum Pudding.

One cup flour, 1 teaspoon each salt and cinnamon, ¼ teaspoon allspice, ½ pounds each raisins, suet, currants, ¼ lb. each citron and candied lemon peel, 1 cup brown sugar, 6 eggs, 4 cups stale fine bread crumbs, ½ teaspoon each nutmeg and cloves. Sift the flour, salt and spices. Chop or grind the suit very finely, add the fruits and peels (the former washed and dried) well dredged with flour. The peels should be very finely sliced. Soak the crumbs in 2 cups milk, and add the sugar and well beaten eggs to them. Combine with the first mixture. Turn into well buttered mould and cover and steam 5 hours. Keep cool and covered.

Note: Watch next week for recipes for new white and dark Christmas cakes.

FOR CASUAL CHARM

By ALICE ALDEN

THE CASUAL slack suit has become a major fashion and is the favorite about-the-house costume of many, many women. Easy to wear, when worn by the woman with the right figure, a slacks ensemble is also a "must" in the holiday wardrobe, no matter the season.

Ida Lupino, who is all for slacks, has them in all sorts of moods, styles, colors and fabrics for both indoor and outdoor wear. Here she wears casual slacks in a giant check in red and green in fine flannel. The flattering blouse is of white jersey. The high, rounded neckline and long sleeves are new for this type of shirt. A pirate sash of red jersey completes the colorful costume.

FASHIONS

In this eventful year when patriotism means more than anything, we suggest this timely Christmas gift for your little girl. The pattern includes three costumes for her doll. . . . A cunning sailor dress, a full-fledged aviatrix outfit complete with hood, and a trim Red Cross uniform. You'll enjoy making them as much as your daughter will love playing with them. They make a "different" present, as educational as it is charming. Send for the pattern now, and have plenty of time to prepare for Christmas morning.

Style No. 3495 is designed for 14, 16, 18 and 20-inch dolls. For fabric requirements, see pattern.

Keep cantaloupes covered with refrigerator bags, in aluminum foil or waxed paper in the refrigerator. If uncovered their odor penetrates all other foods.

Do not rub very dirty towels, collars and neckbands over the washboard by hand. Spread them on the board, lather well and scrub with a small stiff brush. It will do the work better and save wear on the fingers and the material.

To renovate a fur coat that is beginning to look worn, hang it over the bathtub, close all windows and door, turn on the hot water to produce steam, and let it remain for about twenty minutes. Then shake the coat thoroughly and hang on the line to dry.

Home and School Association News

KING EDWARD SCHOOL

An instructive talk on the correct way of speech, with helpful suggestions on how to create in the child a more effective speech, was given at the King Edward Home and School Association meeting. An excellent report on the Leader's meeting was given by Mrs. O. Laderach, and Mrs. E. Chambers, president, told of the regional conference held in Lindsay. A membership meeting report was presented by Mrs. Chapman.

Musical numbers included two violin solos by Jack Harris, with Mrs. Wallace at the piano, "There'll Always be an England" and "There's a Gold Mine in the Sky." Two duets were sung by Miss Betty and Miss Mabel Coombes, with Mrs. S. Coombes at the piano. The meeting closed with the association's theme song, "Carry On," and the National Anthem. Refreshments were served after the meeting.

TRAIN RAINED OUT

stands out. If you mentioned my name he'd be thinking about me, wondering what I was like, waking up nights in a sweat imagining I wasn't—treating you right—" He broke off, and Lona saw his fists slowly unclench, and the tense look that had gathered in the back of his eyes as he spoke begin to relax.

"I know," he said, simply, looking down at her again. "I told you, didn't I, that I had a pal who—died there."

Lona nodded. For a moment he was silent. His shoulders slumped, and his head bent, he stared straight ahead, and Lona, watching him, felt an urge to comfort him.

"Perhaps he's better off, your friend," she said slowly, trying to keep her own pain out of her voice.

He turned to her, then, with swift contrition. "Forgive me," he said, and gave her hand a reassuring pressure as it lay under his elbow. "I didn't think about—you. I know you don't want to talk about that sort of thing. I'm sorry I disturbed your good time. . . . But you see why you mustn't mention me to your father, don't you?" he pursued, with a knitted brow.

"I see," she told him. "And I won't mention you," she promised, wondering at his persistence.

The next day was Sunday. To Lona, waking lazily to the sound of her landlady's high-pitched voice calling her to the telephone, there came no premonition that it was a day to be remembered in the months to come.

"Hello, sleepyhead!" came in Jim's drawl when she picked up the phone. "Dont you know its nearly noon?"

"Really!" Lona looked through the hall window, surprised. The noonday sun was beating down on the rickety porch next door, which was all the view afforded in the way of scenery. Funny how she could sleep, now that she didn't have to worry . . . "I had a heavy date last night," she told him with a teasing laugh.

"With whom?" he shot back at her.

"You'd be surprised," she bantered.

He laughed at that. "Say, listen, girl," he said, "it's a grand day for a picnic. I know where we can get a car. What do you say to a run into the country? There's a lake around here somewhere, isn't there? And I'll bet you have a bathing suit—"

"Wichita lake!" Lona interrupted him. "It's a forty-mile drive. Could we—go that far?" She was suddenly elated. Bridgewater was only an hour's drive from Wichita. She had vacationed there often in the old days. A wave of homesickness came over her. It would be heavenly seeing the old lake again.

"It's not too fashionable, is it?" he asked, a little anxiously. "I like my lakes wild."

"There's only campers there," Lona assured him, her voice dancing. "You'll love it."

Ten minutes later he was honking at her door. Running downstairs, her brown curls flying, Lona's laugh bubbled over at sight of him. The car he had borrowed was a jaunty, not-too-new roadster, decorated with a screaming paint job in bright green. Behind its wheel he looked big and awkward, and the grin he turned on her reminded her, somehow, of the way her father used to smile when he sat down on the floor with her to play with her toys.

"We've gone collegiate,' he informed her, with a sweep of his lean brown hand toward the four-wheeled splendor in which he sat. "Hope you dont mind. I borrowed her from a college boy who's vacationing on the job with us. He swears she's a lady, even if she does look a little—er—loud."

The Stars Say

By GENEVIEVE KEMBLE

For Friday, November 15

AN INTERESTING and eventful day, in which tact, stratagem, intrigue, and confidential proceedings may result in surprising denouement. These are likely to culminate in the public eye, with the endorsement and signs of preferment from those in power and authority. Innovation, originality, romance and adventure have their influential place in contributing to a happy, progressive and probably thrilling state of affairs, in which creative ability, high ideals and spiritual faculties seek crystallized expression.

If It Is Your Birthday

Those whose birthday it is may find themselves confronted by a year in which peculiar experiences or extraordinary contacts may make life thrilling, romantic, adventurous and even spectacular. There are subtle and intriguing forces at work, calling for finesse and subtlety in order to put over programs in which the ideals, aspirations, intuitions seek expression. This may be in the form of art, music, poetry, drama, possibly politics, adventure or romance in which the finer creative urges demand expression.

A child born on this day may have an unusual and intriguing character, the heights and depths of which may prove unfathomable. It should be strongly intuitive, aspirational, idealistic.

Admits Conspiracy

BUFFALO, N.Y., Nov. 14 (AP)—Alexander de Pasquale, 29, Niagara Falls, N.Y., pleaded guilty Wednesday to a charge of conspiracy to violate the United States immigration law by importing girls for immoral purposes. He is to be sentenced Monday. He was the last of 13 defendants indicted more than a year ago on similar charges.

Learn to Write Letters That Raise Your Rating

Are Friends Ashamed of Yours?

What a let-down when you receive a crude, dull letter from a friend. You wouldn't show it for worlds. Then the thought comes—do others feel that way about YOUR letters?

And you are apt to be at your worst in letters when you haven't learned the art of letter writing. Even a note seems such a task! Desperately you write, "There isn't much to say. Everything is all right. How have you been?"

Yet the secret of good letters is simple. If you can talk, you can write. Sitting across the table from Jack or Joan, you'd sparkle about the lively game you saw last week or the antics of Woggle, the pup. Just put those things in your letters and they'll reflect your true, charming self.

By knowing little tricks of writing, you easily avoid stiffness. Instead of starting all sentences with "I," turn some around: "Guess what I won at the bridge party?"

Then there are special letters—such as invitations, notes of sympathy, letters of application.

You can shine in these, too, by following the sample letters given in our 32-page booklet. Tells English errors to avoid; gives pointers on stationery, letter etiquette. Helps you write easily, interestingly.

Send 15c in coins or stamps for your copy of GOOD LETTER-WRITING MADE EASY to Examiner, Home Service, Peterborough. Be sure to write plainly your NAME, ADDRESS, and the NAME of booklet.

BARCLAY ON BRIDGE

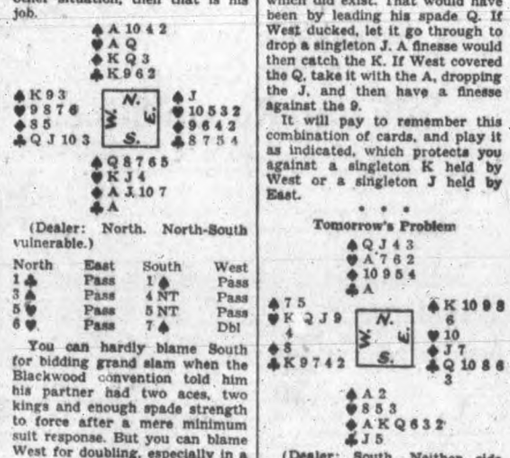
WRITTEN FOR THE EXAMINER

By SHEPARD BARCLAY

"The Authority on Authorities"

GUARD ALL YOU CAN

A SOUND player will always guard himself against as many possible different distributions of the missing cards as he can. If he can protect himself against every possible lineup, it is his job to do that. If there is only one arrangement of the missing cards which can pull him through he should play for that one. If there is some way to guard against that and one other situation, then that is his job.



(Dealer: North. North-South vulnerable.)

North	East	South	West
1 ♣	Pass	1 ♠	Pass
3 ♠	Pass	4 NT	Pass
5 ♥	Pass	5 NT	Pass
6 ♥	Pass	7 ♠	Dbl

You can hardly blame South for bidding grand slam when the Blackwood convention told him his partner had two aces, two kings and enough spade strength to force after a mere minimum suit response. But you can blame West for doubling, especially in a rubber game, even though his king seemed to be well located. Telling the opponents about it might result in their winning a finesse for the contract if the ace happened to be in North's hand, whereas otherwise the declarer might go wrong.

South went wrong anyway, so West went unpunished. The club Q was led to the A, and South made the mistake of deciding his contract was definitely down unless he could drop a singleton king. So he led a small one to the A, and was set. He had a way to protect himself against both a singleton king and the holding which did exist. That would have been by leading his spade Q. If West ducked, let it go through to drop a singleton J. A finesse would then catch the K. If West covered the Q, take it with the A, dropping the J, and then have a finesse against the 9.

It will pay to remember this combination of cards, and play it as indicated, which protects you against a singleton K held by West or a singleton J held by East.

Tomorrow's Problem

(Dealer: South. Neither side vulnerable.)

If West bids hearts and East spades along the way, how should South play this hand for 6-Diamonds against a lead of the heart K?

COVENTRY IS LAID WASTE

German Raider is Now Known to Have Sunk Only Four Of Convoy Of 38

STOKERS REALLY WENT TO WORK WHEN COMMODORE OF CONVOY ISSUED ORDERS TO ALTER COURSE AND DISPERSE THUS GIVING MANY BOATS CHANCE TO ESCAPE

LONDON, Nov. 15—(CP Cable).—The captain of one merchantman in the convoy which a German raider attacked when the ships were steaming eastward in the Atlantic reported today he scored two hits on the sea rover.

Unofficial sources said there had been no word of the raider — generally believed to have been a pocket battleship, since she bore down on the convoy on the evening of November 5 and was held at bay by H.M.S. Jervis Bay, lightly-armed merchant cruiser which went down in flames, flag flying and guns blazing to the last.

Meanwhile sources who heard reports from several captains credited their swift reaction to orders to alter course and disperse after the raider had been identified as an enemy with helping the bulk of the convoy escape.

The Admiralty in a communique today announced that four of the convoy's 38 ships are known to have been sunk by the raider. A fifth was sunk by a German bombing attack three days later; a sixth is still unaccounted for, and 32 are safe.

Captains of the merchantmen said the raider was first sighted about 6 p.m. between seven and 10 miles from the port beam. When her hostile nature was seen the commodore of the convoy, Rear-Admiral H. B. Maltby, signalled his ships to alter their course to the starboard.

All Night Raid Runs Up Toll Of 1,000

Worst Bombing Of War Fires, Razes Much Of Dye City

COVENTRY, England, Nov. 15 — (CP).—Coventry was a scene of devastation today after Nazi bombers from dusk to dawn had dumped their destructive loads in ceaseless relays.

A full moon shone, but its brilliance was dimmed by a pall of smoke and the glare of fire from burning buildings.

Today there were at least 1,000 dead and injured; victims were buried under vast piles of wreckage, fires licked through the town, and the 14th century cathedral, with its 303-foot spire, was but one of many buildings in ruins.

Scarcely a street escaped the pounding of the raiders. It was the worst continuous attack experienced by any city—including London—since the siege of Britain began.

No Letup in Attack

All night long, the narrow streets where Lady Godiva rode on her horse nearly 1,000 years ago trembled and crumbled with the thunder of diving planes, the scream of bombs and their explosions and the roar of anti-aircraft fire.

Searchlights stabbed through the shroud of smoke. Rifles and machine guns crackled as the city's defenders tried to shoot scores of flares out of the sky.

At least two hospitals were hit. There were casualties in one; in another, all glass was blown from the operating theatre.

Store after store was damaged, but authorities said that supplies were not affected materially and that there would be no food shortage.

The aeronautical expert of the Press Association said the Germans "failed lamentably" to hit military targets.

Midlands Bear Brunt.

Germany's raiders, shifting the focus of their attacks away from London, concentrated a fierce assault on the industrial Midlands during the night and the Government expressed fear today their bombs had taken a heavy toll of lives.

Shops and hospitals were damaged in several Midlands towns, a communique said, killing and wounding some people.

Two hospitals were struck by

Fires Set In Berlin Harbors Bombed, 10 Planes Are Lost

LONDON, Nov. 15—(CP).—British planes rained bombs around Berlin railways stations last night and started fires, the Air Ministry announced today.

A communique said that 10 British planes were lost in the raids, which also included attacks on 26 airdrome and on harbors and shipping in ports from Stavanger, Norway, to Lorient, German submarine base on the French coast.

Bright moonlight favored a "heavy attack" on Berlin, the Air Ministry said.

"High explosive bombs fell on and around Schleisischer station and its goods yards," the communique said. "Railway yards at the Putlitz-Strasse and Lehrter stations, at Anhalter station in the centre of the city and at Tempelhoif airdrome were attacked and fires started."

LUDINGTON, Mich., Nov. 15 — (AP). — The hulk of the Canadian freighaer Anna C. Minch, which sank in Lake Michigan with 33 men during Monday's storm, was found to-day submerged in 40 feet of water a mile and a half south of the pier at Pentwater.

The vessel is lying 400 feet offshore and only the tips of the masts are above water.

It was discovered by Clyde Cross, who went out in his fishing tug Three Brothers. It was the Three Brothers, piloted by Cross, which rescued 17 men from the foundered

Iron Guards Revolt In Rumania

Dissatisfaction Rife Over Shortage Of Soft Positions

BUDAPEST, Nov. 15 (AP)—The Hungarian press displayed today under large headlines reports of a revolt in the Rumanian Iron Guard in which one person was said to have been killed and seven injured in Bucharest.

The reports, filtering through strict Rumanian censorship, followed publication of an announcement from Bucharest that three high ranking members of the Iron Guard had been expelled.

The revolt was said to have been directed against the Iron Guard leader, Horia Sima.

The revolt, the press reports said, grew partly out of a severe economic crisis in Rumania, failure of many Iron Guardists to get government posts and the entrance of German army units into the country despite the stern nationalistic precepts of the founder, the late Corneliu Codreanu.

Dissatisfied factions reportedly attempted the putsch at Guardist headquarters Tuesday night, claiming that Sima, who also is vice premier, must be ousted because he had departed from Guardist principles to become Premier Ion Antonescu's "servant."

An armed group, accompanied by Ion Codreanu, aged father of the executed founder, appeared at the Iron Guard's "green house" headquarters, the reports said, but only Codreanu was admitted.

Shots were fired, the reports continued, killing one policeman and critically wounding another, after which the putsch group retreated with its own casualties.

Mass Expulsions were said to have followed and tension was reported still high in the Rumanian capital.

Gibraltar Threat?

New Move Seen In Suner's Paris Visit

BERNE, Switzerland, Nov. 15—(AP). — Spanish Foreign Minister Ramon Serrano Suner's trip to Paris was interpreted here today as raising anew the possibility of an Axis drive against Gibraltar, British guardian of the Mediterranean's western entrance.

(Serrano Suner left Madrid unexpectedly last night for Paris, accompanied by Baron de las Torres, chief of protocol, and military aides. There was no explanation as to the purpose of his trip.

(The only comment in the Spanish press which threw any light on the situation was that in the newspaper A.B.C., which repeated a recurring phrase: That the Axis intends to "clean out" the Mediterranean).

Speculation on a possible Axis attack on Gibraltar, with Spain participating actively or permitting Axis troops to cross Spanish soil, has been heard repeatedly since the fall of France, most recently after Hitler's conference with General Franco.

Less than two weeks ago, Spain seized full control of Tangier, strategic international zone in Morocco which commands the approach to the Strait of Gibraltar from the Atlantic. Spanish troops had occupied the zone June 14, but it was not until November 4 that the last vestiges of international control were wiped out.

Serrano Suner's trip to the German-occupied former capital of France turned observers' eyes not only toward Gibraltar but toward France's African Empire, which was considered by many informed sources to be the real hitch in Franco-German collaboration negotiations.

Spain's desire to extend her colonial empire at France's expense is no secret and it was reported in diplimatic quarters here that Gen. Charles De Gaulle's free French seizure of Libreville — only a few miles from Spain's little Rio Muni colony—and Gen. Maxime Weygand's activity in French North Africa, bounding Spanish Morocco, had much to do with the Spanish Foreign Minister's trip.

Bombers Fly Over

Los Angeles, Nov. 15 (AP).

THE British have been flying Lockheed Hudson bombers from Canada to England for several weeks with "very fortunate results."

So says Air Commodore G. C. Pirie, attached to the British Embassy in Washington.

In an interview, he also announced that four American aviation schools — in Glendale, Cal., Tulsa, Okla., Dallas, Tex., and Chicago — will be given contracts under a plan to train volunteers for service with Canadian and British Royal Air Forces.

Greeks Wipe Out 2 Divisions Amid Mountains

ATHENS, Nov. 15 — (AP). — Destruction of two Italian divisions presumably totalling about 30,000 men, was announced by the Athens radio to-day and advices from the Albanian frontier credited Greece's armed forces with continued sweeping successes in all sectors.

Previous reports mentioned the destruction of only one division, but the ralio said a second was destroyed while seeking to aid the first.

The Greek army has taken the initiative along the entire 100-mile battlefront from the Ionian Sea to the Yugoslav border and is driving the Italians back everywhere, the radio declared.

In the coastal region the Greeks drove the invaders back to the Albanian border, forcing a retreat reported to be assuming the proportions of a rout.

The radio credited the Greeks with taking "thousands" of prisoners after having "beaten and dispersed" an Italian force which outnumbered them three to one.

The fighting in which the two Italian divisions were wiped out took place in the mountains, near the centre of th battlefront.

The Greeks were reported fighting on Albanian soil in this sector as well as on the northern flank, where they previously captured the mountain positions dominating the Albanian town of Koritza, important Italian invasion base.

May Let Huns Through For Attack Upon Gibraltar

MADRID, Nov. 15—(AP). — The Spanish Government barred the entire American press from operating in Spain, effective Monday.

(The Berlin radio announced that Ramon Serrano Suner, Spanish Foreign Minister, is on his way to Germany. It had earlier been reported he was going to Paris).

All American correspondents, including those of The Association Press, United Press, New York Times and Chicago Tribune, were informed that from Monday on they would be prohibited from sending out dispatches.

The reason given was that the United States Government had refused entrance visas for correspondents of the Spanish Agency E.F.E. and that E.F.E. had been refused permission to set up an office in the United States.

It had been proposed to send as E.F.E. correspondent to the United States, Jose Antonio Jiminez Arnau, brother of the Director General of the Spanish Government Press Bureau, Enrique Jiminez Arnau.

No further details were given. There was no indication that United States correspondents would be obliged to leave the country.

INFORMED sources disclosed today that Field Marshal Keitel, as chief of the German high command and Hitler's deputy in military matters, is meeting Italian Marshal Badoglio today in Innsbruck for general staff consultations.

Both men were accompanied by their staffs, it was said.

Dog Meat Old Fare For Huns

New Law Legalizing It Again Recalls Famine Fare Of 1917-18

NEW YORK, Nov. 15. —(AP).—News that dogmeat has been legalized for human consumption in greater Germany recalls stories of famine in the Reich of the First Great War.

Dog meat then was scarce. Horse meat served to-day in some restaurants, sold then for 86 cents a pound.

In April, 1917, a Dresdent restaurant scored a coup by purchasing an elephant from a travelling circus to provide choice steaks and cutlets.

The last American woman to return from Germany after the United States entered the First Great War asserted that in Leipzig she found the piece de resistance on local menus was elephant meat, the heel being considered the greatest delicacy. The lions and tigers already had disappeared from the local zoo.

Sausage, standard of the German table, was made from horse, donkey, mule, fish, goat and rabbit meat and from kohlrabi, a cabbage-like plant which was colored pink and spiced.

In May, 1917, an agricultural expert at Uassau, Bavaria, advised Germans to "follow the example of Nebuchanezzar and eat grass." Other scientists proudly announced that certain layers of "edible earth" had been located in the lower valley of the Vistula.

A returning American traveller said people were eating crows, which sold for 40 cents each. Sparrows sold for eight cents. A sea food famine raised the price of canned eel to $2.50.

Germany countered a starvation blockade with substitutes or "ersatz" products as people stood in long lines to receive their one egg a month. Gypsum and chalk were used to adulterate flour and baking soda. Carpenters glue was reportedly used in the manufacture of pudding powder.

Germans Let Lorraine Farmers Take No More

VICHY, France, Nov. 15—(AP).—French - German "collaboration" reached a critical stage today following a strong French protest to the German armistice commission over the expulsion of residents of the Nazi-occupied province of Lorraine.

Although no one officially declared dead the "collaboration for the peace of new Europe," the policy of Vice-Premier Laval developed in talks last month with Hitler received its first public check.

The Vichy Cabinet announced plans to meet today and tomorrow.

Bombs Ruin Godiva's Town

Scenes of Famed 'Flowing Tresses' Ride, 1043 Cathedral Gone

COVENTRY, England, Nov. 15 — (CP).—Coventry, with its toll of 1,000 and shattered home, factories and roads, has been a city of pageantry since Lady Godiva rode through its streets.

Its cathedral, feared destroyed now, was built in the 14th century and has been considered one of the finest examples of the perpendicular style of architecture in England. The steeple rose 303 feet and with the steeples of Holy Trinity and Christ Church has formed a striking group that has caused Coventry to be called "The City of Three Spires."

The 15th century glass in two of the five large windows of the cathedral apse was removed at the start of the war.

Some of its ancient fortifications and half-timbered houses remain, but the city's many industries, among them motor manufacture, weaving, dyeing, watch-making and metal works, have robbed it of much picturesqueness.

It owes its existence to a Benedictine monastery established by Earl Leofric and his wife, Lady Godiva, in 1043. The town's lover for parade and pageantry has been manifested up to recent years in a triennial processional show in honor of Godiva, who unwittingly tempted "Peeping Tom of Coventry" by riding, clad only in her flowing tresses, through the streets on a horse in order to persuade the Earl to remit noxious taxes.

The Godivas of latter-day processions have worn bathing suits, and there have been rousing controversies over even this degree of attire.

Two familiar expressions, "True as Coventry blue," and "To send to Coventry," come from the town. The first grew out of Coventry's reputation for dyeing. The second is believed to have arisen during the 17th century civil war, when the citizens of Birmingham sent groups of King's men to imprisonment at Coventry.

New Gardiner Pact With Britain To Boost Cheese, Bacon

OTTAWA, Nov. 15 (CP)—Canadian fish and farm products other than wheat have prospect of a sure market worth $105,000,000 in the United Kingdom next year, according to the report brought by Agriculture Minister Gardiner from a mission to Great Britain.

In addition, the minister told the House of Commons yesterday, there is a likelihood the wheat surplus will be whittled down to 100,000,000 bushels or less in the next five years, while poultry, eggs and butter will go to the United Kingdom through the usual channels, although no fixed agreements have been reached for those products.

Mr. Gardiner said tentative agreement had been reached on bacon and pork products, canned fish and frozen cod, processed fruits and honey, cheese and condensed milk, calling for larger exports than have gone to the United Kingdom this year or last, except in the case of canned apples.

Lauds British Spirit

The minister's speech featured yesterday's debate on the address in reply to the speech from the throne. He brought applause from the house when he praised the spirit of the British and said the civilian population was standing up to the enemy "like well-trained troops."

Canadians need have no apprehension of the ultimate victory of British arms, Mr. Gardiner said. Britain would take the offensive in 1942, but it would be "criminal" to attempt an offensive until the utmost degree of preparedness had been reached.

Other speakers in the day's debate were Gordon Graydon (Con. Peel), P. E. Wright (CCF Melfort), Dr. F. W. Gershaw (Lib. Medicine

GEORGE ALBERT REVOY

George Albert Revoy, of Havelock, passed away in St. Joseph's Hospital on Thursday. He had been ill for two weeks, and was in his 71st year.

Born in Marmora, he was the son of the late Mitchell Revoy and Almina Tompkins. His wife, the former Winnifred Norton, predeceased him six years ago. He was a farmer, and had lived in the Havelock-Marmora district all of his life.

V.O.N. Branch Seeks Members

Supporting membership in the Victorian Order of Nurses, a branch of which is progressing in organization, will be one dollar a year, the provisional committee decided this week.

A membership drive will endeavor to enlist a large number of members, not simply for the fees that will be collected, but also to obtain the fullest measure of support from the citizens in whose interests public health is being promoted.

Charles H. Elliott has been asked to take charge of the publicity that will begin in the near future. Alderman Dutton presided at the executive meeting on Wednesday night. It was decided to ask for the engagement of Miss Ross of the V.O.N. at Cornwall at the first of the New Year. She is reported to have done splendid work there.

Another proposal was to the effect that if Miss Helen Anderson is not able to resume work in January a second nurse be engaged.

A constitution and by-laws are being recommended to the new association. A meeting will be held on Thursday, November 21, at 7.30 p.m., in the City Council Chamber.

The Stars Say

By GENEVIEVE KEMBLE

For Saturday, November 16

THIS DAY MAY bring forth opportunities and fair prospects for success and unusual progress despite an element of the unusual, mystifying and unforeseen. This may be accompanied by sudden change, removal, fresh fields and strange contacts, but properly manipulated there may be unlooked for benefits.

If It Is Your Birthday

Those whose birthday it is are on the eve of a year of surprises and strange adventures both in business and private life. There may be sudden upheavals, possibly in connection with fresh opportunities for advancement and progress, albeit devastating and unpredictable.

A child born on this day although possibly being high strung, erratic and prone to "kick over the apple cart," yet should have talents and dependable qualities for making for success.

Support For Defence

WASHINGTON, Nov. 15 — (AP)—The Catholic hierarchy has pledged support to United States' defence efforts, at the same time calling attention to the appeal of Pope Pius XII. for universal peace prayers on November 24. The day of prayer was cited at a meeting of the archbishops and bishops yesterday as "a day of universal prayer for the war-afflicted of all nations and for the establishment of just peace and the reign of charity uniting all men in brotherly love."

the choice of going to Poland or France.

A Vichy spokesman added that from the northern part of the province, where about one-third are French-speaking, one-third German-speaking and the remainder Poles, Italians and other foreigners, about 98 per cent. of those asked to leave chose to come to France.

Lorraine farmers affected by the expulsion order began pouring into the Lyon area. The government promised them they would be well cared for and given work.

No departing Lorraine resident was permitted to take more than 2,000 francs and a suitcase of personal belongings.

The government's protest of the Lorraine expulsion marked the first time since the beginning of the "collaboration" negotiations that the Vichy government publicly has criticized a German action.

(Neutral sources at Berne, Switzerland, interpreted France's protest as a reply to German expressions of discontent with the spread of the Free French movement of Gen. Charles de Gaulle in the Gulf of Guinea and the situation in North Africa.

(They said the Vichy government was determined to show that complaints were not one-sided).

cation that Pierre Laval, Vichy vice-premier, has over-stepped himself in his apparent efforts to take France into Germany's camp, while on another front as the Balkan war neared the end of its third week all doubt that the Italians had suffered a severe beating were gone. Greek troops still were on the offensive, advancing into Albania which Italy seized last year from former King Zog's administration. Friends of democracy feared only that the Greeks would advance too fast and place themselves in a position where an Italian counter-offensive—if it could be organized—would nip off their spearhead.

However, for the moment, it appeared as though the Italians might eventually be caught at their invasion ports in much the same manner as the British overseas force was caught in the Dunkirk pocket, but with far less chance of getting out.

An escape across the Ionian Sea would be more difficult for the Italians than was the British evacuation through Dunkirk for two reasons: First, the distance is greater, second the Italians appear not to have citizens whose valor equals that of the Britishers who ferried their countrymen home from France.

The first hint of French stiffening appeared yesterday when the Vichy government lodged a vigorous protest with the German Armistice Commission against ousting of French citizens from the province of Lorraine. The protest was accompanied by a statement from Vichy that the Germans were lying in telling the Lorrainers that their ousting was provided for in agreement with the French government.

The Gibraltar suggestion was seen in the fact that Spain's foreign minister, Ramon Serrano Suner, brother-in-law of Dictator Franco, has gone to Paris to consult with German leaders who appear to have established a headquarters staff in the former French capital.

The suggestion was supported by the now obvious fact that the Italians have been dealt a whacking by the Greeks and their British helpers and that they are urgently in need of direct aid or a diversion of some kind.

For a long time it has been assumed that the "rock" would be assaulted eventually by the Axis in an effort to gain control of the entrance to the Mediterranean. It has also been suggested that Spain — non-belligerent Axis partner — was the logical agent to conduct the attack, because it is the former possessor of the fortress.

Spain, however, probably will have to be frightened into any military effort at the moment, because the country is still staggering under the consequences of the civil war started by Franco's friends.

"Efforts are being made to salvage the battleship of the Littorio class which was previously seen to have her forecastle under water and a heavy list to starboard.

"Auxiliary and salvage vessels are lying alongside on both sides of the ship and nets have been laid all round for her protection. Pumping is in progress. The bows of the ship have been raised and she now has a list to port.

"The reconnaissance has confirmed that two battleships of the Cavour class are aground. One of these is beached and an auxiliary vessel is lying alongside her. Nets have been laid all round for the protection of the ship.

"The second Cavour class battleship appears to have been abandoned. She is lying heeled over to starboard with only the forward part of her upper works above water.

"The pilot of one of the reconnaissance craft has reported that four shapes can be seen under water at the entrance to the graving dock in the inner harbor."

How To Overcome Piles And Rectal Soreness

If you are annoyed with itching piles or rectal soreness, do not neglect the same or run the risk of an operation. Any itching, soreness or painful passage of stool, is nature's warning and proper treatment should be secured at once. For this purpose get from McDermid & Jury and Bond's Drug Stores or any druggist, a package of Hemroid and use as directed. This formula, which is used internally, quickly relieves the itching and soreness and aids in healing the sore, tender spots. Hemroid is highly recommended, is easy to use and it seems the height of folly for anyone to risk an operation when a simple remedy, which is so pleasant to use may be had at such a reasonable cost. —(Advt.)

Diplomats in Berne expected Serrano Suner to talk with Vice Premier Laval about the state of France's colonial Empire—whether the Vichy government felt North Africa sufficiently under its control and what the Germans thought about it. convoy without hitting a single ship.

Before the Nazi could fire again H.M.S. Jervis Bay went out to meet him.

The commodore then ordered the convoy to scatter and carry on at best speed. That was when the stokers really went to work, aided by every available man. One master who got his normally nine-knot ship to a speed of 12½ knots, said: "I never saw coal shovelled so fast in my life."

Bombs Ruin

Coventry, with a population of 190,000, is one of England's most important industrial cities and is located about 75 miles north-west of London.

It has been one of the Germans' most regular targets in bombing raids on England.

"There will be many stories of heroism to be told when it is possible to collect them," an official report of the Coventry raid stated.

At least 40 planes came over in regular waves from dusk to dawn, it was said, and casualties included members of the Civil Defence Corps and the Fire and Police Services.

Places damaged included the operating room of a hospital, but the hospital was said to be still in use to-day as a clearing station for the injured.

An isolation hospital also was hit and casualties were caused there.

Two churches, public baths, a school, hotel, four public shelters, moving picture theatres, the police station, post office, and two first-aid posts were damaged.

The homeless were being taken to feeding centres.

Canadian freighter Novadoc, on Wednesday morning.

Cross was able to remove a steel pennant from the mast of the submerged steamship.

A further search was planned today for the hulk of the William B. Davock which is believed to have gone down in the same vicinity with 24 men.

Sixteen bodies have drifted ashore.

Four of the bodies that washed up at Pentwater and one here were claimed by Capt. Scott Misener, the president and general manager of the Sarnia Steamships, Ltd. of Sarnia, Ont., owners of the Minch. The body of a youth, identified only as a crew member of the Minch, was sent to Toronto for possible further identification.

There were two fatalities among the crew of the Novadoc, pulpwood carrier owned by the Paterson Steamship Lines of Fort William, Ont. They were Joseph Deshaw, steward, of Toronto, and his assistant, Philip Flavin, Halifax.

Channel Duel

LONDON, Nov. 15.—(CP)—German long-range guns pounded Britain's southeast coast for two hours this morning, drawing a heavy counter-bombardment from British coastal batteries before they finally lapsed into silence.

The Nazi guns opened up just before daybreak as the mists were lifting from the English Channel, shaking the earth in the Dover area with heavy shells.

Last Minute News

BERLIN— (AP). — Heads of the German and Italian high commands met to-day at Innsbruck and parted without giving any hint of the subject of their conversation other than the German news agency's statement that they had "military discussions about the joint conduct of the war."

VICHY, France—(AP). — Vice-Premier Laval was reported to be en route to Paris today at attempt to stave off a definite break with Germany. Relations have reached a critical stage as a result of the expulsion of more than 100,000 French-speaking residents of Nazi-occupied Alsace-Lorraine and dispatches from Paris said German authorities had added to the friction by cutting off passes to travellers from the occupied to the unoccupied zones.

'Am Closing Up' Jervis Bay's Last Message

AN EAST CANADIAN PORT, Nov. 15—(CP). — How the armed merchant cruiser Jervis Bay made a suicide stand against a powerful armed enemy raider was told and retold there this week as 65 survivors of the battle rested here after the ordeal.

"It was a magnificent fight all the way through," recounted Leading Stoker George Beaman of Halifax (a survivor who drifted on a life raft for nine hours before he was rescued by the Swedish merchantman, the Stureholm, a member of the convoy.

The last wireless message by Captain Forgarty Fegan of the Jervis Bay was a fitting epitaph for a British naval man. "Am closing up closer to the enemy," he radioed the convoy.

In 15 minutes his brave ship was helpless and in something more than 70 minutes she had to be abandoned, "an inferno, fore and aft."

One arm shot away, Captain Fegan went down with his ship.

The master of the Stureholm, stocky Captain Sven Olander, "didn't have the heart" to leave the men of the Jervis Bay in the water, and although safely on his way back to Canada due to the action of the armed merchantman, he turned about to pick them up.

"By jove," said one of the rescued ratings, "that Swede was a God-send!"

It is now known that at least 30 of the 38 ships in the convoy are safe. But for the action of the Jervis Bay, many would never have docked with supplies for Britain again.

Eire May Take Some Evacuees

LONDON, Nov. 15. — (CP). — Negotiations that may lead to the evacuation of tens of thousands of women and children from bombed British areas to Eire are proceeding between J. W. Dulanty, Eire High Commissioner in London, and Lord Cranborne, Dominions Secretary.

Prime Minister de Valera is understood to have initiated the discussions after the torpedoing of the liner City of Benares in which 81 children being evacuated to Canada were drowned.

When Mr. de Valera learned of the tragedy he called a meeting of his ministers to consider what Eire could do to help the evacuation of British children and their mothers. His suggestion for consultation between the two Governments was welcomed in London as "a great gesture" and the British Government is anxious to take the fullest possible advantage of Eire's offer of hospitality.

"No decision has yet been reached on matters of detail, but it is probable that any scheme will have to be confined to women and children with relatives or friends in Eire who are willing to take them in," an official in close touch with the negotiations said.

"The British Government is considering the question of providing free travel vouchers for evacuees unable to pay their own fares, and it is even possible that arrangements will be made to pay billeting allowances.

"It is certain, however, that no evacuees will be sent to Eire unless it is known that they have homes to go to there."

Hunt Out Bomber Base.

One objective was a German bomber base concealed in the woods near Vannes-Meucon in Brittany, France, where, the Air Ministry news service said, repeated hits were made by planes of the coastal command. Many fires were started.

The first bomb dropped on St. Leger Airdrome, north-east of Amiens, duing a dive attack hit a hangar and caused explosions. A Messerschmitt fighter was sent spinning into a wood by a Hudson gunner, the news service added.

One aircraft dropped a stick of bombs which appeared to hit an ammunition dump at Stavanger Airdrome, in Norway, the bulletin said, but "very difficult weather" interfered with the raid.

A subsequent announcement said: "Later reports of last night's attack on Berlin show that in addition to the targets already mentioned the Stettiner station and railway yards and the power stations at Wilmersdorf and Charlottenburg were heavily bombed."

"Seven fires were started at Taranto—one of which was followed by violent explosions," said the Air Ministry. "Another explosion lit up Taranto 15 minutes after our bombers departed. Naval tanks and destroyer quays in the inner harbor were also attacked and four large fires started. Pilots reported on their return that the whole dockyard had been plastered with bombs and that the fires were visible over 50 miles away."

Rome Hints Poison

ROME, Nov. 15—(AP)—Italian newspapers insinuated today that Egyptian Premier Hassan Sabry Pasha, who collapsed and died at the opening session of Parliament yesterday, was poisoned by a British agent for refusing to lead Egypt into war against Italy.

Il Tevere, under the headline, "Another English political crime," published a dispatch dated from Beirut, Lebanon, saying:

"It is not excluded that the hand of the intelligence service may have struck treacherously at the chief of the Egyptian Government who has succeeded up to now in opposing the British desire to have Egypt enter the wa ragainst Italy. Poisoning is more or less openly mentioned."

108 Known Dead In Storm Across States

NEW YORK, Nov. 15—(AP)—Icy blasts again swept the northern sections of the United States today, with temperatures ranging from freezing to below zero, but relief was in sight.

The weather bureau forecast rising temperatures in the plains states by tonight or tomorrow.

Meanwhile, the number of known dead in the storm ravaged areas reached 108, not including 51 missing sailors.

Eighteen sailors were known to have perished in Lake Michigan during the week's storms. Hopes of finding the missing crewmen alive were virtually abandoned.

Crews of boats that rode out the gale termed the storm the worst in their experience. The oil tanker New Haven Sooeny reached East Chicago, Ind., yesterday covered with ice and extensively damaged.

Capt. Robert W. Parsons of the lake freighter Thomas F. Cole brought his ship into Milwaukee yesterday after being swept "almost from one end of Lake Michigan to the other." Parsons, a veteran of 30 years on the Great Lakes, said the storm surpassed any in his memory.

Lake Erie fishermen feared that this season would be their poorest in 16 years because of extensive storm damage to nets.

Williston, N.D., with a reading of 17 below zero, was the coldest spot on the United States weather map yesterday.

Salad Making Lecture Delights WI Members

CAMPBELLFORD, Nov. 15 (ENS)—Members of Rylstone Women's Institute were given a lecture in salad making at their meeting held this month at the home of Mrs. Thomas Fry. The lecture and demonstration on this particular subject was the result of the short course held earlier in the Fall in Marmora to which the branch had sent at their representatives Mrs. Hector Arnold and Mrs. Ernest Irwin. Following the customary plan of passing on to the entire branch all information received at these courses the two representatives were allowed most of the afternoon for their talk and demonstration which was absorbed with interest by other members of the Institute.

Two principal recipes given and demonstrated were for tomato star salad and jack straw salad, both of which were sampled by the ladies at the conclusion of the talk.

During the business portion of the meeting it was announced that next month the institute would devote its topic to historical research with the history of Rylstone forming the theme. Mrs. Thomas Fry was appointed to prepare a talk on the subject and just so that everyone would come prepared to enter into the discussion each lady was warned to came ready to contribute at least ten words on "a noted pioneer" which will be the roll call. In charge of the program will be Mrs. Roger Lain, Mrs. William Rutherford and Mrs. Donald Kerr.

CONVICT'S DAUGHTER

By RUTH RAY KANE

READ THIS FIRST:

Disheartened because she can find no work, Lona Ackerman, whose father is serving a life sentence for murder, finds some consolation after telling her troubles to Jim Claridge, an acquaintance she has decided to trust. Aside from Claridge, she is alone in the world, jobless and broke. Jim gives Lona a lead for another job and she applies at the office of the Western Realties company. Lona likes her new work, sees more and more of Jim evenings. On Sunday they decide to go to a nearby lake for a picnic.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY

CHAPTER ELEVEN

LONA LAUGHED as she climbed into the seat of the screaming green roadster Jim had borrowed for the picnic at Wichita lake. It was a ready laugh that was pure enjoyment. He looked so boyish, sitting at the wheel, his long legs stretched out, his voice half sheepish as he assured her the jaunty little car was really a lady despite its loud looks.

"I'm sure she is a lady," she told him solemnly. "Even ladies can be loud on a day like this. Isn't it gorgeous out?" She sniffed the air as if she had just been released from a long confinement. "Let's speed!" she cried, suddenly, "I want to go fast. I'd like to fly." She laughed again, as the roadster leaped forward under his willing hand.

It was a beautiful ride. The lake, when they reached it, was blue and calm. As they approached it they caught glimpses of it through the bordering pines, glittering in the sun like a huge gem cut into a million gleaming facets. Jim sent the car careening down almost to the water's edge with a final flourish of speed, and turned to Lona triumphantly, and an odd sense of coming home gripped her.

Stepping from the car, she stood for a moment looking up and down the beach searching for familiar landmarks. A stone's throw away she saw a shabby bathhouse, unpainted, and her eyes lighted up with recognition. Eagerly she followed the curve of the shore. Down there would be a cottage—Allen's, wasn't it? Yes, there it was! Above the pines a thin cloud of smoke hung motionless in the lazy sunshine and she wondered if, perhaps, someone she knew might be there.

She laughed, and reached into the car for her bathing suit. "Beat you in!" she challenged him, and ran down the sands to the bathhouse.

Her bathing suit was old. She had purchased it in a fit of extravagance the first year she had been at Ardmore's, hoping that some day she might swim again. It had lain in its wrappings in the bottom of her suitcase ever since and, as she donned it now, and stepped up to the bathhouse mirror, she was sure, for a moment, that it was too terribly out of style. Then, as she caught sight of her own slimness, green-sheathed, her skin white as milk, her spirits soared again, and like a child let out to play, she dashed out onto the beach.

Jim was not yet in sight, and she smiled to herself, absurdly pleased at beating him. For a moment she let her eyes wander over the few scattered bathers who lazed in the sun, but she recognized none of them and she felt relieved. It would be awkward to meet any of her old crowd.

She was sitting on the sand, letting streams of its gritty warmth run through her fingers, when Jim appeared. At sight of him loping down upon her, his tall figure showing hard and lean in his bathing suit, a queer shyness seized her.

"Race you to the float!" she cried, in an effort to hide it and, wading out, she plunged into the water.

She had loved to swim in the old days, and had come close to being the champion of her crowd. As she cut through the blue ripples, her white arms flashing above her head, she was suddenly glad that there was one thing, at least, she could do well. Behind her she heard Jim splashing to overtake her, and she quickened her stroke, finding her old ease more and more. When she finally climbed up on the bobbing float out in the middle of the lake, he was barely beside her, and she laughed at the look of admiration he bent on her.

"Whew!" he ejaculated. "You're sure a swimmer, girl. Where did you learn?"

"Right here," she told him, his praise warming her heart. "This lake is an old haunt of mine."

"I didn't think you could learn to swim like that in fresh water. Mean to tell me you've never been near the ocean?" He looked down at her, the water dripping from his wet hair, giving his lean face a curiously boyish look. Remembering suddenly the miles he had wandered from his home in far-off, almost mythical California, her brief moment of triumph vanished and she felt shy again.

They sat on the float for a long time, talking as they swayed to the gentle motion of he waves. Somehow the proximity of the water seemed to make him loquacious, and he told her fascinating tales of the many cities in which he had worked. Listening, Lona found herself wondering about him anew. Beyond the one mention of his sister that first night when he had been trying to re-assure her, he had never really told her anything about himself. He never talked, as she did, of his family, of his schooling, of his background. Until now she hadn't even connected him with the ocean.

"Tell me, what did you do before you started all this wandering?" she asked, idly, and was startled at the look that leaped into his eyes. I was as if she had hurt him, somehow.

"I guess I've always been a wanderer," he said, vaguely, and fell silent, staring out across the lake, all the brightness gone from his face. Dabbling her feet in the water, Lona watched him, troubled and wondering, wishing she could recall the words that had changed his mood.

They ate their lunch on a flat-topped rock to which Lona, proud of her knowledge of the place, led him. It was a queer lunch that set her laughing as she unpacked it. A man's choice. Thick sandwiches of hamburger from a corner stand, pickles in a paper carton, a whole pie, and a thermos bottle of steaming coffee. Lona giggled as she tried to fit her mouth over one of the huge sandwiches.

"I like 'em that way," Jim assured her, complacently. "A fellow can get a grip on these. Boy, there's been many a time when I'd have given my right eye for a hambur-

The Reason Is Well Known

Hon. R. B. Hanson asked a number of questions in the House of Commons, and they had to do with our participation in the war. He went into various categories and was intent upon finding out just what was being done. Whether all the answers should be given we do not know, and admittedly there is honest doubt as to the wisdom of making public all details regarding our war effort.

The first question on the list is this:

"Why have no rifles been made to date in Canada for use by our battalions? Why are our 30-day trainees only given old Ross rifles, many of which may not be fired?"

Our belief is that Mr. Hanson knows the answer to that question, and so will other people who have given the matter a fair amount of thought. It is common knowledge that for years we have not been making preparations for war. In our district the arsenal which the Conservatives erected at Lindsay, and the one which the Liberals afterward built in Quebec have not been used. The one at Lindsay was equipped for making small arms and ammunition, but for years on end it was idle and served as something like a glorified store house.

The reason is not difficult to find, and it is not necessary to bring politics into it at all because one party looked at the situation just about the same way as the other. The country was at peace; the world was pretty much the same way; the people in Britain had the same view. The affairs of nations were being dealt with at Geneva under the auspices of the League of Nations. The British were talking about a greater degree of disarmament, and they were actually putting their conviction into operation by reducing their armed strength. The succeeding governments of MacDonald, Baldwin and for a time that of Chamberlain were following the same policy, and that in turn would have a direct effect on the outlook of Canada.

It is also common knowledge that it was at times difficult to keep our existing military units up to strength. Young men could go in for military training if they desired; if they had no inclination that way then nothing was done about it. It was necessary in certain military districts to bring about combinations of various units in order to increase the strength of those remaining.

That had been going on for years. We know now that Britain was wrong, and we realize also that we were mistaken, but with few exceptions the people in Britain were thinking in the same direction and we were doing the same thing here. We were at peace and we were not going in for extensive manufacture of war material.

We can recall times when each vote for the construction of a new armoury brought forth protests and when an increase in the estimates for the Department of National Defence would have to be thoroughly explained and skilfully defended. We were at peace and we believed it was going to continue that way.

That is actually the reason why we have not today sufficient of everything for our soldiers and for the trainee. It is also well known that thousands of the troops doing duty of one kind or another in Britain today are armed with weapons made in United States. When the British expeditionary force fought its way to salvation and made that memorable exit at Dunkirk, it was necessary to leave a great deal of every sort of equipment behind, and that is where the U.S. equipment came in.

The late Hon. Norman Rogers stated the case clearly when he explained the enormity of the task facing his department, because almost overnight the task of equipping one man had been stepped up to the task of equipping ten men. When it comes to getting a factory under production for arms, munitions, etc., there is a stiff lot of preparatory work to be done. It takes draftsmen, blue prints, designers, tool makers, and all sorts of people working long hours and long weeks before a productive wheel can be turned. In many cases it would need an entirely new set of precision machinery, and it has to be done with the most definite exactitude because every bit of the work must pass inspection. There is no middle course; there is no such thing as it being "good enough"; it is either accepted or rejected.

We believe that is the fair way to consider this whole question. The plain fact that we were wrong in our outlook and that Britain was also wrong brought the present situation into existence, but thinking along that line does no bring the cure. It is being made right by tremendous activity such as this country has not before witnessed. If Mr. Hanson has suggestions to make which will make this activity more effective then the country will be glad to hear from him, but he must be quite well aware of the reason why we are not fully equipped with rifles today. For years we have been at peace.

Should Be Simplified

With the object behind the regulations requiring a special permit for the sale or loan of shot guns and rifles there can be no quarrel. Briefly it is to prevent these weapons from getting into undesirable hands and in so far as it accomplishes that end will have the endorsation of all good Canadians. Unfortunately, however, there is a feeling that it does not travel very far in that direction. Like the law requiring the registration of revolvers it is obeyed chiefly by the law-abiding citizen. The crook who wants a revolver for unlawful purposes naturally doesn't register his gun. Similarly an alien who possesses a firearm and has some ulterior motive in his mind simply ignores the regulations. The net result is that good citizens are caused a lot of inconvenience while unregistered weapons remain in the possession of law-breakers and undesirables.

The latest regulations concerning the loaning of weapons has been particularly inconvenient because of the machinery provided for enforcing it. The set-up is that the only person in each county with authority to issue the necessary licenses is the high county constable or the acting high county constable. In many counties that official is the senior provincial officer and his duties call him all over the county. The result is that he is often difficult to locate by the applicant for a license. Men have to travel from the extreme end of the county to secure permission to lend a rifle to a neighbor and when they do make the journey often find the acting high county constable absent on police work. If the regulation is to remain in force the system should be made more convenient. If police officers generally and the township clerks were given authority to issue licenses much of the difficulty would be removed. It is a change that the authorities might well consider making.

Mr. Conant Is Right

Attorney-General Conant is right when he insists upon a member of the St. Thomas Aircraft Training School being tried by a civil court on charges of drunken driving and failing to remain at the scene of an accident.

Mr. Conant has informed the Hamilton magistrate that the Crown does not agree with adjourning the civil trial of this aircraftman to permit the R.C.A.F. authorities to apply for a transfer of the case to a miliary court. The magistrate is asked to restore the case to the list and has been told that if he does not comply consideration will be given to mandamus proceedings to compel him to do so.

This man is charged with serious offenses and we are sure that the public will agree with the Attorney-General that he should be tried like every other citizen, in the courts rather than before a military tribunal. There is no objection to soldiers guilty of trifling misdemeanors being dealt with by the military authorities. The thing should stop there. If men in uniform commit indictable offences, the place to handle their cases is in the regularly established courts.

The very worst thing that could happen to law enforcement in this country would be for the impression to get abroad that soldiers are immune from prosecution by the civil authorities and that the only tribunal qualified to try them is a military one. That idea exists to some extent already and it would be unfortunate indeed if it were to gain strength, as it would if there were many more attempts like this Hamilton case to let the handling of serious charges slip out of the civil courts into military hands.

The Attorney-General's firm stand in the matter will help to throw the proper light upon this important question.

A Community Health Program

Progress is being made by the Peterborough Board of Health in amalgamating the various health services in this city and the more ground work that has had to be done and is being done the greater the necessity of having these services under the one head has become apparent.

Peterborough's health record is far from being an enviable one and when comparison is made with cities where a community health program is in effect the differences between the two become really noticeable. The infant death rate for Peterborough alone in 1939 was 54.70, while the whole Dominion according to the Dominion Bureau of Statistics the rate was 31 per 1,000 births. However, the figures although bad enough, in 1939 showed a far greater discrepency in 1935 when Peterborough's rate was 83.11 and Canada's was 35; in other words Peterborough since 1933 has only been below the 50 mark twice while the whole Dominion has only been above the 35 mark once. The same story but perhaps not to so great a degree can be told of the maternal deaths. In 1936 Peterborough had 11.57 while the rate in Canada was 5.6, and in 1939 we had a rate of 6.56 and the Canadian rate was 4.2 per 1,000 live births.

How can this be improved citizens are asking today and the Board of Health in its attempt to amalgamate the various health services believes that a move in the right direction is being made. Cities where the health services are amalgamated can report a much lower rate than Peterborough. Hamilton, a much larger city, and hence has a population where there is a greater diversity of peoples and classes reported an infant death rate of 33.6 in 1938 and a maternal rate of 3.5, while Peterborough had a rate of 49.78 and 6.27.

But along with this amalgamation move the attempt of the Board of Health and the Health Association to get organized in Peterborough a branch of the Victorian Order of Nurses is most commendable. For the Victorian Order of Nurses is an organization which brings the services of the trained nurse within the reach of all. Its aims and objects are to establish and maintain a visiting nursing service and to supply this service to all classes of people. The primary object of the service will be bedside nursing with teaching in the homes and it also aims to aid in the prevention of disease and the maintenance of health.

The branches have almost complete autonomy. Each district has its local board and all branches are instructed that they have a definite responsibility to the local health officer as the constituted authority in public health in the community. It is in places where this service is operated that the maternal death rate has practically disappeared and the infant rate has been tremendously reduced. Victorian Order of Nurses reported a maternal rate in places with branches in 1936 at 2.18 and in 1938 at 1.46 and the infant rate in 1926 at 22.1 and in 1939 at 13.8.

Peterborough citizens should welcome the day when the Board of Health completes its amalgamation of the health services and the Victorian Order of Nurses establishes a branch in this city.

A wool grower estimates that for every man called into military service ten sheep have to be shorn to clothe him. In that case a lot of sheep have had to have a haircut to take care of this 30-day training scheme.

GOOD PLAN

(By A.R.K.)

¶ My nieces and my nephews come, they say my raiment's rather glum, my ties and socks are drab; they tell me when I dress that way, there is small chance of feeling gay, I look alone and sad.

¶ They'd gladly take me to the store, then I'd look different than before, insist that I should go; they want to slick me up a bit, so where I go I'll make a hit, they claim they ought to know.

¶ My nieces and my nephews come, they think 'twill be a lot of fun, they'll pick out things for me; I guess they've read it in a book, but I imagine I will look, much like a Christmas tree.

¶ They pick out neckties that are bright, they twinkle like the stars at night, they're red and pink and green; just how they grew I do not know, around my neck they have to go, the like I've never seen.

¶ And then they pick out giddy socks, they can be seen for seven blocks, they point them out with glee; if I should get them on my feet, and start to stroll along the street, stray dogs would bark at me.

¶ I know the man down at the store, I've often been in there before, he's splendid I declare; he switches things so I won't fret, and when I leave I know I'll get—the things that I should wear.

Man In Street Has Saved Us Once Again

By Sir Hugh Walpole in the Christian Science Monitor

I BELIEVE that this war, short of our defeat, will save England. Save England from what? Selfishness, greed, snobbery, and above all, sloth.

We are a very odd people. We have altered very little from the days when the wife of Bath rode to Canterbury and Fluellen argued with Pistol and Bardolph before Agincourt. In that little altercation lie both our faults and our virtues.

We are a people strangely lacking in imagination and yet have provided the greatest series of poets. All the good, noble, grand things we have done for ourselves from Magna Charta, through the Grand Remonstrance to the Reform Bill have been effected without any planning beforehand. The Englishman in the street has quite suddenly decided that they are to be carried through and carried through they are.

So it has been with Dunkirk and the battle of London. The man in the street has saved us again. There is one of the great grounds of my optimism.

For I wasn't sure, during the last 10 years, whether our man in the street was still alive. But he is alive, flying when young the skies and working magnificently when older in the London fire brigade.

But everything I fancy, before these last six months brought England straight against the basic reality, was nearly lost.

All the heroes of our race have been men who, whether they believed a creed or no, are in touch with the virtues of endurance, fidelity and integrity.

During the last 20 years England was in danger of losing those virtues. Our post 1914 war writers most loudly praised by the critics have been defeatists, cynics to a man. With the exception of T. S. Eliot every modern poet of fate has scoffed at God. Our leading politicians have avoided every serious issue.

From Abyssinia to Czecho-Slovakia it has been a series of retreats. Every man and woman in Britain has been to Blame.

Our snobbery has been as rampant as ever and if we have been faintly ashamed of our old imperialism we have most of us paid little or no attention to the great problems of our Dominions.

Our slums have been a disgrace that we had scarcely begun to remedy. Why? We are not worse than the other peoples of the world. We have in us, at our abiding roots, magnificent qualities of sturdiness, patience and endurance, and a true love of honor and fair play.

But we were failing asleep. Now as it seems to me whatever trails are ahead of us (and they will be many), whatever blunders we commit (and they will be many) we are awakened.

We are awakened because this time it is a people's war. Slowly, slowly we are realizing that, realizing too that words, so long empty in our mouths, truly mean something.

We are terrible people to defeat, once we realize a few simple things. It has always been so through history. Freedom for the individual, justice for all men of all races, What platitudes they have been in our mouths.

But now by the grace of God, the most evil things in the heart of men—cruelty to the weak, lust for inflicting pain, tyranny over men's minds and acts, callousness as to love of wife for husband, parent for child, friend for friends, all those horrors have come so close to us that the fire from them has burned our mouths and seared our eyelids.

GLOOM FOR ALGOMA

WHAT'S THIS? Veteran hunter and guide in the Peterborough neighborhood tells of shooting a wolf "after the animal had pounced on him from behind and knocked him down." This throws wide open again discussion of Jim Curran's claim that a wolf will not attack a man; and there may be trepidation in the Sault Star office over that $100 offered to the individual who can prove he was attacked.

There are extenuating circumstances: The fantastic story that this hunter was carrying, strapped to his suspenders (behind), a deer's liver, dripping blood, may or may not be believed. There is no proof that hunters have this habit of inviting attack. Generally they return with the whole carcass or nothing at all. Anyway, the wolf got the liver and a couple of suspender buttons off the hunter's trousers—which would impede his movements in pursuit when the wolf began to run. So he shot it.

Points to be cleared up are: Did the wolf pounce on this man from behind and knock him down with felonious intent? Finding the liver—and buttons!—was the animal satisfied with that? Did the liver save the hunter from a mauling, thus weakening Old Sam Martin's claim that "any man that says he's been et by a wolf is a liar"?

Briefly: Is the wolf exonerated, or is the whole Algoma tribe, including its wandering members, again under suspicion? Wolf defenders, to the rescue!—Globe and Mail.

GOOD BRITISH AIM

The authoritative New York trade publication, The Iron Age, reports that the Ruhr and Rhineland districts now provide only about 20 per cent of Germany's war needs instead of the 75 per cent, they did during the Great War. That speaks well for the accuracy of British bomb-aimers. —Brockville Recorder and Times.

• Two Tributes To Walter Stocker

THE following tributes to the good qualities of the late Walter Stocker have come to The Examiner from two former citizens of Peterborough, Fred Hart of Belleville and J. H. Bell of Magrath, Alta.

HIS WORKS WILL LIVE

So Walter Stocker has gone—but his works in Peterborough will live.

Every old ugly corner was beautified by Walter when it was in his power as the chairman of the Parks Committee.

The Goose Pond, the approach from the East, from the South and from the West—there one can see Walter Stocker's epitaph.

The writer, now living in a distant city, has seen this dynamic alderman when he was chairman of Public Works—clearing storm drains in the Springtime—pushing ice flows from the troublesome creek—hours before paid civic employees had arisen from their beds.

Before seven in the morning, your correspondent has seen Walter Stocker digging holes in what was to become a beautiful boulevard even before his men had reported for duty.

Look at Confederation Park, you Peterborough people and see his monument, a beauty of the horticultural art indeed. Look around Peterborough where once was a waste crook and cranny which now is a thing of beauty. The hallmark of Walter Stocker is engraven thereon. He did this work out of a consuming love for the city of his adoption and he loved old England, the land of his birth, no less.

Cricket, the game without a foul, was his athletic enthusiasm for Walter had no use for foul play.

He would criticize those in public and civic life who did not come up to the standard of which he felt they should — and Walter Stocker could always justify that judgment.

Simon Armstrong, Rolly Denne, Walter Stocker — Peterborough has sustained a loss that will never be replaced in three decades. Look around, you citizens of Peterborough and see their works.

To these departed civic heroes — may the kindly Peterborough earth rest gently on their faithful bodies.

FRED HART.

A GREAT MAN HAS PASSED

A great man has passed in your city. Alderman Walter Stocker was as great in his individual way as the greatest,—he possessed all the qualities of a great man. He was a man of sterling character, the height of sincerity, honest to a degree, and his word was his bond. Once he had decided a course of action was right, nothing could shake the courage of his convictions. In that it could truly be said:

"There's a brave fellow,
There's a man of pluck,
A man who's not afraid to say his say,
Though a whole town's against him."

Born in humble circumstances, and brought up as a boy in Rawdon, near Leeds, Yorkshire, England, the influence of a Christian home made its indelible mark, and he developed those excellent qualities of heart and mind which were inculcated in him in his early years.

A typical Yorkshireman, he called a spade a spade, and had all the tenacious qualities of a true Britisher. An unusually observant man, mentally alert, he understood human nature thoroughly, his kindness, generosity, and thoughtfulness made those who knew him so well, proud to be his friend. A splendid husband and father, he loved his home, was proud of the city for which he did so much voluntarily, for nothing which would enhance its beauty was any trouble to him.

Gifted with a strong vigorous physique, and perfect health, he possessed an enthusiasm which meant success wherever he applied it. Peterborough will miss his strong personality which for over 50 years in no small measure helped to make it the lovely city it is. Keen on council matters, he held almost every position, and must be given credit for the time he spent beautifying the parks etc. He was a great and good sportsman, and followed cricket in particular, to the end. His love for good music was equally great,—and from his storehouse of memories one could learn much by listening; his memory was prodigious. We admired him for his integrity, and must see to it that we regard it as a privilege and an honor to carry the torch which he has passed on to us.

She Ducked

In a certain village there is a cottage with a door which must be raised a little to be opened, and for this purpose a hatchet is used. One night a knock came at the door and a youngster was sent to see who was there.

"What is it?" inquired the boy.

"It's me," said the voice outside.

Mrs. Murphy didn't wait.

Wasted

"Put your right hand out to signal you're about to move off; put the car into gear with the left hand; then grip the hand-brake. Ease up the clutch with the left foot and gently accelerate with the right, while releasing the hand-brake!" he explained.

There was a long pause, while the pupil appeared to think.

"Well, what are you waiting for?" asked the instructor.

"There's nothing useful I could do with my nose, is there?" asked the pupil.

Cash On Delivery

A couple had just been married. The clergyman shook hands with the bride, then held out his hand to the bridegroom.

The latter took no notice, but stood with his hand deep in his trousers' pocket.

When he saw that the clergyman continued to hold out his hand, he said in a very annoyed tone, "Hang it all! Can't you see I'm getting the money out as fast as I can?"

HITLER & CO.

THESE men are gangsters of the worst type, cynical, corrupt, and utterly ruthless. They stuck at nothing in their blood-stained march to power, not even at the murder of their own friends, so why should they stick at the mass murder of their enemies? On the contrary, the more convinced they become that their much-vaunted invasion is foredoomed to failure, the more we must expect them to continue and extend these attacks.

There is only one answer, and that is to hit them back where it hurts the most. I read time after time that there should be reprisals, but that would not hurt the Nazi leaders. They do not care about their civilian population, but they do care when their arsenals and munition works are blown up. And that is what the R.A.F. is doing with rare courage and with great success night after night. —From an address by Robert Boothby, M.P.

"OUR SKY"

THERE is an old lady in England who has a niece in Vancouver. She is 95 years old and she has seen and done everything that an Englishwoman can see and do. She doesn't care if the blitzkrieggers get her tomorrow. She has lived—and so can die.

She wrote to the niece and said, among other things: "As I write I looked up and there was a plane making a bloody Swastika with smoke in OUR sky. The saucy swine."—J. B. in Vancouver Province.

A Bible Message For Today . . . .

Now the serpent was more subtil than any beast of the field which the Lord God had made. And he said unto the woman, Yea, hath God said, Ye shall not eat of every tree of the garden? And the woman said unto the serpent, We may eat of the fruit of the trees of the garden: but of the fruit of the tree which is in the midst of the garden, God hath said, Ye shall not eat of it, neither shall ye touch it, lest ye die.

And the serpent said unto the woman, Ye shall not surely die: for God doth know that in the day ye eat thereof, then your eyes shall be opened, and ye shall be as gods, knowing good from evil. And when the woman saw that the tree was good for food, and that it was pleasant to the eyes, and a tree to be desired to make one wise, she took of the fruit thereof, and did eat, and gave also unto her husband with her; and he did eat.—Gen. iii, 1-6.

PAYS OWN WAY HOME

Letter in Toronto Star

SIR: I would like to say I agree with Lance-Corporal (without pay). I think the boys who enlisted voluntarily are being given a raw deal. My son, 18 years old, enlisted in May with the R.C.A.M.C.—C.A.S.F. He only got home about every six or eight weeks and either thumbed his way or walked and was only given 25 hours' leave before he was sent to Nova Scotia. Now he is getting furlough and we had to send him money to come home on, and he is only one of thousands. I do not say the trainees should not be used well but the boys who voluntarily enlisted for the C.A.S.F. to go to stop the Germans before they reached Canada should have as much consideration

British Strokes At Italy Felt In Berlin

WASHINGTON, Nov. 15—(AP).—The Hitler-Molotoff conversations in Berlin, trumpeted in advance by Nazi propagandists as foreshadowing a new political coup, came to an end under circumstances which raise doubts as to the real importance of the meetings.

What was happening simuletaneously to Mussolini in Greece and in Italian home waters must actually have been of far greater concern to Hitler tha nhis vaguely indicated deal with Russia. If that compact does not go far beyond anything yet hinted at, it is a mere sideshow in the war.

What does matter for Hitler is that Il Duce is taking a beating at the hands of the Greekes and British sea and air power. In the judgment of neutral observers very recently in Italy it would take little in the way of defeats to cause a serious break in Italian public morale.

No such deal as the granting to Moscow of a special sphere of influence in the proposed new "world order" can offset Italian military reverses. Such an agreement would leave Russia to collect her spoils from the British Empire. If Molotoff tentatively accepted any such arrangement, it must have been with his tongue in his cheek. What was happening to the Italians at the hands of the Greeks and British could not have been unknown to him. That did not indicate that the British Empire has yet begun to crack up.

British Prestige High

On the contrary, British prestige and morale is unquestionably higher today than it has been at any time since the Battle of Britain began last June. There are growing symptoms that German intrigue with the Vichy Government in conquered France has encountered a serious stumbling block. The Petain regime's protest against deportation of French nationals from Lorraine supports that view.

The major factors tending to overshadow the Russo-German conversations, however, are the Greek stand against Italian aggression and the British air attack on Italy's fleet. Rome's reply to the British claims sounds more like a tacit admission than a refutation.

An Associated Press observer on a British battleship tells how British Navy fliers, returning from the attask on Taranto, reported that they had left one Italian battleship aflame and two others beached or half submerged. The reporter's account was wirelessed from a point "off Taranto."

That is an important item. It means that British capital ships as well as submarines and aircraft are operating virtually in Italian home waters. It backs up also London reports of a British naval attack on Italian supply convoys in the Straits of Otranto.

An Athens report tells of withdrawal of Italian troops from the Albanian-Yugoslavian border to back up the faltering Fascist armies confronting Greece. The implication is that the Italian High Command is desperately trying to prevent a complete breakdown against increasing difficulties in transporting forces direct from Italy to the Greek front.

Against that background of war developments, the vague generalities in which Berlin describes the Hitler-Molotoff negotiations appear significant. Had there been anything committing Russia to direct or indirect military action to aid the Axis it would have been shouted from the housetops.

Those British Again

Berlin, Nov. 15 (AP)

HITLER, addressing munitions workers and army labor groups today, said it is "a plutocratic, capitalistic England" dominated by "anti-social tendencies" that is waging war against "the German socialistic state."

"This struggle is being carried on, not only by German soldiers, who are the best in the world," said Hitler, "but also by many millions of workers in German factories and armament plants."

He declared the workers had given the soldiers the best weapons so that "sacrifice could be held to the minimum."

He asserted that the modern German state was "established on the firmest and strongest foundation possible."

De Gaulle's Unit Held Huns For Three Days

LONDON, Nov. 15—(CP Cable).—A tale of daring in the ill-starred Battle of France was disclosed today when a military source related how General Charles de Gaulle, handicapped by a new, untrained armored division, held up the swift-rushing German advance for three days at the Serre River midway between St. Quentin and Reims.

General de Gaulle's division was formed after the lightning German attack caught one of France's two armored divisions without gasoline and destroyed it. Without information on enemy movement, he decided to try to reach the Serre. Breaking through carefully prepared anti-tank positions, his tanks got there, when he told headquarters it was a good position to take up. The advice was unheeded.

At one time the general's light tanks mistook their own heavy tanks for Germans and attacked, setting one afire and damaging another. The crews in the heavies got out to show they were French, but the men in the light tanks, suspecting treachery, shot them.

NEW YORK, Nov. 15.—Commenting on the smashing British blow at the Italian fleet at Taranto, The New York Times says today, in an editorial, "the ultimate irony would be if the Italians had lost not only capital ships and Egypt, but the Battle of the Mediterranean itself, as a result of their light-hearted excursion into Greece."

The editorial, "Drama in the Mediterranean," reads:

That the Mediterranean would be the decisive battlefield of the war has long been the opinion of observers who believe that Hitler can never now achieve the mastery of English skies which would enable him to cross the Channel and end his march in the Great Hall of Westminster. The Middle Sea, moreover, is the natural theatre of a conflict waged on the intercontinental scale, not for islands or separate nations, but for routes and gateways, the keys of world power. Hemmed in by three continents and haunted by the galleys of all the naval powers of history, this is the great lake where the interests of Europe impinge on the interests of Arabs, Turks and Russians.

Certainly the British fleet, balked of action but forced to concentrate large forces in the Mediterranean for many months, has launched a decisive offensive in the wide Bay of Taranto. Even though losses should be less than reported after a second bombardment, the balance is changed, and the cautious policy of the Italian navy in hiding at their bases has been ingloriously defeated. By one stroke the effort to hold the British ships in the Mediterranean and try to sink them one by one with bombers and submarines has been foiled. Apparently the naval units anchored at Taranto were as unprepared for an assault from the air as the Fascist legions pushing debonairly into Greece were surprised by the resistance they encountered.

More than coincidence connects the two episodes. The truism that the stand of a small nation against a powerful aggressor may be hopeless but is not futile is splendidly vindicated in the case of the Greeks. It may well be that their resistance has set in motion a train of consequences of the utmost importance. The invasion of Greece was really the opening engagement in the Mediterranean battle, the Italian advance into Egypt being a mere preliminary movement; and the success of the Greeks in pushing back the invaders has accomplished at least two striking results.

The British are encouraged to increas their aid to Greece by the hope that the Greeks may help them hold a position whence the Eastern Mediterranean campaign can be fought and won. There is at least a possibility that the Italians lost not only the Battle of Taranto, but the Battle of Egypt in the mud and confusion of the mountains of Epirus; they gave a demonstration of weakness and unpreparedness which invited the blow on their naval base, and this, in turn, will embolden the British forces to further offensives from the Nile Valley to the Italian coasts.

Only events will reveal the effect of these Italian failures on the secret decisions of Moscow and its attitude toward Turkey. It would be strange, however, if the vulnerability of one end of the Axis did not affect Hitler's bargaining power in the Berlin negotiations. How it affect the relations of the Axis partners is another chapter in an unfolding drama within the drama.

We shall see more engagements in the Mediterranean, but the ultimate irony would be if the Italians had lost not only capital ships and Egypt, but the Battle of the Mediterranean itself, as a result of their light-hearted excursion into Greece. Taranto may be a turning point, especially if Hitler, consolidating his Continential position with the consent of Stalin, should leave Mussolini alone in the treacherous waters of the Middle Sea.

Boy Scouts Aid

EDMONTON, Nov. 15—(CP).—More than 100,000 Boy Scouts are helping Canada's war effort in a score of ingenious ways, said John A. Beauty Betrays Ex-Convict By Death Kiss

NEW YORK, Nov. 15.—(AP).—"Red Murray" Fershing, 40, ex-convict and parole violator, was killed in a bar-room gun battle with three detectives last night after receiving a "kiss of death" from a former St. Louis beauty.

His gun emptied in a futile fusilade that terrified fifteen patrons, Fershing fell with six slugs in his body. He died at the feet of the detectives and the 34-year-old woman who identified him a few moments earlier with a kiss.

Detective John C. Kenny identified the woman as Dorothy Mori, 34, winner of a beauty contest in St. Louis, Mo., in 1927. He said she arranged the rendezvous and tipped off police by way of balancing accounts for the beating Fershing gave her a week ago.

Last night Kenny stood at the bar of an Amsterdam Avenue saloon with Miss Mori. Fershing came in a short time later, joined her at the bar and they kissed.

Kenny moved in from his position as two other detectives emerged from a booth and closed in quickly. Before they could grasp him, Fershing whipped out a revolver and fired five shots, none of which took effect.

Mission Circle Meets

HASTINGS, Nov. 15.—(ENS).—The Trinity United Church Mission Circle met at the home of Mrs. Walter Hubbel on Tuesday evening, with thirteen members present. Business discussion took up part of the evening, and plans for raising the last quarter allocation were decided upon. The worship service, under the supervision of Miss C. 3 MONTHS ON BISCUITS AND MILK

Woman's Digestive Troubles

Everyone who is subject to any form of indigestion should know of this woman's experiences. Advice from one who has had such severe attacks is advice worth having. She writes:—

"I suffered from indigestion, gastritis and constipation, and was so very ill, I had (on medical advice) to live on soda biscuits and milk for three months. Well, a friend advised me to take Kruschen, and now I am pleased to say I am greatly improved. I can eat and enjoy a good meal without any painful after-effects, my skin is clearer—in fact, quite clear—and there is no sign of constipation. I would advise anyone suffering the same to take Kruschen."

—(Mrs.) M. R. Ia.

The immediate effect of the several salts in Kruschen is to stimulate your liver and kidneys to normal action and help to free your system of poisonous waste matter. Soon after you start on Kruschen you will find that you are able to enjoy your food without distressing after-effects.

OUTBOARD MARINE LADIES LOSE CHALLENGE MATCH TO BRINTON

Suffer First Loss In Four Starts To Carpet Team

Ten dead shots in head-pin hitting were present when two girls' teams met in the hotly-contested weekly challenge match. The Outboard Marine ladies were finally beaten by the Brintons, after a reign of four weeks during which time they had turned back aggregations from the C.G.E., Lucky Strikes and Westclox. 654 and 631 counts by Margaret Hawthorne and Mrs. Anderson did the trick for the Brinton team who will now meet an A.Y.P.A. five next week.

Four to nothing was the by-word in the Men's City League at Duffus Alleys last night when five of the six matches staged ended in that order. Tamblyn's, the leading outfit in the league, cooled off a little after last week's big total to roll down 3443 pins in trimming Huffman's. Jack Playford's 795 helped the Nationals pile up 3425 against Green's. Centre Theatre, Capitol Grill and the Big Five took care of the Lock Co., Westclox and Kinsmen with 3300 or better totals.

Jack Platt of Raine's nailed the evening's best single, 338, and it saved one point for his team in their tilt with Grafton's. Other good singles of the night were Playford's 316, George Robertson's 316, Maurice Holt's 3033, Tommy Spencer's 303 and Fred Hickey's 302.

SPORTS – DAY BY DAY

By FRED D. CRAIG

Calling Saturday's football games is not as lengthy a task as usual—for only two are on the card—but with the playoff stage reached making selections is not so simple after all especially in the case of the Big Four fixture which finds Argos meeting Rough Riders in Ottawa in the first game of the final series. The first clear thing about that battle is that no matter which team wins the championship will hinge just the same on the result of the second game to be played in Toronto a week from tomorrow. In other words the score in Ottawa will be close enough either way to give both teams a chance in the second fixture. Neither team has played championship football on its last two or three starts but with the checks down and the title at stake we look for an improvement in both squads and a tough, hard battle at the Capital tomorrow. Ottawa should win but by a margin small enough to make the second game loom up as the feature of the current season.

It is a bit sticky to figure out just what extent injuries will play in the Big Four series. Both Ottawa and the Oarsmen have been hit. Red Storey is definitely lost to the Argos and while Art West may get into the game the artful dodger cannot possibly be in the best of shape and his value to his team is problematical. Smith of course is out of the line, too, with a septic throat. On the other hand the Rough Riders, if they inject Tony Golab into the battle will be gambling. The big fellow sustained a serious injury early in the season and it is difficult to think that under the circumstances he can be expected to turn loose one of those crashing games that have meant so much to Ottawa. Again Andy Tommy, Riders' payoff running half has a leg injury and he is liable to find himself handicapped. The condition of these players adds to the confusion in the minds of the football prophets.

The Ontario battle between Sarnia Artillerymen and Balmy Beach is not so tough. Unless they are suffering from a bad dose of over confidence, Alex oPnton's lads should win and win handily. They have everything that Sarnia has and a lot to spare and their combination of a varied and rolling offensive and a rockbound defensive system should give them a comfortable lead tomorrow to take back to Sarnia for the final game. Beachers will have a full lineup tomorrow, too, something that they have not had scarcely all season and that will not hurt their chances any, of course. The Sarnia fans point to the manner in which the Imperials surprised Westmount last season and warn the Bammies to look out for a similar upset but that is merely the old college try. Beachers look too good everywhere for the gunners and we will be surprised if they do not win both games of the final series and preserve their unbeaten record.

Don Crowe Gets Star Rating

Peterborough followers of sport will be delighted over the fact that Don Crowe has been chosen for the backfield of the All-Star O.R.F.U. team, selected by the coaches and sports writers in O.R.F.U. cities. Crowe has been named for the half line along with Eddie Thompson, the Camp Borden star, and his own teammate Frankie Seymour who has been selected for the role of plunging back. Bobby Porter of the Bammies is the quarterback chosen and back field is completed with Perry of Sarnia as flying wing. There are a lot of good halves in the O.R.F.U. and the fact that Crowe has drawn enough votes to give him a place in the backfield is an endorsation of the good things that were said of him when he was a member of the local Orfuns. We always rated the sturdy backfielder as among the best and his work this season has not let us down.

* * * * * *

The feeling seems to be growing that the new manager of the Chicago Cubs is likely to be Jimmy Wilson, the grand old veteran who came to the rescue of the Cincinnati Reds when their catching section was riddled in midseason and wound up by a great performance in the world series. The sentiment of fans everywhere will be that if Gabby Hartnett had to go there is no one they would rather see get his job than the same Jimmy Wilson. The 40-year-old Red backstop has a reputation for doing wonders in handling pitchers and there is one thing you can't take away from him—the Tigers wish that somebody had — he made an ace pitcher out of a fair third baseman when he developed Bucky Walters into a twirler. Wilson had a fling at managership before but that was with the Phillies and they don't grow pilots that could take that outfit to the top of the heap. Fandom will wish Jimmy well if he should be the Chicago choice.

* * * * * *

Arrangements will likely be made soon for the Peterborough intermediate squad to get in some practices at Oshawa. The players themselves are anxious to get their skates on and they are pressing for workouts to begin which shows the spirit of the crowd. Travelling 120 miles in an evening after a hard day's work to get in an hour's practice is not the softest program in the world but the Petes take that kind of thing in their stride. Last season they made a number of trips to Oshawa and the result was that when old John B. Frost finally made practice at home possible the boys were in fairly good shape and soon rounded into form. The absence of artificial ice is a handicap but the players are willing to do their part in overcoming the difficulty by travelling to the motor city and the workouts will be arranged.

No Mercy For Dick Irvin

Toronto Maple Leafs showed little mercy for their former coach Dick Irvin when they waltzed into Montreal last night and took the Canadiens 6 goals to 2. Following the Montrealers' defeat at home by Black Hawks it begins to look as if the rookies in the Irvin lineup are failing to measure up to the N.H.L. standard and that Montreal may be lucky to escape a cellar berth. Leafs had no trouble winning last night. They rattled in two goals in the opening period, split four with Canadiens in the second and wound up with two more in the final session in which the homesters failed to score. The chief feature was that Hank Goldup led the Leafs' attack with two goals and an assist. The victory shot Leafs up into second place, a point behind the Black Hawks who split with the Amerks in the other game of the night, each club scoring twice.

The Ladies' Basketball League is all set for the opening of the season and the lid will be pried off a week from tonight. With six teams lined up including a new "Y" entry there should be plenty of competition in the loop this season, and it is expected that increased interest shown in the games last winter will be continued during the 1940-41 campaign. In the opening fixtures a week from tonight Quaker Aces will tangle with Westclox and the Y Gym will play St. John's. That sounds like a very attractive card for the first night's doings and should start the schedule away at a rapid tempo.

JOHN BULL TAKES COPPER

LIVERPOOL—(CP)—The Ministry of Supply has requisitioned copper in warehouses of eight firms here, London and Newcastle. An average of $258.70 per ton is being paid the owners.

English Soccer Adopts "Jim Crows"

LONDON, Nov. 15 — (...). — Jim Crows, those people who sit on rooftops and blow whistles when enemy planes are overhead, have arrived in English soccer.

They're not official yet, but judging from the success of a trial at a match between Tottenham Hotspurs and Portsmouth they likely will be adopted for all Football Association league matches.

When play began in September, the Ministry of Home Security gave instructions that matches must stop during air raids. As a result, there were long delays, abandoned matches and disappointed crowds.

Imagine an Ottawa Rough Riders-Winnipeg Blue Bombers Dominion football final being held up for an hour with the score tied and 10 minutes to play, and you'll know why the "no play during alerts" ruling wasn't popular.

The Football Association recommended to the Minister that a system of roof spotters, similar to that used by factories and offices, be adopted. There has been no decision on the recommendation, but Tottenham tried out spotters as an experiment and found them a success.

An air raid warning sounded soon after the game began, but with four watchers on the job there wasn't a minute's interruption. The way the crowd cheered the decision to "play on" showed how they felt about the new system, and other teams are expected to follow suit.

It wasn't the first time Jim Crows had been tried out in sport. They've been used at greyhound races and for boxing bouts and other indoor events.

If there's hockey this winter, and there's bound to be some, although league plans are indefinite, watchers probably will be posted on the arena roofs to warn players and crowds when to take shelter.

BACK OF HOCKEY VICTORIES

UP in the battle front of "big time" hockey, skating equipment gets the "acid" test. Fast skating, instant turns, collisions, spills and immediate stops impose terrific strain on skates and shoes.

The failure of a skate or shoe may lose the game, even the pennant, so championship players stick to C.C.M. Matched Sets and take no chances.

The New York Rangers won the World's Professional Championship—the Stanley Cup—on C.C.M. Matched Sets (all but one player). The Lake Shore Blue Devils won the Canadian Senior Amateur Championship — the Allan Cup — on C.C.M. Matched Sets. The Oshawa Generals won the Canadian Junior Amateur Championship—The Memorial Cup —on C.C.M. Matched Sets.

And so goes the story of Amateur and Professional hockey the world over—actual check shows 95% of the players use C.C.M.'s.

Gallagher, Cubs' New Manager; Pilot Unnamed

CHICAGO, Nov. 15.— (AP)— A "what next" attitude prevailed today in Chicago baseball circles after the series of rapid fire managerial and front office shifts in the Cubs organization.

The Cubs had a general manager, a new wrinkle in President P. K. Wrigley's baseball system, but the identity of the successor of the ousted Gabby Hartnett—if one has been named—still was unknown to Cub fans.

James T. Gallagher, 36-year-old baseball writer of the Chicago Herald-American who was appointed general manager yesterday, said only that a new Cub pilot "definitely" would be named before the winter baseball meetings early in December. It was rumored that the manager already had been selected but the announcement would be withheld until next week.

Yesterday other changes involved the appointment of William Veeck, Jr., son of the late Cub president, as treasurer to succeed Charles A. Weber, and Weber's decision to withdraw his resignation as vice-president "for the time being, at least."

Billy Myer, Kansas City manager, and Jimmy Wilson, Cincinnati coach, remained the top men among rumored managerial choices. A third prospect was Kiki Cuyler, former Cub outfielder now managing Chattanooga of the Southern Association.

NEW YORK, Nov. 15—(AP). — Here are a flock of rumors we're trying to check as we reel to press:—Davey O'Brien will quit pro football and become a G-man if the Federal Bureau of Investigation approves his application....Gabby Hartnett is slated for a post wit hthe Giants, either as coach or boss farmer at Jersey City....Joe Engel turned down an offer of $15,000 per to run the Brooklyn farm chain....None of these guaranteed for more than 30 minutes.

To-day's Guess Star

Harry Martinez, New Orleans States: "If I had to lose my shirt picking an underdog this week it would be Iowa to ruin Notre Dame's undefeated record."

Sports Tocktail

Fritzie Zivic ought to take Al Davis tonight unless he gets careless and runs into one. A socker like Davis is always dangerous.... Leo Durocher got safely out of the Utah woods and now is visiting George Raft in Hollywood.

Guessing Contest:

Now, who will P. K. Wrigley hire: Jimmy Wilson or Billy Meyer?

Hockey Years Mellowing Eddie Shore

(By the Canadian Press.)

No one ever accused Eddie Shore of becoming as gentle as a lamb, but it does seem that the hockey years have had a mellowing influence on the once-famed bad-man of the National Hockey League.

The thing probably responsible for this metamorphosis is that Shore must shoulder now the burdens of a magnate as well as a player, for he is playing-owner of Springfield Indians of the American Hockey League.

The Indians have gone unbeaten through six games so far, playing to a 5-5 overtime draw last night in Springfield with Indianapolis Capitals. But almost as surprising was the fact that there was a hectic fight on the ice, a fight that continued in the penalty box, and Shore wasn't in it.

Shore Got Minor

In fact, although there were four major penalties handed out in the game as well as eight minors, all Shore could show was a puny minor in the first period before things even got warmed up. The old Shore would have been the centre of all the fuss, probably emerging with anything up to a match penalty.

The majors went to Andy Brannigan, Liscombe, Bush and Whitelaw. Police finally had to be called to separate the battlers after the fight was resumed on the penalty bench.

Shore himself scored a goal in the overtime period that raised the hope of the Springfield fans for a victory, but Jennings deadlocked things at 5-5 with his second goal of the game a couple of minutes before the extra period was up.

Hunt tallied two of the Springfield goals, while the others went to Glen Brydson and Max Kaminsky. Indianapolis goals, besides those scored by Jennings, went to Brown, Behling and McDonald.

In the only other game of the night New Haven Eagles defeated Providence Reds 3-1, with Polly Drouin, Alan Shields and Earl Roche getting goals for the winners and Art Giroux scoring for the Reds. It was the first New Haven triumph over Providence in two seasons.

Riders, Beaches Called For The Finals

By SYDNEY GRUSON
(Canadian Press Staff Writer.)

The traditional rivals of the Eastern football leagues are matched once more in the opening of the section's playoffs, bringing together Ottawa Rough Riders and Toronto Argonauts in the Interprovincial union and Toronto Balmy Beach and Sarnia Battery in the Ontario Union.

The two-week show opens tomorrow at Ottawa and Toronto with Riders, present Big Four and eastern champs, and the smoothies from Balmy Beach as the favorites to win through to the final on Nov. 30. They were the best in their leagues during the regular season and have earned the call to survive.

But there is no inclination anywhere to set these games up as walk-overs. Riders felt the sting of an inspired Argo tea once this season after Lew Hayman's club had been beaten 41-6 in the teams' first engagement. There never was enough edge in the Beach victories over the Battery to make it conclusive that the Battery couldn't reverse things.

The Telltale Battles

The question of whether Riders tailed off toward the end of the season or the opposition became stronger probably will be answered in the series against Argos. After three smashing victories in the first half of the schedule, they were beaten by Argos, held a three-point decision over Montreal and scraped through by one point over Hamilton.

With more than half their backfield out because of injuries, Argos roared back from their beating to lick the Riders 11-9 in Toronto. This hot-and-cold Argo club, at least it has been all season, and to beat the Riders they have got to stay hot. If they're cold they rate to lose by three or four touchdowns. They could not make up that many points if they were hot for one game—they lack the power.

The Riders enter the playoff at full strength, their backfield studded with such stars as Tony Golab, Andy Tommy, Orville Burke, Sam Sward and Windy O'Neil, the line jammed with such mamoths as Tiny Herman, Bunny Wadsworth, George Fraser and Dave Sprague. On paper they haven't a weak spot—but paper reckoning doesn't take into account bad ball handling.

That lost Riders the game to Argos and could conceivably lose them this series, even if Argos are without Red Storey, Tuffy Smith and Art West for both games. It's unlikely that they'll see service tomorow.

11 All-Stars to Play.

Eleven of the 12 men chosen for the Canadian Press all-star O.R.F.U. team will be in action in th Beach-Sarnia series. This clash brings together the East's best tackling clubs. Before it is over, it may develop into one of the nardest struggles of the many Sarnia and Beaches have fought through the seasons.

The Battery hasn't the power of the Imperial teams of Hugh (Bummer) Stirling and Alex Hayes, but it is fast, has a fine punter in Hank Galloway and two good plungers in Ralph Pery and Joe Woodcock. Their saddest blow was struck last week when Gus Schelers, a fine running back, broke a leg.

Beaches have not been defeated in league play. They are rolling on a six-game winning streak and have the most versatile attack ever built by Alex Ponton. The club has an abundance of good backs, Bob Porter, Art Walker, Frank Seymour, and Don Crowe to mention a few, and the line compares with any in the East.

It has shown only one weakness all year, an inability to get points when they are inside the opposition's 20. Ponton thinks he has that fault cured after a week of heavy training.

TORONTO, Nov. 15.—(ENS-. — Take a number from one to 10, double it and add a hundred, and the total probably will be pretty close to the number of goals that Toronto Maple Leafs will mark up in this new National Hockey League campaign.

If the Leafs break the 100-mark in goals this season it will make the 12th straight year that they have accomplished the feat. Not another club in the league can match this record, for one only has to go back to the 1935-36 season to find that each of the other six clubs has been under that total at some time.

The last time the Leafs failed to break the century mark was in 1928-29, in the days that the N.H.L. schedule was one of 44 games and the rules didn't allow much freedom in scoring. Even then they fired home 85 goals to the 95 compiled by the leading New York Rangers.

With 45 games still to go, the Maple Leafs of 1940-41 have scored 10 goals. Tht makes them 1-10th of the way home with only 1-16th of their games played and they look like a cinch to have another high-scoring year.

They went on one of their typical splurges last night in Montreal, cooling Canadiens 6-2 before about 7,000 fans. The victory gave them second place in the standing with four points, a point away from the leading Chicago Black Hawks. The Hawks, a game up on Leafs, took over first place by drawing 2-2 in overtime at New York.

Usually the big gunners of the Leafs are Syl Apps and Gordie Drillon, but when these two are bottled up completely or even partially stopped, some other Leaf generally takes over the sniping. Canadiens found that out when they held Drillon and Apps in check fairly well, but gave free rein to Henry (Hank) Goldup and Pete (Snakehips) Langelle.

Langelle emerged as the high point-maker of the night with two goals and two assists, while Goldup was just behind with a pair of goals and one assist. The other Toronto goals were scored by Reg. Hamilton and Nick Metz, with Apps drawing assists on each and Drillon getting in on the score by Metz.

Canadiens had only one man to match the feats of Goldup and Langelle. Louis Trudel, making his first start of the season and showing no ill effects from a knee injury suffered in training, fired both Canadiens' tallies and twice came close to beating Goalie Turk Broda for a third score.

Two majors were among the 13 penalties handed out by Referee Mickey Ion. They went to Goldup and Rookie Jack Adams for their part in a brief scrap in the third period that drew three players from each side.

Hawks Nearly Make It

The Hawks, beaten this year only by the Americans, came close to avenging that defeat. They held a 2-1 lead through a goal by Bob Carse late in tht third period, but Murray Armstrong batted home an even later tally to send the game into scoreless overtime. Armstrong's goal came at 18.05, while Defenceman Jack Portland was serving a penalty, leaving Hawks a man short.

The two other goals were scored in the first period, with Mush March sending Chicago into the lead shortly after the start of the game and Lorne Carr evening things near the half-way mark. Americans outplayed the Hawks in the overtime, but could not pierce a strong Chicago defence.

(By the Canadian Press.)

Pete Langelle and Hank Goldup, Toronto, who paced Leafs to a 6-2 victory over Canadiens. Former had two goals and two assists, while Goldup scored twice and helped in one of Langelle's.

Louis Trudel, Canadiens, who played effectively in his first game of the N.H.L. season, scoring both Montreal goals in the second period.

Lorne Carr, Americans, who figured in both his team's goals as Americans played a 2-2 draw with Chicago. Carr scored one and assisted in the other.

Mush March, Chicago, who scored one of the goals against Americans and played his usual good back-checking game.

New Substance Makes Light Turn Corners

LOUISVILLE, Ky., Nov. 15. — (AP).—United States science which produced a glass-like substance to make light turn corners was declared to-day to be saving the lives of thousands of Londoners during the current bombings.

The material, made out of coal, water and air, is synthetic glass, known technically as methyl methacyrlate resin and commercially as curvlite, and has come into wide use in surgical operations. Light at one end of a retractor used to pull open surgical incisions is carried around the bend of the instrument and directly into the operating field.

In the total blackness of London nights these instruments are making it possible for surgeons to operate on emergency cases when the bright overhead lights are forbidden and the patients could not otherwise live until morning according to a report before members of the Southern Medical Association at its annual meeting.

SUFFERED FROM SKIN DISORDER

MISS G. EVANS writes: "For the past year or two I suffered from disfiguring blotches, blackheads and acne. I tried many preparations without any noticeable improvement. Then I began applying Zam-Buk. This treatment soon caused the eruptions and blemishes to disappear, and my complexion is clearer now than I can ever remember."

The soothing herbal oils of Zam-Buk act quickly on skin eruptions to bring comforting, permanent relief. Order a tin of Zam-Buk from your druggist today.

F.D.R. Wants Him

Washington, Nov. 15 (AP)

WILLIAM C. BULLITT announced today that President Roosevelt had declined to accept his resignation as Ambassador to France.

Bullitt, in a statement, said he had believed he could be of more service to the country if he were free to write and speak without restrictions of public office.

The statement said the president, however, expressed a wish that Bullitt should not resign.

Still open, however, was the question of whether he would return to France or be assigned to some other diplomatic post such as London, in connection with which his name has been mentioned.

It was believed in well informed quarters that Bullitt was not likely to be sent to Vichy, capital of non-occupied France.

Report Canada's Radium Mining Ceased

OTTAWA, Nov. 15—(CP).—The suggestion that mining and refining operations in radium in Canada may have been suspended is contained in a question H. Waldamer Winkler (Lib. Lisgar) will ask in the Commons.

Winkler gave notice of his question today. He will ask whether operations have ceased and staffs been discharged and whether the government is aware of any agreement between the Belgian and Canadian radium companies whereby Belgian (Congo) ore will be used in the interim.

At the Mines and Resources Department it was said that mining operations at Great Bear Lake in the Northwest Territories, source of Canada's radium, ceased last summer when it was found there was a considerable amount of concentrates on hand, probably enough to last for two years.

Meantime a department source said radium refining operations are continuing at Port Hope, Ont.

Peterboro' Area W.I. Holds Summary Day

HAVELOCK, Nov. 15—(ENS).—The Peterborough district Women's Institute, conducted their annual "Summary Day" yesterday afternoon in the local Town Hall, with close to a hundred women in attendance. With the exception of Lakefield, all branches were represented, and Mrs. George Weller of Warsaw, district president, occupied the chair for the meeting.

Opening with "O Canada" and the Institute Ode, the roll call was then responded to by the following local leaders, who reported on the achievements of their respective branches during the past year: Havelock, Mrs. George Rigby; Norwood, Mrs. A. Gill; Trent River, Mrs. Thomas Brown; Belmont, Mrs. William Smith; Hall's Bridge, Mrs. Harry Shearer. Sympathy was extended to Mrs. Cooper, Warsaw's local leader, who was absent due to bereavement in her family. Her report was given by Mrs. Weller. The roll call was conducted by Mrs. Harry Mann of Trent River, the district secretary.

Mrs. James A. Stevenson of Port Colborne the departmental representative, who conducted the local leader course in "the preparation and preservation of fruits" last summer in Lakefield, was present to inspect the exhibits of the individual branches on this project. She complimented them upon their excellent results, and explained the manner in which the exhibits of canned fruit and jellies were judged. Canned fruit is judged by its good color, shape of fruit, flavor, and fourthly by the correct amount of juice and clear syrup. In jelly, it is the shape, clearness or transparency, the way it cuts, and its flavor and tenderness.

Thanks was extended to Mrs. Stevenson by the president, Mrs. Weller, and the members voiced their appreciation. Mrs. Weller said that the local leader projects were becoming more successful each year.

Guest speaker of the afternoon was Mrs. R. W. Goheen of town, who gave a most interesting and appropriate talk on the topic, "Fruits," Mrs. Goheen; presented valuable information on the selection of the various fruits as they come into season.

The afternoon's program also included a vocal solo by Miss Jerine Brown of Trent River, entitled "Call of the Canyon," and Mrs. N. Graham of town sang, "We Have Eyes to See." A dialogue, "Jelly for the Minister," was presented by the following cast from the Belmont Branch Women's Institute, Mrs. W. Anderson as Mrs. Belinda Barrington, a widow; Mrs. Ellis as Mrs. Arabella Doolittle, a jelly-maker; Miss Goldilene Dafoe as Miss Clementina Clipp, an old maid; and Miss E. Casson as Miss Mary Cooper, a neighbor.

Announcement was made that the grand final, county oratorical contest would be held in the Peterborough Normal School on Wednesday, November 20, and further plans for this were discussed during the business portion of the meeting. It was decided that the first three contestants in each of the individual competitions be eligible to enter this grand contest. The ultimate winner will then complete in the zone contest at Brighton, where the $5 entry fee will be paid by the district Institute. Three prizes will be supplied by the Havelock-Belmont oratorical committee for the first, second and third prize-winners at Peterborough.

Globe-Circling Echo

New York, Nov. 15 (CP)

THE British air attack on the Italian naval base at Taranto is "a success magnificent in its dash, spectacular in its proportion," the New York Herald Tribune said editorially to-day.

"The rolling thunder of the bombs....will echo all around the Mediterranean and over the Atlantic," it said. "It will be heard as far away as Tokyo while it reverberates in all the Balkan capitals; it will penetrate the massive walls of the Kremlin and reach even into the marble splendors of Hitler's Chancellory.

"The Royal Navy——has reached in and 'Copenhagened' the best units of the Italian fleet where they lay behind the defences of one of their strongest bases.... at this juncture, the effects of Taranto may well be tremendous."

Lindsay To Vote On Fast Time

LINDSAY, November 15.—It has been announced that a bylaw will be submitted to the people at the municipal elections in January on the question of daylight saving. Two years ago a similar proposal was submitted to the voters and was defeated by a substantial majority.

Magistrate Langley, of Peterborough, presided at yesterday's session of the police court with five cases on the docket. E. McKinnon, of Mariposa, R. Hainsworth of Lindsay, and H. Jenkins, of Oakwood, were charged with failure to secure radio licenses. They were assessed $5.65, $5.25 and $5.60 respectively.

J. Langland, town, was assessed $10 and $13.95 costs on a charge of dangerous driving. This case arose out of an accident on No. 7 Highway, on Oct. 4, when a car driven by accused crashed into a truck driven by Oliver Hancock, of Ops. Both machines were ditched and two of Mr. Hancock's daughters injured. Ralph Mark, town, was brought down from Toronto to face a charge of non-support. He was remanded in custody until Monday next.

The funeral took place yesterday of the oldest resident of Ops township, in the person of Mrs. James Nellis, in her ninety-eighth year. Her husband predeceased her eighteen years ago. She is survived by four daughters. Interment took place at St. Mary's Cemetery, Lindsay.

Game Warden Hodgson has been in Coboconk district during the past few days investigating the shooting of a moose. During the past few weeks a male and female and two young moose have been seen on the highway close to Coboconk. Occasionally they were seen with herds of cows and a great many from Lindsay went out to see them. On the week-end, however, a number of school children found one of the animals shot. The body had been partly covered with leaves. There were several bullet holes in the animal. It is believed the parties guilty of the shooting had planned to remove the animal at dusk.

US Eases Dealing With Martinique

WASHINGTON, Nov. 15—(AP).—A Martinique announcement that "good relations" had been consolidated with the United States and the simultaneous reports here that some French credits had been "unfrozen" for the Island colony's benefit were interpreted today as signs of lessening tension in the Carribean.

There has been speculation over the future of the French colony ever since the defeat of France. It has mounted in recent weeks with American naval forces manoeuvring in vicinity of the island and other fleet units operating near the recently acquired base site at British St. Lucis, less than 25 miles away.

The successful negotiations for the establishment of friendly contacts between American authorities in Martinique and the colonial government were announced last night at Fort de France, the Island's capital, and informally confirmed here. A state department official said the understanding would make possible a solution of any problems which have arisen.

After the understanding was disclosed, authoritative reports here said that some of the "frozen" French credits would be released to enable Martinique to purchase needed supplies.

Japs Withdraw From Kwangsi

TOKYO, Nov. 15—(AP).—Imperial headquarters announced today that the Japanese army had completed its withdrawal from Kwangsi Province and Southwetsern Kwangtung Province, dropping the curtain on a significant year-long chapter in the Japanese-Chinese war.

The announcement said Japanese forces finally withdrew yesterday from Yamchow, port of the Kwangtung coast through which the expedition which drove last November into Kwangsi and captured Nanning, the capital, was supplied.

The withdrawal was said to have been accomplished "without casualties." (Chinese dispatches had reported recapture of Yamchow after stiff fighting).

A War Office spokesman denied that the withdrawal from the Kwangsi theatre was a prelude to a wholesale evacuation of South China. The Japanese army continues to hold a considerable portion of Eastern Kwangtung Province, around Canton.

US Mulls Winter Air Training For Canadians

WASHINGTON, Nov. 15—(AP).—Aeronautical circles said yesterday that a plan is under consideration for giving primary flight training this winter to 4,000 or more Canadian—and possibly British—pilots at United States air schools not handicapped by severe winter weather.

War department officials, noting reports that Canadian and British youths might be trained in long range aerial navigation at a Pan American Airways School at Miami, Fla., said there was no official objection.

The school is undertaking to train 850 navigation cadets in the next 14 months for the United States army air corps.

(Regarding possibilities of Canadian airmen training in Texas, an air ministry spokesman at Ottawa referred questioners to a recent press conference statement of Air Minister Power that the British Commonwealth Air Training plan was developed with the idea of year around training in Canada.)

Ralston On Defences

Today the House of Commons will hear Defence Minister Ralston make a statement on the progress of Canada's defence measures.

In the Senate yesterday the address debate was concluded, the address adopted without division, and adjournment taken to Dec. 3, subject to possible recall by the speaker in the meantime.

One of the last speakers in the debate was Senator William Duff (Lib. Nova Scotia) who suggested Canada should start negotiations with Newfoundland to see if the British colony could not be taken over by Canada.

He suggested that Canada will relieve Britain of the responsibility of administering her colony in the Gulf of St. Lawrence, in view of the heavy war burdens sustained by the United Kingdom.

Canada and the United States already were acting jointly to look after Newfoundland's defences and this was another reason why the colony might be taken into Canada's confederation, he said.

Bonus Wheat Farmers.

The Senate also heard a proposal from Senator John Haig (Con. Manitoba) that the Government should bonus wheat farmers to keep their land out of production. His crop-reducing suggestion would call for payment to wheat farmers of a bonus of $5 an acre on uncropped land, up to one-third of their normal acreage.

He estimated such a step would decrease production by 240,000,000 bushels a year, and save the Government $75,000,000 to $80,000,000 annually, in view of its present guaranteed minimum price for wheat of 70 cents a bushel, basis No. 1 Northern at Fort William or Vancouver.

In his speech to the Commons, Agriculture Minister Gardiner reported agreements reached with the British officials to take the following supplies in 1941:

Fish: Canned salmon to the value of $5,536,000, other canned fish $3,146,000 and frozen cod $3,367,000—a total of $122,050,000, almost twice the value of these commodities exported to Great Britain in 1939. (Figures for 1940 are not complete for the year, but in most instances are higher.)

Processed fruits and honey: Canned tomatoes, dried apples, canned apples, fruit pulp, fruit pectin and honey to the value of $4,541,000, compared with $3,111,465 in 1939.

Bacon and pork products: Canada's total production of Wiltshire sides estimated at 425,600,000 pounds and offals, sausage casings and bladders, worth a total of $69,300,000, compared with $32,000,000 in 1939.

Cheese: 112,000,000 pounds, net value at Montreal $16,100,000, and more if Canada can deliver it, compared with $10,802,000 in 1939.

Condensed Milk: To the value of at least $3,750,00, compared with $1,251,000 in 1939.

No Wheat Deal.

Mr. Gardiner made clear he did not go to Britain with authority to make any agreement on wheat, but he said it appeared in recent months that about 70 per cent. of Britain's wheat purchases were of Canadian origin "and I suggested that the United Kingdom might think it desirable to maintain this percentage." This would amount to about 160,000,000 bushels a year.

He assumed Canada might increase domestic consumption to 160,000,000 bushels a year. That would dispose of 640,000,000 bushels in two years at home and in the United Kingdom.

He assumed further that it would be two years before the expected British offensive would make it possible for Canada to sell wheat again to countries now blockaded. In the last three years of the next five, he estimated, Canada would dispose of 480,000,000 bushels to such countries.

The Minister thus figured that in the next five years the United Kingdom would take a total of 800,000,000 bushels, domestic consumption 800,000,000, and countries now blockaded 480,000,000 bushels, a total of 2,080,000,000 bushels.

He estimated production in that period would be 1,900,000,000 bushels to which he added the 280,000,000 bushels carry-over from the last crop year, making a total of 2,180,000,000 bushels or 100,000,000 more than the amount for which he predicted there would be a market.

"If the people of Europe whom Britain has befriended for ages had been able to hold out against Nazi attacks, every scrap of food Canada prepared against the day of trial would have been required by now and would have been selling at a price which would have partially paid the debts incurred during days of narrow nationalism," Mr. Gardiner said.

Able To Aid Britain Now

"But the war has brought destruction, pillage, rampant death and slavery to the small food-producing countries of Europe and we, with our food supplies increased to greater surpluses than for years, are able to play a greater part in assisting Britain than we otherwise could have done."

Mr. Gardiner reviewed the measures of assistance which have been granted certain branches of agriculture and observed that although advised more than a year ago not to increase their plantings of wheat farmer had increased them by 2,000,000 acres.

"Farmers of Canada and the enlisted men from all classes in Canada have been required to make greater economic sacrifices than any others," said Mr. Gardiner.

It was because of losses to farmers both before and after the war started that Mr. Gardiner decided to make a trip to England, he said.

He saw at once that under the blockade "the only European authority to which we can direct food supplies is the government of Britain." There had been suggestions that Canada seek markets elsewhere.

"I would not remain for one hour in a government which would seek markets for farm products anywhere in the world if the marketing of them there would in any way tend to weaken the blockade Britain is enforcing upon certain sections of Europe," he declared.

"What about selling copper to Spain?" Mr. Coldwell queried.

"My friend will find, if he reads this carefully, that the selling of anything to Spain is very well covered by what I have stated," Mr. Gardiner replied.

"I think it is our duty to place the food supplies available for empire consumption at the disposal of the empire through the food and shipping ministries of Britain to be directed to any market they think advisable.

"I think we should receive from the British government for these supplies sufficient to make it possible for our farmers to go on producing food which is greatly needed and may be even more essential to ultimate victory."

F.O. James Sinclair, speaking in the throne speech debate, made the appeal for free transportation for men on active service.

Men most anxious to go home on leave were those least able to pay their fares, the Royal Canadian Air Force officer said. He asked only that transportation be provided for non-commissioned officers and men on long leave.

The money to pay for free transportation would obviously come from the taxpayer, F.O. Sinclair said, and he was sure the great majority of taxpayers would approve the expenditure.

He said he was leaving Ottawa last night to return to duty in Vancouver, his leave having expired. He was speaking not so much as a member of parliament but as one who "has had the good fortune to be accepted for active service."

There was a good deal of reluctance among recruiting and staff officers to having members of parliament in the service.

Referring to the speech made Wednesday night by Capt. G. S. White, Conservative-Hastings-Peterborough, F.O. Sinclair said the proper place to air complaints of trifling matters was in the office of the defence minister, particularly when the person complaining was an officer.

The important thing was that the "first line" of defence—the air force and navy—was fully equipped and efficiently administered, he said.

Extension of rental control to small districts adjacent to military training posts and industrial areas was urged by F.O. Sinclair, who claimed there was a great deal of profiteering going on among landlords.

Mother Not to Blame for the Children's Colds

Despite all the mother can do the kiddies will run out of doors not properly wrapped up; have on too much clothing; get overheated and cool off too suddenly; get their feet wet; kick off the bed clothes, and do a dozen things the mother cannot help.

Half the battle in treating children's colds is to give them something they will like; something they will take without any fuss, and this the mother will find in Dr. Wood's Norway Pine Syrup, a remedy used by Canadian mothers, for the past 48 years.

Price 35c a bottle; the large family size, about 3 times as much, 60c, at all drug counters.

LOST—FORTY DOLLARS.

"Write a little story," said a man this morning "about the canal employee who went rabbit shooting and lost forty dollars." He laughed with a great deal of glee as he told about the misfortune of the chap who was crazy enough to cadge forty dollars on a rabbit hunt, and that's a strange thing how prone people are to find humor in the whole category of misadventures involving more or less hurt, like the fellow who slipped on the banana peel and fell on his neck.

THEIR WORK ENDING.

Some of the employees of the Board of Works will presently be on the unemployed list as their season with the city ends for this year. Alderman Dutton said this morning that he was hoping local industries could absorb these men for the winter months. They had given good service to the city. Any persons having work to do are asked to telephone Relief Officer Metheral, who will have a list of the names of the Board of Works men who soon will be looking for jobs.

This corner is dangerous for school children because of heavy traffic.

All are Kinsmen who are on Active Service.

SOMEBODY'S HEADACHE

Jack Huggins, secretary of the Board of Education advised the members Thursday night that 96 applications had been received for the position of chief caretaker at the Collegiate. The committee on appointments have a mean task ahead of them, reducing this number to the point of selection.

Business Men Honor Leslie Ashton

The Peterborough business men on Thursday night honored Leslie Ashton, the advertising manager of the Examiner, on the eve of his departure to join the Royal Canadian Air Force where he again will take up the work he left off when the Great War ended in 1918.

The banquet was held in the Hotel Champlain and Mr. Ashton was presented with a beautiful wrist watch. Mr. Ashton has always taken a very keen interest in the Business Men's Association, and has been one of its most active members since organization some four years ago.

In the absence of Chris Hughes, the president of the Association, the presentation was made by Jim Doris, secretary, who expressed what was felt by all of the members, and also by all of those in the city who were privileged in knowing Mr. Ashton, "We are losing," said Mr. Doris, "one of our most enthusiastic members, one who has been a conscientious attendant at our meetings, and one who has been of invaluable help to us in the past."

Mr. Ashton has been commissioned in the R.C.A.F., and Mr. Doris explained that this is the second time that he has donned the Air Force blue. In the first Great War he was with the R.A.F., both in France and in Italy. It is said that he was one of the youngest Canadians in the first flight over Germany.

The watch is to be a memento of his connection with the Association, the speaker said, and he voiced the feeling of all, that time would again see Les in his place amongst the members.

In replying, Mr. Ashton said he was grateful that the meeting had been called, because it afforded him an opportunity to say good-bye to his many friends in the Association. He remarked that he hoped the work of the Association would continue, and pointed to its successful efforts in the past.

The officer, in receiving the timepiece, told of another meeting of similar character, held about a quarter of a century ago. He was then also presented with a watch, and with a fleeting smile that could have belonged to the past, took it out of his pocket and told the members that it had been given to him by "the folks back home." It is, he said, in this way that he will regard the new one—as a token from the folks back home, for he now regards Peterborough as his home.

Presentation By Kiwanis

Mr. Ashton was honored today at the weekly meeting of the Kiwanis Club at the Empress Hotel. He was presented with a handsome pipe, and the presentation speech was made by Charles Saunders, manager of the Richard Hall Company.

Mr. Saunders said that the club was losing a valuable member, and that the heartfelt best wishes of all go with Mr. Ashton. In style, quite typical, the speaker said that he had not had sufficient time in which to uncover the officer's shortcomings, and even if he did know his failings, would hesitate to enumerate them, because the speaker for the meeting was Rev. H. L. Roberts, the pastor of his church, and Mr. Saunders has a great regard for his esteem.

Replying, Mr. Ashton said that he was glad he had become a member of the Peterborough Kiwanis Club, and that he had derived benefits from it that were manifold. In thanking the members for the pipe, he said that a touching courtesy had been the membership card, extended to him by J. A. McKone, the secretary of the club, on the bottom of which was written "For the duration." He said that he would be pleased to take advantage of the opportunity the card afforded, and to visit other clubs, as a representative of Peterborough. He said he hoped that his association with the Air Force would be one that would reflect credit upon the Peterborough Kiwanis Club, in which he is privileged in being a member.

To Unveil Portrait Of Noted Missionary

HIAWATHA, Nov. 15—(ENS). — Rev. F. C. Stephenson, D.D., Toronto, will visit Hiawatha on Sunday next. Dr. Stephenson will speak at both the afternoon and evening services, at 2.30 and 7 o'clock.

At the evening service a portrait of the late Rev. James Evans, noted missionary, will be unveiled in the church.

WANT JUNIOR SHOW

Without grounds and also without their main show, directors of the Peterborough Exhibition are going to make a determined effort to keep this feature operating as a contribution to agricultural work, and also to keep it here. The directors discussed it the other night, with other things, but their decision is being deferred until the annual meeting in January. However, Tom Brown says the directors feel that they built up this junior department, extended it into a two-day affair, and they are extremely reluctant to suspend it next August. They have also been assured by Gordon Matthews that he is prepared to continue the banquets which featured the junior show, and to help in every way he can.

Dynamite Laden Car Topples Into Highway Ditch

Two Springville well-diggers, Charles Kemp and Ernest Lake, narrowly missed a terrible death on Highway 28 this morning when the coupe in which they were riding skidded on the icy hill and toppled into a deep ditch upside down. The car carried 40 sticks of explosives in a box along with detonating equipment but fortunately the sticks did not explode. Provincial Constable Lloyd McClure is shown ABOVE bending over the car, with Charles Kemp, the driver, at the RIGHT. Some of the explosives are in the containers on the ground. The accident occurred about a mile west of the Kawartha Golf Club.

Car Overturns With Box Of Dynamite

Two Springville men flirted with death on the slippery surface of Highway 28 this morning in a coupe carrying 40 sticks of dynamite and detonator caps.

The car went into a spin on a hill two miles west of the Kawartha Golf Club and skidded into the ditch, turning upside down. The top of the car was stove in and the front damaged in the spill. The two men, Charles Kemp and Ernest Lake, of Springville, crawled out of the car after the box of dynamite had smacked against their heads.

The men were en route north to blast out a well and explosives were in a box on the top of the seat behind them. The highway was in a treacherous condition and the tires of the car were worn smooth, causing the car to start the skid.

"This is certainly our lucky day," said Kemp as he carried the box of dynamite out of the car.

Provincial Traffic Officer Lloyd McClure who investigated the mishap ordered the men to transport the dynamite in another car to the scene of operations and not to put it in their own car again, owing to the slippery highway and the condition of the car.

Volunteer Guard To Hold Smoker

All arrangements are completed for the first smoker to be held by the Volunteer Civic Guard at Legion Hall, Tuesday evening, 8 o'clock. The arm bands will be admittance fee.

Fire Chief George Gimblett was a visitor Thursday night and took a keen interest in the guard. He is on the provincial committee which is making the plans for A.R.P. duties, in which work the guard will no doubt be used.

Signal practice was taken up for the first time and some of the old timers will have to freshen up a bit. Ernie Watson's first aid class had a session. All ranks including officers, took the physical exercises and all agreed that it is the most interesting part of the work.

The members are requested to recruit another hundred men, as they will all be needed to carry out the work that is ahead of the guard.

French Indo-China is over a third larger than France, but has less than half the population.

4,500 Tickets Is Objective Set For "Smash Hitler Night"

The Peterborough Business Men's Association has set as its objective the sale of 4,500 tickets for the "Smash Hitler Night" to be held at each of the three theatres next Wednesday. The project was discussed at the meeting of the Association in the Hotel Champlain on Thursday night.

Tickets are available at the theatres and in most retail stores. Manufacturing plants have been issued tickets, and the advance sale has been encouraging. It was disclosed that the management of the Centre Theatre had arranged to be responsible for the tickets of 40 children from the Children's Aid and St. Vincent's Orphanage for the early show.

It is the intention of the Association to give away more that $2,000 worth of prizes. The prizes will be divided equally among the theatres and then divided again equally between the two shows, the early and the late.

The arrangement is one of patriotic interest because, since the prizes are to be Government stamps or certificates, Canada's War Effort will be helped to the extent of about $2,000. It is not a money-making venture in any way, and the Association will not realize a profit from the undertaking.

Graham when they were convicted of violating the Defence of Canada Regulations. Bass was found guilty of continuing to be a member of the outlawed Communist party while Zailig was convicted of having in his possession literature intended or likely to be prejudicial to the efficient prosecution of the war.

Train Services As Usual

"Business as usual" in England is the report in a letter received by Mrs. George Groombridge, of this city, from England. Although the German bombers have wrecked parts of London, there are still acres of it untouched, and business and train services continue as usual.

The writer's home is in Middlesex, and though the bombers pay frequet visits there, the spirit of "never say die," prevails. Hitler will find it hard to break this spirit, the writer says, and will find that England is different from many of the other European countries. Many of the raids often result only in empty houses, being hit, and many of the bombs fall in open fields.

The Air Raid Wardens have required that everyone in the writer's district name a "next of kin," so if a person is killed or injured, some relative will be notified. Those in England know the feeling of being in the "front lines" now, and she tells of a captured German airman who, on being shot down, claimed to be glad to be in England, and said that his brother had been shot in Germany because he refused to kill defenceless people in parts of England.

Annual Bazaar Being Held By The Legion

Alderman James Dutton and Lt.-Col. Max Sloane, Zone Commander, officially opened the annual two-day bazaar of the Ladies' Auxiliary to the Canadian Legion Thursday afternoon, held each year to raise funds for the needs of men who have already nobly served their country is one not to be overlooked in the hurry and excitement of present war work activities, and members of the Auxiliary continue their quiet, helpful assistance with no thought of praise or public recognition.

Attractive tables lining the walls of the Legion Hall were laden with well made, colorful articles which will be eagerly picked up for Christmas gifts. Of outstanding interest was a table laid with twenty-eight pieces of indigo blue glass, donated to the Auxiliary, on which a draw will be made tonight. Other draws of value, including a fine framed picture of the King, worked in cross-stitch on linen, will also be made tonight. The fish pond and rummage sale were centres of attention, as well as fine patchwork quilts, handmade woollen articles, and gay print aprons.

Tea was served at individual tables, and at the central table, arranged with a lace cloth and pink single chrysanthemums, tea was poured by Mrs. J. Mills, a past president of the Auxiliary, and Mrs. E. Patterson, retired treasurer. Mrs. E. Houghton was general convener of the affair, and treasurer was Mrs. Walter Hughes.

In charge of the various displays were: Novelty table, Mrs. A. T. Pink assisted by Mrs. A. Hamlin; apron table, Mrs. F. Sarginson, assisted by Mrs. A. Cook; woollen goods and quilts, Mrs. W. G. A SCOUTER'S PLEA

W. A. Brown, a scout leader in the northend apealed to the Board of Education for accommodation in Queen Alexandra School for his 11th Peterborough Troop of 16 boys. He intimated lack of quarters might result in disbanding and they want one room for two hours each Friday night. Inspector Wightman and H. G. Walker, chairman of the Property Committee were given authority to act after the request is investigated.

New Uniforms For Cadets Are Requested

It's not fair to ask teen-age boys to parade in rags, Captain H. A. Craig, cadet instructor told members of the Board of Education at the regular monthly session Thursday night, when the cadet council made an appeal for funds for new uniforms.

Captain Craig was accompanied by Lt. Col. J. A. Dewart, M.C., officer commanding the Prince of Wales Rangers, and Harry Graham, a member of the Collegiate teaching staff.

In his address to the Board, Captain Craig said the uniform problem is an old one, and dates back to 1929, when the Government discontinued the annual grant of money for purchasing new uniforms. He said the Cadet Committee had met on October 23 and the decision reached was to seek financial aid at once from the Board.

450 Uniforms Needed

The old khaki uniforms cost about $10 each, but it is difficult to obtain this material now, because of war demands. Captain Craig said the committee had obtained a sample uniform consisting of garnet beret, grey sweatshirt and grey trousers, the shirt having the school crest in garnet. This outfit would retail for $3.50 and already has the approval of the boys at the school.

"We have 487 boys in the Cadet corps, but 450 uniforms at a cost of $1,575.00 would be sufficient," he said.

"This money would come from the citizens," said Mr. Diplock, in a sort of query to determine if the government assisted in any way.

Captain Craig replied in the affirmative, but at this point Alex Sollitt pointed out that the money granted by the government, $1.25 per cadet each year was not always used for uniforms and the citizens had received the benefit of it.

Captain Craig said he believed the Cadet corps had been in existence for about 47 years. He added that the annual grant made it possible for the corps to look smart, but no new uniforms had been purchased for 11 years, and they are not fit to be worn. "It is not the fault of the Board," he said.

"The cadets have not been able to parade as a unit in recent years, not even when Lord Tweedsmuir was here because the uniforms were so shabby; then, too, at the time of inspection the officers had to scurry around and borrow uniforms from soldiers."

Col. Dewart said the cadets were handicapped because they were not properly clothed, and he pointed out that because the unit was affiliated with the Prince of Wales Rangers, he was anxious that the corps flourish and be a credit to the city. He expressed the thanks of the regiment for the Board's co-operation in giving the Rangers mechanical section, the use of the school workshop.

One of the Collegiate pupils was brought in togged out in the new outfit, of beret, sweatshirt and grey trousers, and the Board expressed approval of the uniform.

After the deputation had left, Dr. Moir said the uniforms would not be required until next March, so suggested that the Board pass along a recommendation to the incoming board approving the idea and urging that assistance be given. Alex Sollitt seconded the motion, and the response was unanimous.

Board To Name Full-Time Dental Officer

K. S. Wightman, school inspector, urged expansion of the dental services in a talk to the Board of Education Thursday evening, which was a follow-up to a letter which he had sent the Board on the subject.

In brief, his proposal was that the Board employ a full time dentist and nurse, and set up and equip an office in the South Central School building, where all school dental work could be done.

The appeal was favorably received and the argument and discusion terminated with a motion. Dr. A. Moir and D. T. Diplock approving the principal of hiring a full time man. G. Wilson Craw took the next step when he moved that the Board advertise for applicants for the position, asking each applicant to state salary.

Following this action the members discussed a tentative outline of the work, and agreed that the dentist would work six days a week, starting at nine in the morning, and would also work during the Christmas and Easter holidays, but not in legal holidays. Whether he would do any work during the summer holiday period is something that will have to be decided at a later date. All applications must be in by November 25.

In his talk Mr. Wightman said it was an old appeal, and he pointed out that several cities including St. Catharines had learned the wisdom of such a step. Several other were considering introducing the plan, and it was approved at a recent school convention at Ottawa.

Mrs. W. R. Morris, who was in the chair owing to the slight illness which made it impossible for D. G. H. Melton to be on hand, said the proposal is incorporated in the new scheme to co-ordinate health services in Peterborough. She also pointed out, as did Dr. Moir, that the Health committee of the Board had already approved of the proposal. T. J. Carley and Alex Sollitt both spoke in favor of the plan.

Mr. Wightman said that at present Dr. Graham is part time dentist and the equipment he uses, owned by the Board, is inadequate. His salary is $1,500 and a part time dental nurse is paid $350.

He stressed the importance of there being no break in the work, and said even though every effort had been made to complete all the work this year, it was found necessary to postpone work in one of the largest schools until after January 1.

Hardy—Cryderman

HASTINGS, Nov. 14 (ENS) — A lovely wedding was solemnized at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Allan Cryderman of Sutton West, on Saturday, November 9th, at 12.30 o'clock, when their daughter, Florence Evelyn, became the bride of Ewart Boyce Hardy, son of Mr. Nelson Hardy and the late Mrs. Hardy of Dartford. Rev. C. W. Kay of Warkworth, brother-in-law of the bride, officiated.

The ceremony was performed under an arch decorated with pink and white streamers and silver bells.

The bride was given away by her father, and looked charming in a street-length frock of cherry-bark crepe, with rust accessories. She carried a bouquet of carnations and roses, tied with white satin ribbon.

Mrs. John Hopkins of Jackson's Point was matron of honor, wearing a street-length dress of British navy alpaca, matching accessories and carrying a bouquet of carnations and roses.

The groom was assisted by his twin-brother, Stewart Hardy. The wedding march was played by the bride's nieces, Joyce and Wilma Kay of Warkworth. During the signing of the register, Joyce and Wilma Kay sang very sweetly "The Voice That Breathed O'er Eden."

The dining room was tastefully decorated with pink and white streamers, and the table was centred with a wedding cake and pink candles.

About thirty-five guests were present. The young couple left on a motor trip to Huntsville and other points.

Millbrook Tea Honors Bride-Elect

MILLBROOK, Nov. 15—(ENS).—Mrs. M. McDowell entertained at a trousseau tea on Wednesday afternoon and evening at her home, Main Street South, in honor of her eldest daughter, Dorothy Helen, whose marriage to Earl Eric McKinstry of Peterborough takes place in St. Andrew's United Church, Millbrook, on Saturday, November 23, at 2 p.m.

Over one hundred guests attended the tea, which was a most enjoyable social event. The door was attended by Miss Beatrice McDowell, younger sister of the bride-to-be.

Receiving with Mrs. McDowell and the bride-elect in the living room was Mrs. Elizabeth McKinstry, of Peterborough, mother of the groom-to-be. Mrs. A. L. Sisco invited guests to the tea room. Pouring tea at a table lovely with ecru lace cloth, silver basket of Sweetheart roses, and four tall pink tapers burning in silver holders, were Mrs. George Hillier and Mrs. J. Robinson, of Peterborough, aunts of Mr. McKinstry's.

Assisting with the service in the tea room were Mrs. Russell Smith of Millbrook and Mrs. E. Kitney of Peterborough; in the evening, Mrs. Sisco poured tea, and assistants included the Misses Barbara Sisco Bryar Edmunds, and Madeline McDowell of Peterborough, the latter a sister of the bride-to-be.

Upstairs, the helpers were Mrs. Frank Stinson, who showed the many and beautiful gifts, the latter including a lovely dinner and tea set in Spode china, presented to Miss Dorothy by the staff of the Johnson Motors Company, with which firm she has held an office position for the past few years, and a bedroom chair, upholstered in rose brocade, from the office staff, showing the trousseau was Mrs. Rose Edmunds, and the lovely linens, Miss Edna Godfrey of Peterborough.

B.C. Wedding Of Local Interest

MILLBROOK, Nov. 15—(ENS).—A wedding of much interest locally took place in Christ Church Cathedral, Vancouver, B.C., on Wednesday, November 6, at 8 p.m., when Margaret Isobel, daughter of the Venerable Archdeacon William Simpson of Millbrook, and the late Mrs. Simpson, became the bride of Captain, the Reverend John R. B. Vance, son of Inspector and Mrs. J. F. C. B. Vance, of Vancouver.

Very Reverend Cecil Swanson, Dean of the cathedral, performed the ceremony, the service being fully choral, and the bride was given in marriage by Mr. George French, of Victoria, B.C., a life-long friend of the family. She wore her wedding dress of ivory taffeta, the skirt sweeping into a train beyond the frilled hemline, the wide-shouldered bodice fitted above a short peplum, and carried a Colonial style bouquet of gardenias, pink roses and bouvardia. Her-two-tiered veil embroided at the hem line, fell in cascade effect from a coronet of orange blossoms.

She was attended by Miss Marian Vance, the groom's sister, who wore a French dress of petal pink silk net, the fitted bodice trimmed with black lace in delicate pattern, and hat of moulded black velvet. Her flowers were also arranged in Colonial style, and was composed of pink and white roses, frilled in fine black lace.

The groom, who is the assistant clergyman at the cathedral, and also chaplain to the Second Regiment D.C.O.R. at Nanaimo, was supported by Lieutenant John R. Hornepayne, and the ushers included Lieutenant T. C. B. Vance, and Flying Officers C. G. Diamond. During the signing of the register, Miss Gladys Simmons sang "O Promise Me."

Home and School Association News

Delightful musical numbers included two piano solos by Miss Thelma Zavitz; Miss Roberta Devell of Omemee sang sweetly "Till the Lights of London Shine Again" and "When You Wish Upon a Star." She was accompanied by Mr. R. B. Harle.

Following the National Anthem, games and contests were played, with refreshments served under the convenership of Mrs. W. Prise and Mrs. J. Johnston.

CENTRAL SCHOOOL

Over 150 enthusiastic visitors were welcomed at Central School "Open House" held Thursday afternoon from three to four o'clock in observation of Educational Week. Guests were welcome by the Home and School Association president, Mrs. George Leeming.

The parents and their friends visited classrooms where young students were busy with geography, penmanship, art work and other projects. It was a happy occasion, not only because the children were so pleased with the interest taken in their work, but because of the harmonious relationship which existed between teacher and parent, who are glad to know each other for the child's sake. A register was placed outside the classroom of the principal, Mr. Robert Bolton, where visitors registered, and were directed to the classroom by pupils.

Later teachers and mothers met for tea and cookies in the hall adjoining the domestic science room. Girls of the entrance class made tea and served cookies made by the mothers. The courtesy and observation of the girls around the tea table was noticeable as an indication of fine training, as well as a knack of working happily together. Mrs. Bruce Fowler, immediate past president of the Association, poured tea. Baby chrysanthemums in lovely autumn hues made an attractive centre-piece. Mrs. Alex Sollitt, social convener, assisted by a committee, was in charge of tea arrangements.

The open house was a friendly and enthusiastic gathering of parents and citizens who are more than ever sure that an opportunity to visit the school in their community should not be missed. It is on such occasions that achievements of educational efforts are noted; that the objectives for which their children strive are understood; and that parents learn first hand, from the teachers, the actual needs of the child. It is in this way, also, that parents and teachers will understand each other better, paving the way for rapid progress in a practical school system.

By MARY MOORE.

We have been hunting for various ways of serving wheat germ, the most successful of which—uncooked—is sprinkled in the bottom of fruit dishes, before fruit is served—sweeten fresh fruit with corn syrup and pass cream at table—this does for bananas, peaches, apples and cooked fruits (with the corn syrup).

Waldoncroft Tea Biscuits

Using 2 cups packaged tea biscuit mixture, add the prescribed amount of milk or water on package and add ¼ cup wheat germ—bake, spread on buttered pan at 550 deg. Fahr. for about 7 minutes. Remove from oven and serve immediately cut in squares with plenty of butter—unsalted preferably. You will notice how fast these would be to make and serve.

Mix wheat germ with the filling of sandwiches—peanut butter takes it up very well, and meat spreads take on at least 2 tablespoons to each cup of spread.

If wheat germ is strictly fresh and kept carefully covered it does not develop that objectionable rancid flavor that makes so many people avoid it.

I admit I am faddy,—but recently I read again of the value of the oil in orange skins—this writer was deploring the waste in throwing orange skins in the garbage—so we occasionally grate the rinds before they are squeezed for juice and mix the rind with orange juice and sugar and butter and spread it on hot toast for the youngsters for breakfast. Good.

HOME WORK IS IMPORTANT IN PLANNING FOR FUTURE. Parents Make Great Mistake by Not Preparing Their Children to Face Real Tests of Future.

One of the strangest things in the world is that so few parents make any intelligent effort to fit their children for life. They know that the race is to the swift and the victory to the strong, but they do not train their youngsters to be runners, nor develop in them the mental and moral muscles that would enable them to fight their way to success. With a sublime optimism they trust their sons' and daughters' fate to luck and pray that some miracle will happen that will make them grow up into being fine men and women, instead of hoodlums and criminals and failures. No phrase is oftener on the lips of fathers and mothers than "you can't tell how children are going to turn out," Yet every human being above the grade of a moron knows that this is not true and that, 99 times out of a hundred, how a child turns out depends absolutely upon the way it is reared. "Bring up a child in the way it should go and when it is old it will not depart from it" is just as true now as when Solomon said it. Every parent knows that there are certain traits of character that can be developed in children, certain habits that can be formed in them, a certain polish that they can be given that will almost inevitably secure their happiness and prosperity. Yet how few fathers and mothers ever take the trouble to develop these qualities in their youngsters.

All parents, for instance, wish their children to "get along in the world," as the phrase goes, and they are perfectly aware that the ability to do that depends largely upon their being disciplined, yet a disciplined child in these days is such a rarity that it is almost a museum specimen.

Teach Children Obedience.

You don't see fathers and mothers teaching their children obedience and respect for the law and regard for other peoples' rights because that is going to be first aid to popularity when they are grown and thrown out on their own.

You don't see parents training their children in habits of industry because the boys and girls who are not afraid of work are the ones that every employer is looking for. You don't see parents teaching their children how to save their money and spend it wisely because every fortune is founded on thrift.

Nor do parents teach their children how to control their appetites in order that they may not be drunkards when they grow up; or to finish every job they undertake because it is only those who have the grit to carry on, when the sledding gets hard and the work tiresome and one is tempted to change, who ever win success. It is the quitters who always fail.

Nor do you often see parents taking the trouble to teach their children good manners, yet they are the magic that will open every door and carry a girl or a boy farther than anthing else in life.

Planning for Future.

All parents expect their children to marry, yet they do nothing to prepare them for marriage. You never see fathers and mothers teaching their children anything about the responsibilities of married life and how to make a success of it.

Mother doesn't teach Mama how to cook and sew so that she can make a comfortable home for her husband. She doesn't teach her how to count her pennies in case she marries a poor man.

She doesn't teach her how to give the soft answer that turns away wrath when she and Tom disagree. She doesn't teach her that marriage isn't a picnic for any wife, but it is a life sentence as hard labor if she keeps her marriage a going concern.

Nor does Father teach John that marriage means sacrifice to a man as well as to a woman; that no man can be both a bachelor and a good husband; that getting along with a wife takes the patience of Job and the tact of a diplomat, and that a man has no more right to welch on his matrimonial bargain than he has on any other contract.

And queerest of all, although parents know that their children are going to have to be self-supporting when they are grown, they do not bother themselves to fit their youngsters for the occupation for which Nature intended them, though they know that most of the failures in the world are the result of the people who are round pegs getting into square holes.

When Tom and Mamie get through school and ask: "Where do we go from here?" Father and Mother are generally just as bewildered as they are.

Tom and Mamie have been under their eyes every instant since they were born, yet their parents have never observed them closely enough to see what aptitudes they have. And so for all the help their parents can give them they might just as well have been orphans.

Parents are keen enough about giving their children a formal education, but what they need far more than being sent to college is more home work.

Distinguished are this season's clothes at Alice T. Williams' Character Clothes Shop, 147 Hunter street. For instance, there's a cocktail dress of sophisticated black silk crepe with white metallic bodice and a shower of sequins frosting the pockets, and one with wide bands of grosgrain on the skirt of unpressed pleats. I was enchanted with a superb smoke grey model of exquisite lines and sequin pockets, and a Hush green frock, almost Chinese in design, that is a reproduction of a costly New York model. There are individual tailored frocks, too, and glamorous formals. Boucle coats of subtle detail hold the eye with such luxurious furs as cross fox, Jap mink, Kolinsky squirrel, Persian lamb or Mouton beaver.

Should your complexion look out at the world through dark glasses, take your problem to Mrs. Marie Murduff at 409 Wolfe street and have those surface blemishes removed. Blackheads, moles, superfluous hair, all these do occur, and, short of wrapping your face in cotton wool, no complexion can escape from the tarnishing influence of grimy air, dusty streets and ordinary weather-beating. Mrs. Murduff is a trained operator who specializes in electrolysis, the permanent removal by tiny electrical impulses, of superfluous hair. Pimples, blackheads, warts or other blemishes may also be removed, and if you wish you can say goodbye forever to those straggly bits of eyebrow that don't belong in the main "arch." 'Phone 6423, or write Mrs. Marie Murduff, 409 Wolfe street.

You'll never know just how dashing accessories are until you've visited Muriel's Specialty Shoppe at 202 Charlotte street. You'll find tricky little belts, 'nutty' jewelry, and fascinating gadgets for your lapel, of course, but our attention was riveted on feather-weight wool sweaters, the new in blouses, tweed jackets and slim-fitting skirts from which one may speedily build a reputation as a pretty "keen" dresser. You'll look like an animated streak of lightning in the cosy hooded skating outfit of scarlet wool faille—we've seen nothing to touch it—or if you prefer relaxful moments while the ice freezes, try snuggling into an ultra-chic quilted silk dressing gown, velvet, corduroy or flannel housecoat—they have them in luscious shades.

Why not change your style and get new life into your crowning glory—let an operator at the Kawartha Beauty Salon, 210 Charlotte street, perk it up with a permanent as a starter, then shut the eyes of your conscience while the operator works the new perm. into a pompadour, or curled-up-on-top hair-do if your face is round and plumpish. Try short curls fanning out from the temples if you're the peakish type, or a long, curled-up gamin bob if someone once told you that you're just a fragile little flower. Try it on your husband for dinner—I'll wager he'll take more notice than of that fussy dessert you've planned—or if it's a new beau, girls, a Kawartha hair style will help more than you'd think for. Dial 7385.

You'll go the gay bright way gowned to delight your escort if you've found your dance frock at Levine's Dress Shop, whether you go in for sophisticated heights in a black rayon crepe dinner gown with a staccato red midway bordered in gold embroidery, or military in a turquoise crepe with matching jacket and gold beading on the draped bodice. I could continue indefinitely about formals to dance you merrily through the season, but I'm reserving space to mention the dressy little crepes you'll find for teas and dinner date; the tailored little frocks you like for the office—and I can't call a halt without referring to the 1941 word you'll find here in coats—they're something special—at 369 George street.

We Noticed . . .

. . .That skirts with pleats are newer looking than straight or circular ones; the drop shoulder and bertha collar have come back for evening wear.

. . .That midnight blue is combined with Indian red in a dressy suit with long jacket; grey, green and copper in a softly blended plaid makes a coat dress.

. . .That finest woollen ribbon yarn in gold colors makes a knitted shirtwaist dress; the trend in caracul coats is towards the fitted silhouette; much plaid in both wild and subdued patterns is seen.

Regal Quarters For Slum Babies

LONDON, Nov. 6—(CP) — Poor mothers from London east end are giving birth to babies in regal surroundings.

Evacuated from their bomb-shattered tenement areas, the women are sent to a big estate, for many years a residence of the Queen's parents, the Earl and the late Countess of Strathmore.

Penniless mothers now sit knitting in the room where the Queen used to sleep and also in the King's former bedroom which has been turned into a large ward.

The estate, set amid beautiful surroundings, was turned over to the London Hospital, to be used as an emergency house for expectant mothers.

Report Raider Resembled French Warship

ST. JOHN'S, Nfld., Nov. 15—(CP Cable)—Action of the armed merchant cruiser Jervis Bay in hurling herself between a convoy and the big guns of a German warship, enabling 30 vessels out of 38 in the convoy to escape, was worthy of the navy's highest traditions, survivors of the eight lost ships said yesterday.

But for the Jervis Bay, said spokesmen for the 92 men landed at a Newfoundland port, the Nazi raider would have sunk every ship in the convoy. Eleven of the men, picked up after their lifeboats had been tossed about the Atlantic for 36 hours, needed medical attention. Four of these were injured seriously enough to be taken to hospital.

The men's faces glowed when they spoke of the Jervis Bay. "It was nothing short of suicide," said one, "when they closed with the enemy. But it was indeed according to the highest traditions of the navy."

He said the raider first fired on the convoy at a distance of about eight miles. Immediately a smoke screen was laid to protect the convoy and its ships were ordered to scatter.

"The Jervis Bay closed with the raider like a flash—like a bulldog leaping at a big bear. It was an amazing spectacle of gallantry.

"Even when she (the Jervis Bay) was afire and sinking, in fact when she was all but submerged, her guns kept on firing."

Some survivors said the raider resembled a French warship. Others thought she belonged to the Graf Spee class—the German pocket battleships—but the darkness made it difficult to make out her lines and eventually the ships eluded her.

Godbout Refuses Cabinet Post?

MONTREAL, Nov. 15 (CP).—The Gazette says to-day that Premier Adelard Godbout of Quebec has turned down a suggestion that he enter the Dominion Government as a member of the Cabinet.

"All the persuasiveness of Prime Minister Mackenzie King to lure Quebec's Adelard Godbout to Ottawa as a ranking minister of the Dominion Cabinet has been of no avail for the time being," the Gazette says.

"The Premier of Quebec, less than a month ago, turned thumbs down on what to anybody but him might be a tempting offer, to join the ranks of the elder statesmen from the hillock of Canada's capital city."

BRANTFORD, Nov. 15.—Pilot Officer Alex Zatonski, R.A.F. 25-year-old Polish-Canadian of this city, is convalescing in a British hospital after a four-mile parachute jump and a swim in the English Channel following his escape from his burning plane and Nazi bullets. He hasn't yet told his mother, Mrs. John Zatonski, 10 Buffalo street, about it, but a letter to a friend tells the story.

"Perhaps he didn't want to worry me," Mrs. Zatonski said.

Pilot Office Zatonski was in the air battle 24,000 feet up when he baled out. He had been hit in the leg by a bullet and his plane was fired as bullets ripped his gas tank. He coolly described his being shot down as "a deliberate attempt on my life."

"After some months' training I was attached to a fighter squadron near London flying Hurricanes. At the start of the war there were four of us from Brantford in the R.A.F., but George Lambert has since been killed. The other two, Pete Valachos and Marc Sargent, are on bombers.

"I met Pete Valachos only yesterday, as he is here on leave as a reward for completing more than twenty trips over Germany.

"I am at present convalescing in hospital as a result of an accident—or should I say a deliberate attempt on my life? I was flying near Dover a few weeks ago and when we engaged the enemy my gas tank was set on fire and I had to bale out. At that time I was 24,000 feet up, so it took me about half an hour to get down.

"On top of that, I was treated to an early-morning swim, as I came down in the Channel. But I got away lucky, with burned hands and also smaller burns on my face. They also took a piece of bullet but of my leg. I'm quite fit again and expect to join my unit shortly."

IN MEMORIAM

LITTLE.—In loving memory of Hazel, Hilda and Billy Little, who died November 15, 1939.

There the buds from earth transplanted
For our coming watch and wait
In the Upper Garden growing
Just within the pearly gate.
Though our hearts may break with sorrow
By the grief so hard to bear,
We shall meet them some bright morning
In the Upper Garden there.
—Mother, Dad and sister Ruby.

ROWE.—In memory of our dear mother and wife, who departed from us November 16, 1939.

ger like this!"

"They are good." Lona found herself devouring hers hungrily. After the exhileration of the water she was starved. And it was such fun to eat like this.

They had finished their coffee when she caught sight of a bathing party coming along the sands from the Allen cottage, and her heart jumped. Gertrude Allen was leading, and among the girls following her was another familiar face. Facing them, swift panic seized Lona. All the hurt of those last days in Bridgewater came rushing back; those days after her father had gone away, and she had been dropped by everybody, stared at and out by these very girls.

Would they cut her now, she wondered? Before Jim! She knew suddenly that it would hurt far more to be cut in front of Jim. Shrinking, she wished she had never come here. She should have known better. Following her eyes, Jim took in the strolling girls.

"Friends of yours?" he asked.

"I—don't know." Had she looked at him she would have seen a look of understanding leap into his eyes. Swiftly he calculated the distance to their parked car.

"Shall we—go?" he asked, his voice carrying an added tenderness. "We can slip over to the car before they get here."

For a moment Lona was tempted. Then she threw up her head. "No!" she said almost fiercely. "I want another swim. Come on."

"Good girl!" she heard him say as she started toward the water. As she approached a silence fell on the group at the water's edge. For a moment Gertrude Allen looked at her, startled, then, carelessly, she turned her back and reached for the red water ball beside her. A whipped feeling caught at Lona. Gertrude Allen had been one of her best friends.

Wading out through the water, she plunged in fiercely and struck off toward the middle of the lake. For a moment she forgot Jim as the old bewildered pain possessed her. It was so unjust. She had done nothing—nothing. And they acted as if she were a leper! Cutting through the water with savage strokes, she sent herself flying forward recklessly. Past the float she went on out into the rippling blue water. In the old days she had often tried to swim the length of the lake, and she had been on the point of succeeding when the tragedy that had blasted her life had overtaken her.

She remembered that old ambition now and, gritting her teeth, set herself for the grind she had taken so joyously in the past. The need to express her outraged feelings put a savage fierceness into her strokes that soon sent her far past the middle of the lake. Jim's voice calling out a worried protest came to her, but she kept on doggedly. She had made three-fourths of the long grind before she realized, suddenly, that she was terribly tired. Her muscles, weakened by disuse, began to protest. Her arms went oddly numb and she felt faint. But she resolved, savagely, not to call for help and satisfy that crowd of snobs back there.

Floating for a moment's rest, she lifted her head for a glimpse of the shore that was her destination. It was farher away than she had thought—terrifyingly far away.

Whirlaway Wins Walden Race

PIMLICO RACETRACK, Baltimore, Nov. 15—(AP)—Running over one of the heaviest, "toughest" racing strips observed in years, Warren Wright's Whirlaway, considered by many the best juvenile of the year, closed out his 1940 campaign with an easy victory in the 34th Walden here Thursday's rainy afternoon.

The strech-running chestnut, which will be shipped to Miami and wintered there, boosted his earnings for the year to $77,275, tops in his division, as he annexed the $8,140 first money by four lengths for his seventh success in 16 starts. First favorite of the day to score, Whirlaway paid $5 for two and plowed the mile and a sixteenth in 1:52 1-5.

Second in the field of eight juveniles was Mrs. E. C. Lewis' Magnificent, while M. E. Ryan's Stimady earned the show, two lengths behind. The attendance was kept down to around 8,000 because of the relentless rain.

Whirlaway yesterday showed no tendency to bear out as he did when he finished third in the recent Pimlico Futurity. The veteran George Woolf let the son of Blenheim 2nd-Dustwhirl settle into his stride. After

Hand-Woven Indian Rug You Will Enjoy Making

Many Gay Rugs in New Booklet

A jolly colorful Navaho rug to brighten a boy's room and gladden his heart — or to add a gay note to your living-room!

Weave it easily from black and red cotton cloth and parcel - post string — on a simple wooden loom you can make at home.

Screw together 2-inch strips of wood to make a rectangular frame a little larger than 21½ by 36 inches —the size of the completed rug with fringe. On shorter sides drive in small wire nails about ¾ inch apart. Now you're ready to warp and weave.

When using string for the warp dye it black or you may prefer black candlewick yarn. Fabric for weaving should be cut in long strips ¾ inch wide.

To warp, wind string around the nails as shown in our diagram and carry back and forth across loom. Fasten securely and then with fingers or a tapestry needle weave fabric over and under warp threads —as in darning. A simple pattern shows you how to weave the striking design.

For pattern and complete directions for the Navaho rug, see our new 32-page booklet. Tells how to make lovely hooked rugs, too—also woven, braided and crocheted rugs, many other stunning kinds.

Send 15c in coins or stamps for your copy of HOW TO MAKE YOUR OWN RUGS to Examiner, Home Service, Peterborough. Be sure to write plainly your NAME, ADDRESS, and the NAME of booklet.

"The Authority on Authorities"

REFUSE TO BE LICKED

HAVE YOU ever counted up the number of winners and losers in your own hand and the dummy, and found no apparent way to avoid being set a trick? If that is the case, you have a choice of two alternatives. You may go ahead and play the hand according to what seems to be the natural way, and take your licking. Or you may study a bit more to see if there isn't some way to prevent a loser or two, perhaps by some sort of coup, squeeze or lead-throwing end-play. A great percentage of all these plays are made by declarers who seemed to be licked, but refused to be.

North and South had a part score of 40, so that 3-Diamonds constituted a game bid. North's 4-Diamonds was therefore a mild slam try. South accepted the invitation by using the Blackwood convention, and when his partner's response showed two aces, he was ready for small slam. His enthusiasm fell when he saw the dummy, upon West's lead of the heart K. There were apparently two losers to be disposed of in that suit, and no way to dispose of them.

A bit of study showed South a method. After taking the first trick with dummy's heart A, he led the spade Q, covered by the K and A, settled the trumps with two rounds, and realized that East was almost surely out of red cards, since West figured to have a five-card heart suit. If this was so he could make his contract, by stripping his two hands of black cards.

So he played to the club A, ruffed the spade 3, ruffed the club J in dummy, then led the spade 4, discarding the heart 5. East, of course, had to win the spade, and it was his lead. With only black cards, of which South had none, he returned a club. Declarer threw his last heart on it and trumped in the dummy, so that he had no more losers and made his contract.

What is the principal reason why South should not bid 2-No Trumps on this deal, after North's 1-Heart?

500 PLANES LASH LONDON

Nazis Try To Draw Out RAF Reserves But Bait Doesn't Tempt British

BRITISH HAVE MADE THEIR DECISION OF LETTING CITIES BE BOMBED RATHER THAN DRAWING ON RESERVE AND ARE STICKING TO IT AND THERE'S THE RUB.

BERLIN, Nov. 16.— How much punishment can a great western European city take in the form of massed bombing attacks before the city can no longer function politically, economically and morally and has to surrender?

How many railway stations have to be reduced to rubble? How many hours of sleep have to be lost? How many homes must be destroyed and how many human beings killed?

If enough people knew the answers to these questions, there might not be any wars. But nobody knows the answers.

More specifically nobody knows the answer to the question of how much punishment London can take. So there is a war—another war—and both the Germans and the British have gambled their national existences on the answer.

The Germans have gambled that they will be able to inflict such damage on London and on other British cities that the British either will have to surrender or will be forced to use their last reserve of fighter planes in an attempt to save the city—whereupon the German air force will be able to destroy the R.A.F. and England will lie open to conquest.

The British, on the other hand, have gambled that London and other cities will be able to take all the punishment the German air force can inflict on them; that the R.A.F. will be able to keep its reserve of fighter planes to ward off any German attempt to

Grand Scale Attack Beats Guns

Fires Beacon Midlands And Capital Casualties Run High

LONDON, Nov. 16 (CP)—German bombers, attacking in formation, smashed at London with sudden fury early today in a "grand scale" raid which the Press Association estimated involved upwards of 500 planes—as many as the Nazis reportedly hurled against industrial Coventry the night before.

The Press Association's air correspondent declared that "the enemy used as many planes as were used in the attack on Coventry," and added: "It was an attack on a grand scale."

Civilian casualties were feared great as explosives and fire bombs rained down through rifts in the clouded sky and shattered apartment buildings, shops and homes in the suddenly intensified attack.

A government communique which described the bombing as "heavy and sustained" declared that "in view of the weight of the attack" the number of dead and injured was smaller than "might have been expected."

Fires Light Bombers Way

While London echoed with the roar of bombs and the staccato bark of anti-aircraft guns, the red glow of fires in ruined Coventry guided other Nazi bombers to new attacks on England's industrial Midlands.

A communique, however, said "little damage and few casualties have been reported" from bombed Midlands communities and indicated there was no repetition of Thursday night's terrific concentrated assault which left parts of Coventry a rubble heap with more than 1,000

Laval Talks To Save Lorraine

Evacuation Goes On Despite 'Favorable' Parley

BERNE, SWITZERLAND, Nov. 16.—(AP).—Dispatches from Vichy to foreign diplomats here reported that Vice-Premier Pierre Laval had reached an agreement "in principle" with the Germans in Paris over the expulsion of French-speaking inhabitants from Lorraine.

Informed sources said details of the agreement were lacking and that it still was to be considered by the Vichy cabinet.

VICHY, France, Nov. 16—Vice-Premier Laval was reported having "very favorable" conferences with German officials at Paris today concerning a German order expelling French-speaking residents from the province of Lorraine.

The French government issued this statement:

"So far as the facts are concerned, the French government has presented the matter to the (German) armistice commission."

Railroad officials said yesterday that 6,000 Lorraine evacuees had been arriving in Lyon each day since Monday.

BERLIN, Nov. 16—(AP)—Germany, in order to avoid possible complications, is gradually withdrawing her 8,000 nationals in Greece authorized sources indicated today.

Germans who live in Greek cities already subjected to air attacks, such as Salonika, are the first to be recalled.

These measures were described as purely practical and not political.

Greek-German relations will continue as before, authoritative sources asserted.

Comfort By Adolf

Berlin, Nov. 16 (AP)

HITLER said in a message to the Japanese on the empire's 2,600th anniversary today that Japan would "reach her goal of successful peace in a protected living space, together with the German and Italian peoples, after a hard struggle for her vital rights."

"The Japanese people may proudly remember no enemy ever set foot in their island as master, and therefore they have maintained the purity of their race through millenniums," the message said.

Fireman Crushed Six Injured As Wall Topples

FORT WILLIAM, Ont., Nov. 16—(CP)—One man was killed and six injured, two seriously, when fire early today destroyed the Mandarin Cafe in Victoria Avenue.

Assistant Fire Chief J. A. McEwen was killed when crushed by a collapsing wall. The injured are Private Gordon Cyploski of Iroquois Falls; Private Phillips of Haldane, Ont., both members of the Algonquin Regiment; Thomas Ross, Rods McKenzie, Gordon Tennant, Harold Lockwood, firemen.

Cyploski was seriously injured when with Chief McEwen and Phillips he was caught beneath the tumbling front of the cafe. The two soldiers had been lending a hand in fighting the flames, believed to have started in the basement of the cafe from an unknown cause.

Ross was seriously hurt when he fell from the rear of the burning building, but the others suffered only slight injuries.

Flames were first noticed about 10 o'clock last night. For three hours firemen battled the conflagration, pouring water from the roof of nearby buildings whose wall prevented the fire from spreading.

About one o'clock this morning the whole front of the cafe collapsed crushing the assistant fire chief to death and injuring the two soldiers.

The restaurant was owned by the W. J. Ross estate. It was a total loss but no damage was given.

German Ship Dash Short Lived

One Limps Back to Port Second Burns; 2 Others Still In View

TAMPICO, Mexico, Nov. 16—(AP)—One of four German cargo vessels which sailed out into the stormy Gulf of Mexico yesterday limped back to its anchorage today, another apparently was afire, and the two others were reported visible far off shore.

Vicente Villasana, Tampico editor, identfied the ship returned to its berth as the Orinoco, 9,660 tons, after it had signalled it was having engine trouble.

Villasana said the burning ship apparently was the Phyrgia, 4,137 tons, which stood some 15 miles out and was all but destroyed by the flames. The fate of the crew was not known.

The Rhein, 6,031 tons, and the Idarwald, 5,033 tons, were visible at the horizon, Villasana said.

The Phrygia apparently was drifting with the strong south wind and at 6 a.m. was reported still afire.

The Orinoco carried a crew of 200, the other vessels 40 men each.

Reports of German surface warships in Caribbean waters have been prevalent for some time.

(Shipping circles in New York heard unconfirmed reports last night that the 2,297-ton German freighter Helgoland, which slipped out of Barranquila, Colombia, Oct. 28, had been sunk by a British warship in the Caribbean.)

Provisions, Crew Go Aboard

First indications that the German ships might leave here was seen last week when crew members were called aboard and they began taking on large stores of provisions. A number of live hogs were included in their cargo.

Shaping for 1944-45

Montreal, Nov. 16 (CP)

SIR PERCIVAL DAVID, here on a secret British military mission, believes that Britain is preparing for campaigns of 1944-45 even though, he said, some high circles think the war will be over in two years.

"One of the greatest psychological advantages we have over the Germans," Sir Percival said in an interview yesterday, "is this very fact that we are fighting them now, have thwarted their plans for invasion, and at the same time we can prepare for campaigns years ahead when their resources will be exhausted."

Spain Removes Ban Placed Upon U.S. Press

MADRID, Nov. 16.—(AP).—The Spanish government today lifted its order, issued yesterday, which banned the United States' press operating in Spain.

Correspondents were told that their situation would remain normal.

The ban was announced yesterday, to take effect to-day, as a reprisal for what Spanish officials said was United States' refusal to permit correspondents of EFE, the official Spanish news agency, to enter the United tSates. (The State Department in Washington said no such permission had been requested.)

2 Tavistock Girls Injured As Car Hits Truck

SHAKESPEARE, Ont., Nov. 16.—(CP)—Two Tavistock members of the Canadian armed forces were killed early today when an automobile collided with a loaded transport truck. The accident occurred near the main intersection of this Western Ontario village.

Killed were Sgt. Robert Cawthorpe, 25, Highland Light Infantry of Canada, and Lac. Frank Holley, 23, Royal Canadian Air Force.

Two Tavistock girls were seriously injured in the crash and taken to hospital at Stratford where their condition was reported as "not critical." They are Beatrice Millington and Edna Hammer.

Cawthorpe, son of Mrs. F. J. Cawthorpe and the late Dr. Cawthorpe, died a few minutes after he was extricated from the wreckage. Holley died in hospital three hours later.

Police said Holley was driver of the car. The four young persons were pinned beneath the wreckage when the car struck the transport and was hurtled through the air to land on its top several feet away.

Staying Power Victory Key Ralston States

OTTAWA, Nov. 16.—(CP)—The task facing Canada—helping to destroy the menace to freedom and life itself hanging over the world—calls for "all the energy, all the loyalty and equally all the staying power that Canadians can command," Defence Minister Ralston holds.

"It is of no use for us to try to delude ourselves that the work in hand is something which will be easily or speedily accomplished," he told the House of Commons yesterday.

"It will be a task of years. May we have the courage, the preserverance and the unshakeable resolution to see it through."

The Defence Minister climaxed a detailed review of the progress of Canada's war program with the reassurance the government was taking the most vigorous and effective steps to make Canada self-sufficient in munitions, to the maximum possible, in addition to exporting large amounts of armaments to the United Kingdom.

Col. Ralston, who shortly will leave on a trip to Britain, emphasized that Canada's plans and preparations were of necessity closely integrated with those of the United Kingdom and the other Dominions. There had to be not only unity of purpose but unity of planning and

Legions Have Trouble Saving Flanks; Dodecanese Fall Near

ATHENS, Nov. 16— (AP).—Some of the heaviest fighting of the Greek-Italian War was reported developing to-day with Greek attack columns smashing into the Italian army westward from Presba Lake, and down the Boitsua River valley toward the Albanian port of Valona.

Reliable sources said the Greeks threatened to cut the Italian forces in Albania into three parts and encircle thousands of Fascists.

So hard-pressed were the Italians that they were reported to have withdrawn their forces along the Yugoslav frontier.

Military experts said this withdrawal, combined with the Greek offensive from the region of Lake Presbya and Koritza, in the southeastern corner of Albania, was destroying any plan the Italians may have had of using a route across Southern Yugoslavia toward the Greek port of Salonika.

Greek army men claimed the capture of 700 Fascist soldiers and 10 heavy guns.

Flanks in Danger.

The Italians were reported to be having difficulty mustering sufficient troops to meet the flank attack from Lake Presba as they were heavily harassed by a third Greek force driving straight up the Ionian coast from the islands to the south.

(Presumably this drive was aimed at Porto Edda and Valona, thus threatening the Italians with a pinchers movement.)

Reports from the south indicated British air attacks on Italian bases in the Dodecanese Islands, off the Turkish coast, were increasing in violence.

Travellers from Turkey said many of the islands already were suffer-

Perfect Wife Loy Tires Of Hubby

HOLLYWOOD, Nov. 16.—(AP).—Myrna Loy, the movies 'perfect wife,' and her producer-husband, Arthur Hornblow, are headed toward the divorce courts.

Ending months of rumors that all was not well between them—each rumor quickly denied—Miss Loy announced through her attorney last night:

"It is with great reluctance that we admit that we are ending our marriage."

The attorney, George Cohen, said divorce proceedings would start "at an early date."

Miss Loy won her sobriquet of "the perfect wife" in a series of domestic comedies beginning with "The Thin Man," in which she and William Powell found all manner of adventure together. She was unmarried at the time, but her romance with Hornblow culminated in marriage in Ensenada, Mex., June 2, 1936.

The actress is at Palm Springs recuperating from an attack of influenza.

Call Of Coventry

U.S. Must Make Up Toll There.–Times

NEW YORK, Nov. 16.—The New York Times said Friday, in an editorial, that the destruction of Coventry, home of many aircraft factories, is a "clear warning" to the United States to rush the material aid pledged to Britain.

"There is no time for us to send it at our leisure," declares the Times. The editorial reads:

The full moon can never again be a thing of beauty to those who survived the butchery at Coventry. For ten and a half hours Nazi bombers were able to make a shambles of this vital aircraft centre of England. The moonlight bathed their targets in silver, yet the darkness was enough to prevent interception by British fighter planes. The blackened buildings and the rubbled streets now stand as a mute fulfilment of Mr. Churchill's warning that "long, dark months of trial and tribulation lie before us"; that "death and sorrow will be our companions on the journey, hardship our garment, constancy and valor our only shield."

The Coventry horror is serious in its implications for England, serious for all those in this country who can bear to tthink coolly about it. For it suggests that other great industrial centres and ports in England are exposed to the same fate whenever the moon is bright and the weather is favorable to raiders. Neither Britain nor Germany has yet found an effective answer to night raiding. Fighter plane of existing types are helpless at night; balloon barrages can do no more than keep the raiders high; anti-aircraft guns can bring down only a handful of attacking planes until new detecting devices are developed in quantity. It is true that accurate aim at night is difficult and that military targets can often escape destruction; but it is inconceivable that all the aircraft factories at Coventry could have escaped serious damage in a raid of such scale and savagery.

The disaster at Coventry is a clear warning to America to rush that material aid which we are pledged to give and which our

Nazis Race New Push Plans

Blow To Duce's Fleet Ensures Aid To Save Face in Greece

LONDON, Nov. 16—(CP).—With the Italian end of the Axis reeling under heavy blows by land, air and sea, German leaders worked at top speed in the 63rd week of the war in preparation for the next undertaking the Nazi war machine.

From Moscow and Madrid came the chief lieutenants of the dictators of Russia and Spain, countries which hold important places in German calculations, while in Innsbruck the chiefs of staff of the German and Italian armies met to discuss military aspects of Berlin's program.

The crippling by British naval aircraft of half of Italy's battleship strength and the continued bad fortunes of the Italian army fighting the Greeks tended to make Italy more and more the junior partner of the Axis, but also guaranteed her full co-operation in any joint venture that would divert attention from the Fascist rout in the hills of Northern Greece.

The journey to Berlin of Vyacheslaff Molotoff, Stalin's chief adviser, was in return for the Moscow visit last year of Joachim Von Ribbentrop, Hitler's foreign minister. Stalin's chief fear is known to be the possibility of the German army being turned against him, and in the absence of information to the contrary it must be assumed that was the chief consideration governing Molotoff's position in the Russo-German talks.

From Spain to the German capital went Ramon Serrano Suner, Foreign Minister and Gen. Franco's brother-in-law. His journey naturally revived speculation that the Nazis still are working on their reported plan to combine an offensive through the Balkans into the Near East with a thrust at Gibraltar and North Africa through the Iberian Peninsula.

While a few weeks ago it looked as if the Germans might obtain a measure of co-operations in their plans from the Petain-Laval regime

VICHY, France, Nov. 16.—(AP)—News reaching here today from Le Havre, German-held port, said British bombs had exploded a German munitions train, destroying 500 homes in Graville, a suburb, and causing a large number of casualties. Gasoline plants also were reported demolished.

LONDON, Nov. 16.—(CP)—Lord Beaverbrook, minister of aircraft production, spent all day yesterday inspecting raid-wrecked Coventry. The Press Association reported yesterday that the raiders "failed lamentably" to do extensive damage to military objectives in the attack in which more than 1000 persons were killed and injured.

VICHY, France, Nov. 16.—(AP)—A wind storm which swept over French Flanders Thursday night was reported today to have caused widespread property damage. No human lives were known to have been lost. Roofs were blown from houses at Lille and livestock was killed in rural areas.

LONDON, Nov. 16—(CP).—British military sources declared today that, although the Italians probably have ample stocks of food and munitions in Albania, they doubted that the Fascists will be able to continue any major campaign against Greece unless communications with their homeland can be kept open.

These sources estimated Italy's military strength in Albania at between 200,000 and 250,000 troops, but said 80 per cent. of the supplies for this army had to be handled through the port of Durazzo, bombed repeatedly by the Royal Air Force.

VICHY, France, Nov. 16—(AP).—Informed sources said today that the French fleet had left its base at Toulon for "exercises" nearby in the Mediterranean.

LONDON, Nov. 16—(CP).—Great Britain called the second half of the 35-year-age group to register today for military service.

The order applied to men born between January 1 and June 30, 1905. Men born the last half of 1905 registered November 9.

The first bomb from the Nazi, who attacked from the stern, dropped on the starboard boat deck, Mills said. He swept past, just missing the mast-head, dropped his second bomb directly on the anti-aircraft gun—killing half the gun crew. The third bomb, a big, 500-pounder, dropped through three decks, ex-

R.A.F. Smashes Bridge Cutting Italian Reinforcement Line

ATHENS, Greece, Nov. 16—(AP)—The Greek army, forcing invading Italian troops back in "quite serious battles" surging along a 100-mile front, today announced the capture of 700 Fascist soldiers and 10 heavy guns.

Intense infantry, artillery and air activity was reported in all sectors, and Greek bombers were said to have blasted Italian troops in action in addition to shooting down three Fascist planes. Two Greek planes were lost.

The Italian guns were understood to have been taken in the re-capture of an important hill, while the prisoners surrendered in the Kalamas river region. A Greek spokesman said the invaders were retreating everywhere, although "quite serious" fighting continued.

The Royal Air Force in Greece reported that a bridge jammed with Italian re-inforcement was destroyed by British planes near Koritza yesterday. Surprised Fascists were tossed into the water, and "casualties almost certainly were very heavy."

A Royal Air Force pilot who participated in the attack said "we hit the bridge fair and square, completely wrecking it. The Italian re-inforcements using it suffered heavily."

land an army in England, and that England, therefore, will survive.

The war in the air which will show which of these gambles was right and which nation, therefore, will survive, began on August 8. It only reached its greatest fury of intensity, however, in the night of September 6-7 when the first attacks were launched against London itself.

What Nazis Hoped For.

The bombing of London, the greatest city in the world and the capital of the greatest empire in the world, was begun as retaliation for British attacks on German cities, according to the first official Nazi explanation.

It was also designed to serve other purposes.

Above all, it was designed to bring out the R.A.F. fighter defense, including, if possible, the British fighter reserve, and to force it into the air, where the Germans hoped they could destroy or cripple it and thus achieve mastery of the air.

Bombings of other objectives in England from Aug. 8 to Sept. 6-7 had brought out a formidable force of R.A.F. fighters, and had made it possible for the Germans to destroy a large number of them. But apparently it had not brought out anything like the whole of the R.A.F.

The British had taken a decision and had stuck to it. They were letting their cities be bombed rather than risk their fighter reserve.

Test For London.

But would the British also let London be bombed rather than risk their fighter reserve? The Nazis thought they would not.

This then was the first real military object in the bombing of London.

The second military objective was the paralyzing of the British nerve centre—the crippling of the political, military and economic brain of the Empire so badly that further resistance would be impossible.

So Reichsmarshal Goering set up headquarters somewhere in the west, took personal charge of the operations and the attack on London began. On at least one occasion—the night of Sept. 16—Goering flew over London himself.

In the first 24 hours of the German attack more than 2,200,000 pounds of bombs were dropped on London and the Thames Estuary, according to the Nazi High Command, and the intensity increased, if anything, in the days that followed.

Six thousand persons, mostly civilians were killed or wounded the first week. Casualties tended to decline somewhat thereafter, but remained high. In the two months between Aug. 12 and Oct. 12, 8,500 persons were killed and 13,000 wounded, according to the best informations here.

Day after day and week after week, the attack continued. Bombs totalling 50,000,000 pounds were dropped on England from Aug. 10 to Sept. 20, according to the official German news agency.

Of this total 17,600,000 pounds were dropped in 200 raids on objectives along Britain's coast, and 33,000,000 pounds on air force, industrial and other objectives in the Midlands and southern England, including London.

These attacks damaged or destroyed 6,000 industrial plants, including 1,400 in London alone, according to the German news agency, but said by Britain to be grossly over exaggerated. They disabled one-fifth of all gas electric works in all the big cities, blasted four main railway stations, several important junctions and hundreds of miles of track, caused cave-ins on three main subway lines and did damage totaling 1,500,000,000 marks to grain elevators, food warehouses and mills.

The people of London went underground. The city had nine air raid alarms on one day alone (Sept. 18) which brought the total up to that time to 103. By Oct. 6, the total had reached 175.

Saw Resistance Weakening

The RAF was still fighting. During September, though, the Germans reported that the British fighter resistance was steadily weakening. Surely the time was coming when the RAF fighter reserve would be forced into the air. Then it could be destroyed, the Germans argued and England would lie open to conquest.

People here who had a right to be listened to seriously and others to whom they communicated their enthusiasm bet hundreds of bottles of champagne that Germany would win the war by Oct. 1—some said by Oct. 5.

Did the Germans try still another way to force out the British fighter reserves during this period? Did they stage a mock—or a real—invasion attempt?

Changes In War Appear

Assuming that the British reserve was being held to beat off an attempted invasion, then the best way to bring it out would appear to be to make such an attempt or at least to pretend to do so.

Both the Germans and the British officially deny that any such attempt was made. Skeptics, who doubt all official denials on principle, especially in wartime, may be better able to satisfy themselves on this point when more circumstantial reports are published.

In any event the fury of the German attack on Britain continued unabated into October. It was not until Oct. 8 that perceptible changes in the nature of the war in the air became apparent.

The extensive damage inflicted on the Italian battle fleet at Taranto was described by Prime Minister Churchill as not only affecting the balance of naval power in the Mediterranean but likely to influence sea warfare problems in all the oceans.

Coming as it did while the Italians were being driven back in disorder by the Greeks, the Taranto episode is regarded as an important factor in the question of Italian morale. In the same week the Italian forces took the worst of several skirmishes with British troops in the Sudan and over the Thames estuary Italian fliers operating from France were severely mauled by the Royal Air Force, 13 Italian planes being shot down with no British losses.

It was just another week of air raiding for London, but in the Midlands the ancient city of Coventry received the severest single night of bombing any British town has had. Sections of Coventry were left in ruins and about 1,000 townspeople were killed or wounded. On the other side of the fighting, British bombers made their first attack on far-away Danzig and renewed the bombing of Berlin and important cities in southern Italy.

Slowness Of Law Fault Of System

John A. Bradshaw, local lawyer, urged Kinsmen to train their sons to revere honor and honesty if they are to be worthy of their heritage and their traditions, in a talk before the club this week.

Speaking on British law, he related several humorous incidents which belied the old saying that law is dry and stuffy. He said that one of the great faults of the system today is that the law is slow, but he added this may be corrected soon, because a special committee in the Legislature is dealing with it at the present time. "Today many business men choose to settle issues out of court because of the delay," he remarked.

Trip Over Crete Shows Forts Growing Fast

By EDWARD KENNEDY
(Associated Press Staff Writer.)

CAIRO, Nov. 16—(AP)—Gen. Sir Archibald Wavell, returning from an inspection of Crete, declared he was satisfied with the progress of intensive work going on there to make the Grecian island a new wartime stronghold for Britain in the eastern Mediterranean.

Sir Archibald made the journey aboard a Sunderland flying boat of the Royal Air Force. This correspondent and Alan Moorehead of the London Daily Express were permitted to accompany him.

Not even the pilot knew Gen. Wavell was to be a passenger until he stepped aboard the craft in an Egyptian port. A short dash across the placid bay and we were winging over the blue expanse that Mussolini calls Italy's sea.

Gunners were alert at their posts in the machine-gun turrets and we carried a batch of bombs in case any of Il Duce's airmen or ships tried to press that claim. They didn't stop us though we passed within 20 minutes' flying time of an Italian base in the Dodecanese Islands.

We did, however, sight a small sailing vessel and the big Sunderland swooped down to investigate. The four sailors showed their fright when the plane circled above them like a great hawk ready to pounce. Finally, they signalled that they were only fishermen.

Later we descended again to inspect four large French merchant vessels headed toward Syria, presumably to carry French Near Eastern troops back to France.

Soon we saw the rugged hills of Crete, and crossed over the island, looking down on shepherds peacefully tending their flocks in the valleys. If the trip had been made 3,000 years ago, the scene would have been much the same.

Sister No Longer

CHICAGO, Nov. 16 — (AP). — By order of the Court, Irving Kiehn, 32, a prize fighter, must cease introducing his wife as his sister. The wife, Harriet, 25, complained to Judge Rudolph Desort that she was tired of being represented as a sister. Kiehn explained the sister angle by saying that he goes to social functions where it is a handicap to be known as a married man.

BUTTER QUIET AT MONTREAL

MONTREAL, Nov. 16 — (CP). — Butter market on the Canadian Commodity Exchange was quiet and featureless this week. Prices moved within a narrow range. Spot sold as high as 29¾ cents and closed at 29½ cents bid, up ⅛ from the previous week. Futures were unchanged to ⅛ higher. The all-Canada stock report published last week-end showed total stock of creamery butter at November amounted to 52,253,000 pounds, down 4,419,000 pounds from the year before, but enthusiasm of buyers was tempered by announcement the Wartime Prices and Trade Board had been empowered to fix the price of butter by means of an Order-in-Council. Demand for eggs eased following the high prices established last week and, coupled with more plentiful receipts, brought a decline of about 4 cents on the week. Grade A-large ended at 43 cents bid on the Commodity Exchange. Upward tendency appeared at the close of yesterday's market, however.

WINNIPEG GRAIN

WINNIPEG, Nov. 16 — (CP). — Late hedging pressure and light selling attributed to Southern houses clipped major fractions from wheat futures prices on Winnipeg Grain Exchange on Friday. Quotations at the close were ⅝c to ½c lower.

Much of the selling which developed in the final hour was believed to have come out in connection with inter-market operations between Winnipeg and Chicago.

Earlier, light buying attributed to Canadian and United States mills boosted wheat values fractionally. Overseas sales of Canadian wheat were confined to a few loads, but mills report small business in flour with Iceland.

Fairly good demand for nearly all grades was evident in the cash wheat market, but dealings again were restricted by lack of offerings.

In the coarse grain pit good general buying hoisted all oats and rye prices as well as July barley to new seasonal highs early in the session. Buying thinned later, however, and values fell below previous closing levels.

Yesterday's Quotations.

Jesus Has Great Concern For Life And Health

By NEWMAN CAMPBELL

(The International Uniform Lesson on the above topic for Nov. 17 is Luke 7, the Golden Text being John 10:10—"I came that they may have life, and may have it abundantly.")

"I CAME that they may have life, and may have it more abundantly," said Jesus. If we accept Him and follow in His footsteps, living as He lived, as well as we, in our human frailness can, we surely will have life most abundant.

This whole chapter of St. Luke tells us how He lived, going about healing those who were sick in body, raising a man from the dead and returning him to his mother's arms; forgiving those who had sinned because they repented and believed in Him.

In last week's lesson we left Him surrounded by a multitude and telling them the rules of the abundant life, such as doing to others as they would be done by; loving their enemies and doing good to them, etc. When He had finished this talk, He went to the town of Capernaum at the north end of the Sea of Galilee. There some Jewish elders came to Him, having been sent by a certaintain centurion (a Roman soldier) because a servant whom he loved was desperately ill, and he wanted Jesus to make him well. The elders told Jesus that the centurion was a worthy man, showing his liking for the Jews by building them a synagogue.

Jesus went with them, but when they neared the house, they were met by friends of the centurion who had been sent with a message to the Master. The centurion, they said, did not feel he was worthy to receive Jesus in his house or to come to Him. But he believed that if Jesus would but say the word, his servant would be healed. He reminded Jesus that he, too, was a leader able to command and be obeyed.

Jesus Marvels at Faith

Here was a Roman, one who had never seen Jesus, but who had more faith than His own people. Jesus marveled at him and, turning to His followers, He said: "I say unto you, I have not found so great faith, no, not in Israel." The friends, returning to the house, found the servant healed.

Soon after this Jesus went to the town of Nain, 25 miles from Capernaum, and as they neared the city gates, a funeral procession met them. A poor widow had lost her only son by death, and her friends were with her, trying to console her. Jesus must have been filled with pity, and He said to her, "Weep not." He came nearer and touched the bier on which the young man was laid and said, "Young man, I say unto thee, Arise." And the youth who was dead sat up and began to speak, and Jesus gave him to his mother.

The people who saw the miracle were almost frightened, but they glorified God and said that God had visited His people. These things were told all through the countryside and it was whispered about that here was a great prophet.

John the Baptist was in prison, you remember having rebuked Herod for wrong doing, and he, too, heard of Jesus' words and deeds. He sent two of his disciples to Jesus to ask if He really was the Messiah, or "look we for another?" John was naturally unhappy and in low spirits in his dungeon, and in this condition he probably began to doubt that the Christ he had hailed and baptized might not be the One all his people had been looking for.

These friends of John's witnessed numerous miracles, and Jesus sent them back to John with the answer: "Tell John what things we have seen and heard," and "blessed is he, whosoever shall not be offended in me." Meaning that His acts and words should convince John that He was indeed the Son of God, whose coming John had prophesied.

Tender Toward Sinners

Jesus' tenderness toward sinners is told in another scene related in this lovely chapter from St. Luke. A Pharisee, a man who thought himself much above the common Jew, invited Jesus to his house to dinner. When they were all eating, reclining in the Hebrew manner of the time on couches, leaning on one elbow with their heads toward the table, their feet extended outward, a woman of the streets came in with an alabaster box of ointment in her hand. She went up to Jesus and, weeping, she caressed His feet, washing them with her tears, drying them with her long hair, kissing them, and anointing them with the precious ointment.

The Pharisee was horrified. He did not associate with such people. Jesus, reading his mind, told him a parable. There was a man to whom two men owed money, He said. One owed him a good deal, the other a smaller sum. Neither could pay, so he forgave them both. Which, Jesus asked, would feel most gratitude, the one who owed a good deal or the one that owed little? The one that owed the most, said Simon. You are right, said Jesus, but when I entered your house you gave me no water for my feet; you did not give me the ceremonial kiss of welcome; you did not pour oil on my head as is the custom to honor a guest. But this woman you call wicked washed my feet with tears of repentance, dried them with her hair, and poured precious ointment upon them.

"Wherefore I say unto three, her sins, which are many, are forgiven; for she loved much; but to whom little is forgiven, the same loveth little."

And to the woman He said: Thy sins are forgiven. . . . Thy faith hath saved three; go in peace."

And those who sat at meat with Him asked themselves, "Who is this that forgiveth sins?"

Mount Carmel Church To Mark 75th Anniversary

HASTINGS, Nov. 16—(ENS). — Built 75 years ago for the honor and glory of God, Our Lady of Mount Carmel Catholic Church here will observe its 75th anniversary on Sunday at special services. Rev. James McGuire of Bracebridge, former pastor for a short time following Rev. Cyril Bretherton, will deliver a sermon on the occasion.

During the pastorship of Dr. P. J. Kelly, now attached to St. Peter's Cathedral in Peterborough, the church was newly refinished. New seats and altars were installed and the interior painted. Rev. P. Costello, who succeeded him, had the interior decorated this summer and it now ranks among the finest of Catholic churches in the diocese.

The paintings done by Monseur Louis Jobin were carried out according to liturgical and titular designs of the Catholic Church. The walls are of stone effect and the ceiling has been finished to represent beams with a panelling effect on the border. Within each panel, a painting has been placed to represent some passage of Holy scripture. In the centre of the ceiling, a pelican feeding its young with its own blood is reproduced in oil painting. This is representative of Jesus Christ feeding His people on earth with His body and blood in the Blessed Sacrament. Mr. Jobin created a masterpiece in art with his oil painting of Our Lady of Mount Carmel, to be seen at the top of the front wall. The painting is enhanced by clouds standing out in relief and illuminated by back and floodlighting. A halo effect directly over the main altar partly surrounds the painting. Two angels adorn the wall between the main altar and the two side altars.

While the work was executed by Mr. Jobin, Father Costello was responsible for origin of the ideas. The newly decorated church is a realization of Father Costello's own planning and is the result of many hours of painstaking effort.

Historical Outline.

First resident pastor in Hastings was the late Father Higgins who came to Hastings in 1847. The settlement was then known as Crook's Rapids. In 1852 he was succeeded by Father Farrelly, who built a rectory on the present church grounds which he acquired. For 13 years to follow, parishioners heard Mass in one of the rooms in the rectory. Within the space of 11 years until 1862, three priests were in charge of the parish. They were Father Harty, Father Byrnes and Father Brophy consecutively.

Father John Quirk was appointed as pastor in 1862 and continued for 33 year as spiritual leader of the increasing Catholic population. Realizing the need for a church, early in his pastorate Father Quirk began plans which materialized in October of 1865, when the church which now stands as a monument to his endeavor was dedicated by Bishop Horan of Kingston.

The next priest, Father Michael Connelly built the present rectory.

In the early 1900's, Father Peter McGuire was in charge for seven years and during his pastorate the present cemetery was acquired. For 25 years to follow, Rev. Cyril Bretherton attended needs of the parish and was well known for his love of flowers and trees. Dr. P. J. Kelly was the succeeding parish priest on his transfer from Victoria Road. Five years ago, he was called to Peterborough and Father Paul Costello took over the parish.

The church, grounds and rectory as they meet the eye today form a mute but effective testimonial to the effort put on them by each succeeding priest. The property has kept pace with the ever changing and advancing years, and it may be truly said that the church has but few equals in beauty of appearance in Ontario.

Sovereignty of Service Highest Christian Ideal

By REV. E. R. JAMES.

Jesus said: I am among you as he that serveth.—St. Luke 24:27.

Can you imagine a Greek gentleman about the year 90 A.D. coming across the manuscript of this Gospel. Its opening words attract him as they are wirten in literary Greek and addressed to a high government official bearing the title of "Excellency." He recognizes that the writer is an educated man with the gift of clear and simple language. He is drawn to this charming literature and its clear cut pen pictures of the Carpenter of Nazareth. Towards the end he is startled with the claim: "I am among you as he that serveth." He never expected such a statement from a man who was professing to lead men as a Christ, Messiah, the Anointed of God. The Greek gentleman had been trained from his boyhood to look upon Greeks and Romans as "benefactors" in very truth—for did they not give philosophy and law to the whole world? He has been taught to class all the rest of the world as "barbarians" whose chief end was to serve their betters. Yet nineteen centuries later many well-to-do Christians are equally shocked at the ideal.

The Germans and their friends are claiming that they are founding a "new order." It is not a new order. Think upon the description of Nebuchadnezzar, who lived twenty-five hundred years ago: "All people, nations and languages trembled and feared before him: whom he would he slew and whom he would he kept alive; whom he would set up and whom he would he put down." Dan. 5:19.

It is hard for us to realize how startling such a precept was to those who first heard it. For above all it was a charge of authority and force. "I also am a man under authority," cried the Centurion. To rule and command was the outward and visible sign of greatness.

The highest Christian ideal is that of service. Yet today we are finding it hard to believe it is practical. We have to learn that the idealist is a man who in the long run is right. An American columnist reminds us that both the idealist and the realist must do his part to re-build our civilization. We need the realist who more or less puts the ideals into practice. Our Lord was both an idealist and a realist. He put into practice what he saw and taught. "Jesus went about all the cities and villages teaching in their synagogues and preaching the Gospel of the Kingdom of God and healing every sickness and disease among the people." He translated this ideal into practice for our inspiration and obedience.

The Apostles had been quarrelling about greatness—who would have the highest place in the coming Kingdom of God. Has your imagination been gripped with the beauty of this description of lowly service: "Jesus, knowing that the Father had given all things into His Hands and that He was come from God and went to God; He riseth up from supper and laid aside His garments and took a towel and girded Himself and began to wash the disciples' feet and to wipe them with the towel wherewith He was girded." He is still the servant, even to Judas Iscariot. There is no limit to His service even to the death on the Cross. "Therefor doth My Father love Me because I lay down My Life." These words rebuke our selfishness and indifference in these days of horrors to multitudes who stand in the shadow of death. The loudest expression we hear is "My rights." Christ would teach us: "My right is to serve."

Perhaps the great lesson of this war will be to teach our children that force is a law of the jungle and spells ruin in the end for all parties

LET THIS MIND BE IN YOU, WHICH WAS ALSO IN CHRIST JESUS, WHO TOOK UPON HIM THE FORM OF A SERVANT.

Jesus' Concern for Life and Health — ILLUSTRATED SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON — By Alfred J. Buescher

Scripture—Luke 7.

In Capernaum a certain centurion sent Jewish elders to Jesus to ask His help for a beloved servant who was ill. The centurion had built the Jews a synagogue, said the elders, and loved them so Jesus went with them.

When Jesus was near the centurion's house the centurion sent word that he was not worthy that Jesus should enter, but if He would say the word, his servant would be healed. His faith made the servant well.

A Pharisee asked Jesus to dine with him, and when they were eating, a sinful woman came to Him. Weeping, she washed his feet with her tears, dried them with her hair, and anointed them with precious ointment.

The Pharisee was shocked, but Jesus rebuked him saying that he had not performed the rites of welcome, but the woman had. To the woman He said: "Thy faith hath saved thee, go in peace." (GOLDEN TEXT—John 10:10)

Co-operation Need

The statement from Ottawa that the value of tourist business in Canada this year will be at least $50,000,000 less than in 1939 should be sufficient to create new interest in tourist promotion efforts so that next year some of the lost ground may be regained.

One hope for an improvement already exists. Undoubtedly misunderstanding on the part of our American friends as to war conditions and restrictions here had something to do with the falling-off in tourist traffic. The word-of-mouth advertising that undoubtedly followed the return to their homes of Americans who came over here and found nothing to disturb their enjoyment should be reflected next season in increased numbers from south of the border.

We cannot, however, sit down and wait for that condition to bring us tourists. On the contrary it will be necessary more than ever next year to dig for tourist business and it is a movement that should have the whole-hearted support and co-operation of those who have goods or services to sell to the visitors. Every one benefits to some degree from tourist traffic, but summer resort proprietors and other folk who get the most direct benefit from the tourist dollar should realize that they are very vitally concerned in this matter of attracting tourists. They should no longer be satisfied to depend upon the efforts of the government, or such organizations as the Peterborough Tourist Bureau but rather should be determined to take an active part in assisting those agencies. Better co-operation on their part is essential to successful tourist promotion and the districts that have not learned the truth of that statement are the ones that will find themselves neglected while American visitors go elsewhere.

A Farm Problem

"We are glad to see that butter prices are climbing," Vivian S. Milburn comments in the November issue of the Ontario Milk Producer, and a few days later Hon. Norman McLarty, federal Minister of Labor, announced that the War Time Prices and Trade Board has been given power to fix maximum prices of butter in Canada. That means the government is already in a position to apply an official brake to butter prices if they show signs of getting out of hand.

Mr. Milburn intimates that, if butter prices increase, farmers will be unable to profit from the volume of cream they sold at the low levels during the period of high production from April to September, but they would get the benefit of any increase as it would apply to cream they now have to sell.

Presumably the proposed price control is directed at storage stocks of butter and is intended to protect the consumer against unwarranted inflation. Mr. Milburn contends that farmers are entitled to a decent income from their investment and labor, and affirms that they will accomplish that end only by organization that would give them control of the marketing of their products instead of selling them in season to agencies that collect the major profits that accrue out of season.

Mr. Milburn's remarks touch the edge of a sharpening rural problem that is appearing throughout the country and right here in Peterborough county. It stems from the decreasing supply of farm labor, farmers' sons and hired help, some going into the military service and others into the new war time industries that are paying higher wages than agriculture can afford. Some local farmers have said recently that since they cannot hire men to help them they are simply going to struggle along and do the best they can. Obviously the quantity of production from such farms is going to be less than normal, and if this condition were to become general the ultimate result would be reflected in decidedly less volume of farm goods.

On the other hand, Hon. Mr. Gardiner, federal Minister of Agriculture, announces new and larger British contracts for bacon and cheese. Incidentally the price of cheese is to be slightly higher and the price of bacon slightly less than in the contracts which have expired. The importance of supplying Great Britain with a large part of its foodstuffs is obvious, and at the same time there are signs of increasing food consumption here in Canada with the possibility of lessened production. This apprehension does not apply to wheat and cereal products, but there is some feeling that it may develop into fact in regard to meats and dairy products.

The Government can pass a law forbidding the "poaching" of workers from factories, because the nation is at war and these urban industries should be stabilized as much as possible; but, the rural industry of agriculture is given no such protection while the supply of food for the Canadian and British people continues to be an essential and national responsibility.

The Government is deeply concerned about maintaining the cost of living at existing levels, but in many instances urban wages, especially of skilled workers and often only partly and dubiously skilled, have increased. Farmers have to take contractual prices for their products and get along with less help, and there is a gap in that economic diversion that is showing signs of a developing problem.

It is easy to point a finger at it, but the solution is not at hand. Incidentally, the products of farm and factory obtain their values today from the one dominant factor, British sea power. They have the same common denominator, and men like Mr. Milburn are contending on behalf of farmers that financial returns to the respective producers should be nearer parity than they are tending to become. Some farmers are getting about all they are worth any time, but they are not the majority. Efficient farmers with land and knowledge and equipment are full partners in the country's war effort, and their industry requires the help that is necessary to get the ultimate in production from such farm plants.

Worse Than War

The statement that in the first ten months of this year 610 persons were killed in automobile accidents in Ontario is startling enough in itself.

When placed alongside the fact that in the first fourteen months of the second great war the number of Canadians serving in the army, navy and air force who met death was 419, the extent of the highway toll becomes even more shocking.

In one Canadian province along half as many more again were slain in traffic accidents in a shorter period as were killed by all the hazards of war.

The reasons for this great loss of life on highways and city streets are not hard to find. Carelessness, recklessness, too much speed, too many incompetent drivers, mixing gasoline and alcohol, these are some of the fruitful causes.

With ordinary care the majority of these fatal accidents could be avoided.

Some time ago four rules for safe driving were promulgated. They are not new but they make up a safe driving technique that if generally followed would make conditions safer all around. Rule No. 1 is to keep an area of safety in front, behind and on both sides of your car. Have room to manoeuvre no matter what emergency develops.

The second is not to insist upon the legal right-of-way but do the sensible thing by keeping out of the other fellow's way. You might be right so far as the law goes but then you might be just as dead after a crash as if you had been wrong.

Third rule is simply to adjust your driving speed to the conditions of road, general traffic and visibility. Forget the legal speed limit and drive according to the existing conditions.

And last, and perhaps most important, is to assume that the other driver knows little or nothing about traffic laws or driving either and that all the pedestrians you meet are deaf or blind or stupid. Under that rule the careful driver will put the whole onus for avoiding accidents on himself.

Those Golliwogs

The story of Peterborough's latest war industry, the manufacture of golliwogs should set an example for a lot of folk who think they are doing a lot to beat Hitler when they give a dollar or two to the Red Cross and buy the odd war saving certificate.

Golliwogs, we hasten to explain, are little grotesque figures made of bright-colored wool and worn by women as an ornament on coats or gowns. A few weeks ago a local woman, Mrs. Frank Blackburn, hit upon the idea of making up these little woollen figures and selling them for the benefit of the fund to aid the victims of Nazi bombing raids. She began manufacturing golliwogs and in a short time the demand for the little ornaments was so great that she had made no less than $25 for the relief fund and the business was expanding so rapidly that she needed help. Accordingly she interested the members of a St. John's 'teen age group and they began making golliwogs too. They also have found that the demand is increasing by leaps and bounds and they have had a hard job filling all the orders. Mrs. Blackburn has given all her spare time to making the woollen figures and members of the group have also put in a lot of hours putting the color combinations together. The result, however, will be a substantial sum that will go toward making conditions a little easier for the brave Britishers who have been driven out of their homes by Nazi bombs.

No publicity was sought for this little enterprise; in fact the originator, if she reads this article will be unable to guess how The Examiner learned anything about it. But it seemed such a fine example of unselfishness and willingness to work long hours for the sake of helping other folk that we decided to tell the community something of the story behind those little woollen ornaments so many women and girls are wearing.

This Vitamin Business

Admittedly we become slightly confused when reading of the additions being made to the long list of vitamins. We have seen much of vitamins A, B and C, but on reading the latest despatch we find it is dealing with vitamin K, and that is not far removed from being half way through the alphabet. Which leaves us flat and winded and somewhat confused.

Every time a new vitamin is found, discovered, revealed or invented, or whatever it is they do, we are assured it is a good thing for the human race. It will do things for us and to us. It will even prolong our days, for what good reason we do not know.

It is a little confusing if one is going in for vitamins. The layman can hardly be expected to be on such intimate terms with his kidney, liver, stomach, spleen and gall bladder to know which one needs a little vitamin treatment and just which one—from A to K—is needed. It is not as simple as tapping on a car wheel with a hammer to find if it is cracked, or sticking the handle of a broom in the snowdrift at the back porch to learn the depth.

No matter how wise a man may become he cannot create anything; he can take it to pieces and change its form. Which causes us to wonder in between times whether or not we have not always been taking in an assortment of all these vitamins along with our daily nourishment. We hope that's the case because it is quite too formidable for the average citizen of humble outlook and trusting dimension to attain familiarity with vitamins which now range from A to K.

NOTE AND COMMENT

New Zealand is drafting 14,000 men for reinforcements for overseas units. That is a long way past a 30-day compulsory training scheme.

James B. Fairbairn, former deputy-minister of agriculture, is dead. His services to farming in this province should be remembered gratefully.

The Italian warships have to be casualties before they get any publicity. They don't make news merely hanging around harbors until they are hit.

The intimation that Canada will have to resort to "funny money" to win the war is not likely to cause much perturbation. Canadians have too much common sense for that.

INDIAN SUMMER

O Indian ghost in wigwam shocks of corn
And stippled skies that lean almost forlorn!
The massive melancholy of these days
Lurks moodily along the tree-pocked hill.
The countryside is haunted with blue haze
While querulous creeks will wander, spent and still.
Deciduous death strikes once and then is gone,
The coward frost runs from enfeebled dawn.
The gallant goldenrod will waver now
And motley meadow clover cease to rule,
Each drowsy rose forget a June-flung vow,
The tender grass grow crisp, the air grow cool.
Redundant with new color day will lie
Beneath the clanking geese that southward fly.
Oblivious to the taut complaining oak
Obedient leaves obliquely drift and yield;
But scarlet maples flaunt a festive cloak,
Courageous toreadors in autumn's field!
O chronic advent of the crinkled leaf
And wedge of geese that bring a song too brief.
Man keeps his place within the field and fence
To ponder on the unrelenting sere.
O languid time of ripened redolence
Uphold the toppling tendrils of the year.
Majestic melancholy clad in haze,
O Indian Summer, linger out your days.

—Charles Miller in the New York Post.

CAP and BELLS . .

By SAMUEL MARCHBANKS

THOMAS NELSON AND SONS have recently published "The Story of Our Language," by Professor Henry Alexander of Queen's University. It is an admirable book for beginners in the study philology, and makes entertaining reading for those whose interest in our language is less professional. One wonders sometimes whether an elementary study of the history of our language and speech habits would not be a valuable addition to the study of grammar in our highschools; it would tend to make us more careful and exact in our use of words, and it would solve some of the difficulties which plague the bad speller. It might also still those acrimonious debates about the pronunciation of "tomato," "bath," and "grass," which rage in some parts of Canada. English as it is spoken by a large part of our population is neither a noble nor an expressive tongue, and elementary study of philology might do something to correct this state of affairs.

C & B

Professor Alexander has boiled down a great mass of knowledge into a brief but comprehensive book; he writes with clarity and a good deal of humor, and even manages to make it necessarily the dull part of the book—the discussion of the structure of Middle English—comprehensible to the layman. In his hands even the Great Vowel Shift (which we always thought was a geological upheaval) seems quite a reasonable happening. Most readers will find the last three chapters in the book, which discuss the differences between British and American English and the work of modern philogists, of greatest interest, but the book is one which anyone may read with pleasure and advantage. This book will prove a valuable addition to the texts used in universities, though it is our personal feeling that everyone should know something of the history of the tongue he speaks and that some treatment of the subject should be included in high school studies.

C & B

Mr. Stephen Leacock's publishers—Dodd, Mead and Co.—have produced an anthology of that humorist's work called "Stephen Leacock's Laugh Parade." It goes without saying that it is a welcome book. Stephen Leacock is our own pet Canadian humorist; we have deep admiration and enjoyment of English humor, but much of it we enjoy as spectators—it is not about us; we have a very tender spot in our hearts for American funny-men, but they have a smart-alec attitude toward life which makes us feel timid and unsophisticated; but Stephen Leacock — he writes about us and for us and we love it. In this collection we re-greet old friends in Winsome Winnie, Mejpomenus Jones, Peter Pupkin and a host of others; this is a book which will solve a lot of Christmas problems in Canada.

C & B

In our opinion Stephen Leacock's best book was an early one; "Sunshine Sketches of a Little Town" is the one book about Canada which we know that really rings true. From time to time novels appear about Canada full of brave pioneers and large-souled farm-hands and shrewd old women; we have lived here for a long time and have never met any of these stock characters. But when we open "Sunshine Sketches" we are at home in Canada as it really is. Josh Smith, Judge Pepperleigh, Dean Drone—we know them all; they may not be very heroic, but they are real. Mr. Leacock has been accused of having pilloried one particular Ontario town in this book, but his accusers are wrong; Mariposa is the distilled essence of all the small towns in this province, and in this one book Stephen Leacock touched greatness as a humorist. The "Sunshine Sketches" are as good as all but the very best of Mark Twain.

C & B

In some of his other books Mr. Leacock has been more farcical, but good as these are, his true devotees like him best in a soberer mood. By birth an Englishman, Stephen Leacock is well equipped to express the Canadian view of the English; we like them very much, and we admire them more than we usually care to admit, but we still think them rather funny. In his excellent "My Discovery of England" Mr. Leacock has given admirable expression to the Canadian attitude toward the Motherland. In the present anthology there is included the brilliant chapter, "We Have With Us Tonight" which tells of Mr. Leacock's adventures among English chairmen.

C & B

To be a humorist is a very serious business. Much humor is what psychologists call a "defense mechanism"; it is the means we use to put aside the cares and injustices of the world, knowing that if we faced them we should soon be overcome by their number. But some man must face these irritations and disappointments in order that he may turn them into jokes and so rob them of their power. Such a man is Stephen Leacock; behind his fun we often see the sadness out of which he has made it. Many readers will be familiar with a brief sketch of Mr. Leacock's called "Hoodoo McFiggin's Christmas." It is at the same time uproariously funny and deeply pathetic; unless we are greatly mistaken, it is only authors of a very high order who can produce this effect.

C & B

Mr. Leacock has never made any secret of his ambition to kill someone with laughter. So far as we know, he has never realized this dream yet, but there is still time. It is on occasions when his books are read aloud that death from laughter comes nearest. Perhaps this collection of his best pieces has been published with the intention to kill. Readers are warned accordingly.

SIMPLE—YES VERY

"Der egsplanation is simple, my old chap. On my vay home from playing mit my cricket stick I stop to help dis eatbeefer mending his bicycles."

—Humorist.

• How A Famished Army Was Fed

From The London Times

AT A TIME when large bodies of people are being moved from bombed areas to safer homes in the country it may be useful to recount the story of how the evacuated B.E.F. from Dunkirk was fed. It is an aspect of that legendary achievement that was hardly touched upon at the time, and represents a triumph of improvisation by a small supply depot of the R.A.S.C. across whom I came during a tour of the outposts on the Channel.

Out of the blue on that undreamed-of day in May men of the Allied armies began to pour into the Channel ports as in their hundreds of thousands, famished with hunger and in some cases near starvation. They had to be fed somehow as countless troop trains carried them to their bases, and for a long time there was only this R.A.S.C. unit to tackle the job. It was the most formidable task that the corps had ever faced, and their discharge of it has its place in the history of Dunkirk.

For 12 almost sleepless days and nights men from every cookhouse, workshop, and station company in the area, with welcome assistance from A.A. batteries—they had little to do in those days—fought the physical problems of food at the centres established at Headcorn, Faversham, and Paddock Wood. An average of 100 trains a day passed through. They halted for about eight minutes, and in that time every man—there were sometimes as many as 800—was roused from exhausted slumber and fed through the windows of the compartments. After the confusion of the first day's experience the carriage doors were kept locked.

At three hours' notice the depot baked 60,000 lbs. of bread a day in their Aldershot ovens at Shorncliffe, in place of the normal 20,000 lbs.; another 50,000 lbs. was provided by private contractors. Meat was cooked over trench fires on long spits hurriedly improvised for the purpose by the workshops; there were mountains of bread and butter on the platforms; men made tea and cut sandwiches for 24 hours a day; and, in the words of one of their officers, they knew what it was to see 5,000 eggs at a time and cook them. There were all sorts of unprecedented problems. At first, for instance, tea was provided in china barrack mugs, but it was soon found to be no joke to have them sailing from the carriage windows as the trains moved off, and canning tins specially fitted with handles, or paper cartons, bought up in the stores and dairies, were substituted.

It was soon found that preserved meat and biscuits, about all the unit could normally provide, would not meet the needs of the men of Dunkirk, who had been living on biscuits for days. Headquarters rose to the occasion. "The sky's the limit," they said, and "dynamo" became a magic password that made all purchases possible. There was astonishingly little wastage. Great stocks of cigarettes, chocolate, and fruit mysteriously arrived; the problem of a suitable menu was solved, and by its good sense saved many lives. Cigarettes and fruit were found to be the first need of these hungry men, who sometimes would stand with a mug of tea and a sandwich in their hands, physically unable to swallow them.

Other units and civilian bodies in the area handsomely subscribed to the effort. Officers' messes, men's stores, and N.A.A.F.I. supplies were laid bare, and they had their reward in the whistling, contented trainloads that had drawn in so grimly

Nor was that all. There was the problem of supplying the body of the B.E.F. that still remained on the Dunkirk beaches. The historic flotilla of small boats that brought them back went out laden with provisions and water stored in petrol cans—and, as a captain responsible for the task said, it was no simple matter to go down to port and fill 3,000 of these cans each night in the dark. Such is the bare story of how the R.A.S.C. fed the men of Dunkirk; and at the end of it all one officer received a certificate from a station-master that the station was in as proper a state as when he moved in.

• Unwelcome Fall Guests

COUNTRY CATS are out in the fields and roadsides these days, aware that the season has arrived when mice are changing from summer to winter quarters. Those who escape the feline hunters find their way into dwellings, sometimes in considerable numbers. This is especially noticeable in rural districts but also occurs to some extent in suburban areas and in city dwellings.

The common house mouse is chief offender, but field mice will readily establish themselves indoors in a very short time. It happens that the two species are equally prolific, and finding the new quarters satisfactory for housekeeping are likely to produce additions to the family every eight or ten weeks. This is very disconcerting to housewives, whose aversion to the whole tribe is traditional.

The division of entomology, Dominion Department of Agriculture, has devoted some attention to the matter and is on the job with some practical advice. Unlike many other animals, mice are not especially wary of baits and traps, and the nuisance can be brought under control without difficulty. Poisoned baits are not recommended for use in dwellings, traps being safer and more sanitary. The ordinary guillotine or snap trap is regarded as most satisfactory. Fried bacon, raw meat, oatmeal and fruit are suitable baits. A good combination is a mixture of peanut butter, rolled oats and chopped raisins, to which a drop of two of aniseed oil may be added. If you do not care to go to that much trouble with a menu for mice, the old-fashioned cheese bait is as effective as ever. Male members of the household may be employed to dispose of the victims and reload the traps.—Woodstock Sentinel-Review.

WITHOUT INTEREST

AS an antidote to the people who act as if everyone is out to make money out of the war, we present the report by Finance Minister Ilsley, showing that 380 subscribers, living in various parts of Canada have contributed amounts ranging all the way from $1 to $10,000, loaned to the government for the duration of the war, without interest. Non-interest-bearing certificates are issued direct by the Bank of Canada, acting for the Dominion government.—Niagara Falls Review.

LONG TROUSERS

ONE of our contemporaries publishes an indignant letter from a woman who inveighs against what she calls "the hideous practice of dressing little boys up like midgets in long pants." She argues that boys were "never meant to wear long pants any more than men of today are meant to wear short pants." She holds that boys "should have perfect freedom to run and play, and this is not possible with long pants."

Here, obviously, is a brand-new issue, something entirely fresh to argue about, and for that reason the crusade of the anti-long-pants woman, perhaps, should be welcome. But we may as well warn her that she will have her hands full. In the first place, it might be asked: How do the little boys feel about it? Surely their wishes might be considered. A referendum among them would seem to be the only fair way to approach the subject.

The anti-long-pants woman sounds suspiciously like one of those mothers who are terrified at the prospect that their little boys will grow out of babyhood, and who to the great discomfiture of the boys, insist on dressing them to please not the boys but themselves.—New York Herald Tribune.

CHRISTMAS SHOPPING

A CABLE from London reports that women in that city are flocking to the stores to do their Christmas shopping early in order to avoid the new transfer tax which goes into effect soon. Despite the fact that London is being daily bombed and that many people spend their nights in public shelters, their homes having been destroyed, business goes on very much as usual.

Pictures of underground shelters in London show posters on the walls advertising the latest movies. Behind darkened windows gay entertainment goes on in the numerous night clubs. Nor do the women of London propose to let Hitler interfere with their taking advantage of the bargains available to early Christmas shoppers.

With characteristic feminine thrift, they are doing their Christmas shopping early, bombs or no bombs. It is this trait of the English, the disposition to take the war in their stride, to make the best of a bad situation and not to permit it to interfere too much with their normal way of living which is the best proof that British morale is still at a high pitch and that England will never be conquered.—Watertown, N.Y., Times.

Now there was at Joppa a certain disciple named Tabitha, which by interpretation is caled Dorcas: this women was full of good works and almsdeeds which she did. And it came to pass in those days, that she was sick, and died: whom when they had washed, thy laid her in an upper chamber. And foreasmuch as Lydda was night to Joppa, and the disciples had heard that Peter was there, they sent unto him two men, desiring him that he would not delay to come to them.

Then Peter arose and went with them. When he was come, they brought him into the upper chamber: and all the widows stood by him weeping, and shewing the coats and garments which Dorcas made, while she was with them. But Peter put them all forth, and kneeled down and prayed; and turning him to the body said, Tabitha, arise. And she opened her eyes, and when she saw Peter, she sat up. And he gave her his hand, and lifted her up, and when he had called the saints and widows, presented her alive.—Acts ix, 36-41.

"Dried"

Patient Parent: "What on earth is the matter now?"

Young Hopeful (who has been bathing with his bigger brother): "Willie dropped the towel in the water and he's dried me wetter than I was before."

Caught

A young woman about to be married decided to test her sweetheart, and called on a girl friend.

"I want you to go for a walk with Jack," she confided, "and at a suitable moment ask him for a kiss."

Her friend blushed, but consented.

The following day the bride-to-be called round to see what had happened.

"Did you ask Jack to kiss you, dear?"

"I didn't get a chance," was the rather upsetting reply. "He asked me long before I'd thought of it!"

This Way Out!

Smith, on the way to the city, found a slip of paper just outside the gate of his house. It was a detailed plan of his private office. The exact position of the stairs was shown. Notes showed which doors swung in and which swung out. Even the windows were set down. Smith, alarmed, rushed back into his house.

'Some burglar must be going to raid my office," he told his family.

"Oh, it isn't that!" cried his daughter, glancing at the sketch. "Those notes are in John's handwriting. He's coming to your office today to ask you to let him marry me."

D. MacDonald's Mighty Lift Made For $500

By Pete McGillen

Three-quarters of a century ago, Daniel MacDonald, a husky young Peterborough man made a lift of 1600 pounds and this feat of strength placed him in the hall of fame with the Hercules of other years. The lift however was the cause of his death and he passed away within a year. Today in Little Lake cemetery, the tombstone at his grave, sounds a warning to others who might be tempted to show off their strength.

The epitaph reads as follows:

Daniel MacDonald, died Oct. 27, 1871, age 33.
Ye weak beware, here lies the strong
A victim of his strength.
He lifted sixteen hundred pounds,
And here he lies at length.

Recalls Incident

Edward Riel, veteran resident of the Lakefield district remembers when this incident took place, and at the time he was employed as a butcher boy by James Howden who with many others had stalls in the market.

Telling the story Mr. Riel said the lift that killed MacDonald took place in Montreal and not in this city, as is generally believed. Daniel MacDonald's father was a tailor and had a shop in Ashburnham on Hunter street, the boy also was in business and had a drygoods store on George street facing the market square.

For some time Dan had amazed local and district residents by his feats of strength, and he was generally regarded as the strongest man in the eastern part of the Province. One day on the market he had lifted a pig that was said to have weighed 500 pounds, and at another time he lifted a bell weighing 700 pounds. This bell was to be used in the clock tower, Jack Howden, Riel's employer, a man weighing 220 pounds barely lifted the bell off the ground, but MacDonald lifted the bell from the ground to a meat block, then let it fall and it smashed the floor.

$500 Offered

The big lift at Montreal came about when Malcolm Morrison, a local storekeeper, visited the metropolis to buy a supply of merchandise. While there he saw an advertisement saying $500 would be given the man who could outlift a young Samson of that period. To win the man must lift 1500 in harness. Morrison saw the Montreal strong man make the lift, then on his return to Peterborough told young MacDonald all about it.

Soon after the two went to Montreal and MacDonald accepted the challenge to lift the 1500 pounds. He stepped into the harness and successfully lifted a steel bar weighing exactly three-quarters of a ton. Not satisfied with that he stepped down from the platform and set a 100 pound anvil on top of the big bar.

The Montreal man urged him not to attempt the extra lift. "If I could lift that much I wouldn't" said his competitor.

Against the wishes of the group MacDonald stepped into the harness again, and lifted the 1600 pounds off the floor. He felt no ill effects but within an hour he started to spit blood, and he was quite ill when he reached Peterborough. He died within a year from internal injuries received when he made the lift.

Not a Big Man

According to Mr. Riel, who saw MacDonald many times, the strong man was not a big man. He was about 5 feet 8 inches in height and very stocky in build. He was not fat and weighed 196 pounds, with powerful broad shoulders. Riel added that hundreds of Montrealers saw MacDonald make the lift, paying 25 cents admission to see the performance.

Tragedy followed in the footsteps of young MacDonald for his wife died before him and about the same time their infant son passed away too. Beside the tombstone that marks the last resting place of Daniel MacDonald and his wife, Ann, age 31, is a smaller stone in memory of the child, and at the bottom of the stone is a four line verse. The reporter could not decipher this verse because the ravages of weather had almost obliterated it.

Edward Riel himself, has had a colorful and useful life and today, although he is nearing the 90 mark, is still hale and hearty and ready for an argument on almost any subject. Despite his years he would welcome a crack at Hitler, and he follows the progress of the war carefully.

112 Descendants

Mr. Riel was married twice, having seven children by his first marriage and five by his second. Today there are more than sixty grandchildren and about forty great grandchildren. Several of these children are now wearing the uniform of the Canadian Active Service Force.

He was a pioneer in Malmouth township, Haliburton, where the obtained a Crown land grant and cleared the land. His father Jacob Riel was born in the township of York and his mother was Katherine Klinck. Both the Riels and the Klincks have a long and interesting history and both have made valuable contributions to the development of this country.

Edward Riel recalls the war between the North and South in the States in 1863 and he says at that time his father owned a large plantation in Richmond, Virginia, with 100 slaves. He lost everything and had to flee with his family to Canada. His mother owned a ten acre farm in the same State and the rent from this farm stopped after the war. They have never heard anything more about the property. Mr. Riel lost his father in Virginia, a victim of yellow fever.

When asked if he was a descendant of Louis Riel, the rebel, Mr. Riel said he was not sure but he certainly would be proud of it if he was. He told of hearing what he believes to be a true story of the incidents leading up to the rebellion. The story was told him by a man named John King in Winnipeg.

Missionary to Blame

The trouble began when a missionary named Scott came into the west and showed a greater inclination to make love to the squaws than to preach, according to Riel's version of the story. The rebel, Louis Riel warned Scott that if he did not stop corrupting the morals of the Indians he would deal harshly with him. Scott, an Englishman, ridiculed the warning and continued his playmaking. Riel ordered that he be shot, and as Riel had considerable influence with the Indians this was done. Because of the act, Riel was taken to Ottawa, but later returned and after much bickering back and forth rebellion broke out in 1885. John King, when telling the story to Edward Riel shortly after the rebellion had been quelled, said he had heard Riel warn Scott that he must stop bothering the Indian women. This being so, the Lakefield man feels there was considerable justification in any action Riel might have taken to protect the interests of the Indians.

Turning back again to his early boyhood, Mr. Riel said he was born in Peterborough in 1852, and he remembers the names of several men who had stalls in the market at the time he worked there. These included James Howden, who was later a policeman, Louis LaPlante, Christie Boyd, George Webber, a man named Brennan and Harry Winch.

Neville Chamberlain had not died at the time the reporter talked with Riel, but than he said "Chamberlain had no business being Premier. Churchill is the man. There is no use being friendly with a mad dog, the only thing to do is strike him over the head with whatever weapon is at hand, and Churchill is the very one who will do it."

Mr. Riel lives about two miles from Lakefield.

Norwood Council Hears Tax Kicks

Special The Examiner
By Two Students of the P.C.V.S.

The Examiner widens its news facilities by inaugurating this up-to-date Collegiate news. The day of publication enables our writers to bring Collegiate readers enlightening news for a full week. 'Nuff said, now for

The "Lit"

On Tuesday, the second Literary Society meeting for the year was held. Once again, a play presented by the Dramatic Club formed the backbone of the meeting. Warren Gamble, our president, introduced a girls' sextette who were too bashful to tell him the title of their song. However, they rendered a rousing version of a popular war-song, "The Navy's Here." Jack Thompson, our wizard of the harmonica, played Annie Laurie and Blueberry Hill. The present war situation in Greece was outlined by Bob Carley who graphically illustrated the courageous stand being made by the Greeks against despotism. A play written by Hugh Kenner, "Vacuum" was the high point of the meeting. Thirteen girls and one boy, namely, Alden Gourley, made up the cast. For once the hero was free from rivals, but this, perhaps, does not hold true in his real life. By quite unforseen circumstances, we assure you, a vacuum cleaner salesman was called upon to make a speech to the sewing circle of the Puddleville Y.W.C.A. An unfortunate salesman proceeded to outline how his exclusive cleaner "horrified" the dust in rising up into the cleaner. A supposed valuable dress pattern was inadvertently sucked up into the vacuum cleaner and the rest of the play hinged around this incident. As a result the villain-ess bought this cleaner for approximately $103 and our lucky salesman sold twelve more machines. The Y.W.C.A. secretary cunningly outwitted the villainess and seized the pattern for her own use. The secretary and salesman were ecstatically phoning about their successes at the end of the play.

The orchestra made its second appearance at the literary meeting and played "The Last Kiss," "Ropaz Band" and "Cheer Up." We hope that the orchestra will accompany the singing in the morning assembly as often as possible in the future.

Christmas Cards

Forty days till Christmas! There is not much time to send our short messages of love and good-cheer to the boys overseas in our Active Service Forces. The Girls' War Service Committee is doing its bit and we feel that our token of remembrance will warm their hearts at Yuletide in a strange country away from beloved parents. Why not send them a card?

The Senior Camera Club members are privileged again this year in making their own "personal" cards. This is usually a distinctive card peculiar to that person alone. Mr. V. R. Henry is assured of a good supply of Christmas cards being sent to him, since each member is politely requested to send in a sample of his or her work. It is also possible to make a saving of two cents on the school card if our members with slim pocketbooks so desire. Even a poor mathematician such as a first former could construe that deduction. For the uninitiated, however, here are the actual figures:

Paper, two cents per sheet; envelope, one cent each; chemicals, etc., one cent; total, four cents. School cards, six cents.

The sample cards have been distributed throughout the forms and order blanks have been sent around. The Christmas card sales have been taken over by the Camera Club again this year so order liberally, students and camera clubbers alike.

The "At Home"

Stout, male hearts of P.C.V.S. turn longingly towards the not too distant At Home. Parents notice the decreased demands on the family car since it definitely must, must, must be available at least one evening—and morning—during the Christmas holidays. Parents! Please note. Pecuniary resources are being delved into and our budding Romeo begins to budget his income, however small, for the next forty-odd days. Then there is that tantalizing, vivacious girl of his dreams whose all-important acceptance marks the crowning point of this school year. So hurry up, boys, and invite the little lady before that detestable gigolo from the other form gets her. L'amour est tout.

Basketball

Rugby uniforms, mud-caked in the heat of battle, have been sent to the cleaners, but basketball rounds the corner to take up the flag of victory—we hope!—for P.C.V.S. We are depending on Mr. Craig and Mr. Bamforth to turn out two champion basketball teams this year. Needless to say, a crowd of wildly cheering students in the balcony would assist our boys in no small way. A constructive criticism we would like to see a lively, duty-conscious, cheering squad that would not let an inebriated spectator outdo them in cheering, as happened in the last home rugby game against Bowmanville.

In all probability there will be a dance after each home game so this ought to prove a drawing card even if the game doesn't. Come to the games at all cost since we must come out on top in basketball.

War Work

War efforts on the part of the students in the Collegiate have been something worth writing home about. The sale of War Savings Stamps has been progressing steadily and the total sale for this week amounted to three hundred and sixty dollars.

The paper collection grows and grows but more cooperation would still be appreciated. To raise money for war work Christmas wreaths are being made to sell at twenty-five cents each. We understand that a super deluxe model of a wreath is available for fifty cents. Do you realize how much nicer your living-room will look if several of these wreaths were artistically hung around the walls? And also boys, do your girl friend a favor, buy her a Christmas wreath now!

The order blanks for wreaths were sent around on Wednesday and Thursday.

Perhaps a special dance could be arranged to raise funds exclusively for war efforts. Such an event could be called a war dance, although it would be such only in name, certainly not in nature. What do you think of it, students?

Morning Entertainment

What a boon the morning entertainments are to the students. It develops the talents of various students and is educational and entertaining. It brings to the pupils such enjoyment as he or she has never experienced before since discovering some homework if left undone, overlooked or not looked over.

Last year the Students' Council purchased a radio-gramaphone table to be used at dances and other events. This year the machine has definitely not been used as much as could be expected. It could be put to good use in the Music Appreciation periods which proved to be such a success last year.

Our movie machine must be collecting dust also. Possibly this has been forgotten in the rush of war work but we all like to see a movie, so "the more the merrier."

Teasettes

Only two more weeks to get your Camay, Chipso and Crisco labels in. Past December the first they are of no use whatever. Go to it.

A new and impressive version of the "Last Post" was rendered by Donald Forde at the Armistice Day service on Friday, the eighth.

At the Junior Camera Club meeting on Wednesday a demonstration of the 'slop-slop" method of developing roll flim was informatively given by Earle Armstrong.

Boys are working as they have never worked before in P.T. periods of late. Our old slip-shod habits of exercising have vanished with the arrival of a pliable bamboo cane wielded in the capable hands of our instructors.

Approximately three thousand, seven hundred dollars worth of stamps have been bought to date from the beginning of the campaign. Our bureau on the main landing has been expanded in power and it is now possible to buy a War Savings Certificate outright, if you have the four dollars.

Form V-B retained the flag for the second month with a total sale of one hundred and sixty dollars worth of stamps. The average sale per pupils was six dollars and forty cents. Since Earl Westman sold the most he received the flag from Dr. Kenner. Ten C sold ninety dollars worth, two dollars and five cents per pupil and Barbara Rishor represented her form.

John Shore came foward for 9H where the total sale was fifty-five dollars with an average of one dollar and sixty-two cents per student.

A new project has been started in the school in the form of cellophane table centres representing Christmas trees. Students wishing to buy these are asked to see Miss Montgomery, Miss White or John Franks and the price is seventy-five cents.

A wonderful response was given the sale of Christmas wreaths since these were oversubscribed. Good work!

R.A.F. Women Are Training For Salient Jobs

LONDON, O ct. 16—(CP).—A new school for code and cypher (signalling) officers of the Women's Auxiliary Air Force has been opened in a big country house in one of the counties of England and is the first of its kind in the Service. It is administered by the Technical Training Command of the Royal Air Force.

The W.A.A.F. plays an increasingly important role in providing officers for code and cypher duties at R.A.F. stations and the new school trains newly appointed officers in R.A.F. organization and in the general duties for which a W.A.A.F. officer is responsible.

The course is short and is run on the lines of an R.A.F. staff college course. The officer students are given lectures on a variety of subjects, including discipline and morale, service etiquette and customs, first-aid and hygiene and anti-gas precautions. In addition, there is physical training and drill, given by sergeant-instructors of the R.A.F. Each day two students undertake the duties of orderly officers, while another two are appointed president and vice-president of the mess. In this way they learn something of service procedure. Once a week there is guest night.

Posted to Duties.

On completion of the course the officers are posted from the school to R.A.F. units throughout the country. In addition to their code and cypher duties they are then responsible, in conjunction with the administrative W.A.A.F. officers, for the welfare and recreation of the many airwomen who form part of the establishment of all R.A.F. stations.

The W.A.A.F. officer in charge of the school explained that since the outbreak of war all the student officers had previously served in the ranks as aircraftswomen or sub-officers.

"They are a fine type," she said. "All of them are keen and very responsive to the aims of the course. I am confident that this innovation will lead to a higher standard of W.A.A.F. officers generally."

Air Commandant Trefusis Forbes, director of the W.A.A.F., visits the school once a week to give a lecture and meet the new officer students taking the course.

Missionary Rally Is Held In Campbellford

CAMPBELLFORD, Nov. 16. — (ENS). — Two figures well known to the missionary field addressed a local audience in St. John's United Church on Wednesday evening of this week to tell of the widened field for work by the church made necessary by the war which swept over Asia. The meeting was of members of the Eastern section of the Cobourg Presbytery, and the speakers were Dr. Jessie Arnup, secretary of the Foreign Mission Board of the United Church, Toronto, and Dr. Charles Endicott, secretary of the Home Missionary Board.

Introduced to the gathering by Rev. G. N. Maxwell of St. John's Church, Dr. Arnup described in vivid terms conditions in China, Korea, and Japan which he had recently visited. "The door is wide open and the opportunity for the Christian church to play its part was never greater than it is now," said he.

Dr. Endicott delivered an inspirational message touching on many phases and problems which came within his home mission field.

A mixed quartette comprising Mrs. H. Jones, Mrs. S. Twigg, H. Jones and H. M. Donald, provided the only other item on the program while several visiting clergy, including Dr. C. S. Reddick of Campbellford, Rev. Mr. Anderson, Brighton, Rev. E. Beech, Roseneath, and Rev. Mr. McRae, of Hilton.

HEALTH PROBLEMS

By DR. L. A. CLARKE
Peterboro M.O.H.

The opportunity is being given by the Peterborough Examiner, through the medium of this column, which, it is proposed, will be published weekly, to keep the people of Peterborough informed with regard to matters of local health interest. The Department of Health wishes to take this opportunity of thanking the Examiner for the space provided for this purpose.

Dr. L. A. Clarke

The items of greatest importance to us at the present time is Chicken-pox. There are a considerable number of cases being reported. Chicken-pox is usually a mild disease; the chief danger from it lies in the fact that mild cases of Small-pox may be mistaken for Chicken-pox. It may leave disfiguring scars which remain through life. Infections such as erysipelas may originate in the pustules. Complications such as pneumonia, nephritis and gangrene of the skin also occur. It takes about two weeks from the time of contact for a person who is not immune to develop the disease. One attack gives, in the majority of cases, immunity for life. Insomuch as some of the complications of Chicken-pox may be very serious, it is important that parents follow the advice given to them by their doctor or the public health nurse with regard to preventing the spread of this disease. We would further draw to your attention that it is the duty of any householder to give notice to the Secretary of the Local Board of Health within twelve hours following the time that any communicable disease is suspected to be within his household. (P.H.A., Sec. 65).

As we stated before, chicken-pox and small-pox may sometimes be confused. The spots of small-pox are more abundant on the face and hands while those of chicken-pox are more dense on the abdomen and chest, with the abdomen and chest equally covered. The spots of chicken-pox usually avoid the limbs. The spots of small-pox generally appear in one group whereas those of chicken-pox may be seen at various stages of development. Of course, history of recent or fairl recent successful vaccination rules out small-pox as a probable diagnosis. Some children with chicken-pox may be severely ill and since one has seen some unfortunate accidents happen through home diagnosis and treatment, the parent of the child suspected of having chicken-pox would be far wiser to have the family physician diagnose the case accurately and prescribe the correct treatment for that particular case.

The people of Peterborough are requested to send any questions they have with regard to public health matters to the office of the Medical Officer of Health, City Building.

CAMPBELLFORD

England Is Subject At Circle Meeting

CAMPBELLFORD, Nov. 16 (ENS) —An address on England which featured interesting observation concerning many points of both historical and current interest formed the principal feature of a miscellaneous program arranged under auspices of the Goforth Mission Circle of St. Andrew's Church by Mrs. B. Simpson Black. The speaker, Miss Hazel Atkinson, a member of the public school teaching staff, was well qualified to speak on the subject, having been one of the last from this town to visit England before the outbreak of war.

A cornet solo was rendered by Adjutant K. Graham of the Salvation Army; a quintette directed by Miss Jean Tubbs and comprising Misses Helen Nicholson, June Burgiss, Monica DeCarrol, Jack Davey and Rosa Richardson, gave a Negro spiritual number; Dr. M. E. R. Boudreau, of Burnbrae, offered two piano selections; Francis DeCarrol, a vocal solo, accompanied by Mrs. F. G. DeCarrol; two vocal numbers by Marlene Boudreau. Another interesting part of the program was a talk on Winston Churchill by Miss Rheta Patrick. During the evening Albert Hazel assisted as accompanist.

ThomasburgMan Has Near Call With 300-lb. Bear

TWEED, Nov. 16 — (ENS). — Claude Wager, of Thomasburg, was quite as close to a bear one day this week as he ever cares to be again.

Mr. Wager, along with Harry Kennedy, of Thomasburg, Claydon Flasher and Laurison Kennedy, of the same village, and George Stocker, of Kingston, were stalking deer in the Slate Falls district north of Denbigh. Messrs. Wager and Stocker were releasing the dogs while the other three were out on the runways.

Some of the dogs were attracted to a log a few feet away and Mr. Wager, thinking they were about to do battle with a porcupine, went to investigate. Instead, he was greeted by a three-hundred-pound bear which had taken violent offense at being disturbed. The bruin lunged at Mr. Wager, at the same time making it quite evident in bear language that he was ready for combat. Mr. Wager's gun was some feet away, but fortunately Stocker was close at hand and he quickly fired a number of shots into the bruin which dispatched him.

Few people would relish the thought of a duel with a three-hundred-pound bear, but Wager was not at all excited as he lived in the Denbigh district for some years where bears are comparatively common.

Bags a Wolf

Kenneth Credicott, of Sulphide, while hunting in the back fifty this week with a .22 calibre rifle, had the good fortune to bag a wolf on the run.

Marcin Gorski was taken into custody by Chief J. C. Hayes, when it was learned that he was making himself a general nuisance about the village. Gorski was going from house to house acting in a strange manner and was in some cases somewhat violent. He was examined by a local physician who declared that he had been stricken mentally and his removal to a hospital was ordered immediately.

Indians Spread News By Runner

THE PAS, Man., Nov. 16—(CP).—The "mocassin telegraph" which for many years has done yeoman service among Indian tribes in this outlying community, 400 miles northwest of Winnipeg, has been operating daily since September, 1939.

S. Lovell, Indian agent here, who recently returned from a trip through the backwoods to register 300 Indians, said the natives are extremely interested in news of the war. Each day, families living near traders who own radios gather round to listen to accounts of world events.

The news is then relayed from settlement to settlement by "mocassin' telegraph."

Fritzie Zivic Wins On Foul Over Al. Davis

NEW YORK, Nov. 16 — (AP). — Fritzie Zivic, recently crowned world welterweight champion from Pittsburg, was awarded a victory over Al (Bummy) Davis of Brooklyn last night in Madison Square Garden, when the referee disqualified the Brooklynite for low punching. Each fighter weighed 147½.

Before a near-sellout crowd Davis who has been a highly unpopular fighter, at best, in local rings, swung half a dozen low blows at the Pittsburger, and for each punch was warned by Referee Billy Cavanaugh.

When he persisted in continuing these punches, the referee ended the bout in 2 minutes 34 seconds of th second round.

When Cavanugh pulled them apart and stopped the fight, Davis tore from the referee's grasp, dashed at Zivic, and the fight broke out again. Davis was seen to swing his left foot in the melee, and Cavanugh said "he kicked me."

The State Athletic Commission chairman, General John J. Phelan, immediately ordered Davis' share of the purse held up pending a commission meeting on Tuesday. One of the other commissioners, D. Walker Wear, loudly announced at the ringside: "He's all washed up here now."

Zivic was far ahead in the first round, bahging Davis with short rights and hard straight lefts and tying the batller from Brooklyn up perfectly in the in-fighting.

Zivic, it must be admitted, did quite a job in this first round. He cuffed Bummy about the face, and roughed him up considerably. His straight lefts poked into Davis' eyes.

As the second heat started, Zivic kept right on tabbing Davis and cut his lips. Then Bummy caught Zivic in a half-clinch, holding him about the body with his right arm. He swung his left in a blow that connected squarely on Fritzie's trunks.

Cavanaugh immediately rushed in, broke the fighters and warned Davis to "keep 'em up." Davis remembered the advice about fifteen seconds, then repeated the operation. He was warned again, with the same effect, and Zivic, each time he was struck in low territory, doubled over in pain. After the last warning. Cavanaugh broke them again and began leading Davis to his corner, waving his hand that the fight was stopped.

Zivic started walking slowly to his corner, but from the corner of his eye he saw Davis break from Cavanaugh's hold and start toward him. They squared off in about 30 seconds of rough and tumble mauling. Cavanaugh rushed in and separated them, but Davis continued swinging fists and kicking his left leg. Three policemen rushed in through the ropes and finally restored order, with the help of Zivic's handlers.

The boos that came down from the $1 gallery seats and picked up by those from ringside pews were like nothing that has been heard in Madison Square Garden in years.

Zivic is slated to defend his title here on January 17 against the great little fighter from whom he took it, Henry Armstrong, and the winner was to have been matched with Davis, provided the latter made a good showing last night.

In an eight-rounder, after the main event, Ernie Vigh, 150½, Newburgh, N.Y., stopped Al Bernard, 152½, New York, at 2:15 of the sixth round.

All three members of the Athletic Commission agreed afterward that Davis should be barred from New York State rings in the future, but said they would take no action until their meeting on Tuesday.

It was the first time since New York's so-called "no-foul" rule was put into the book — some eleven years ago—that a fight has ended on a foul in this State. The rule permits a referee to stop a bout if a fighter continues to foul after repeated warnings.

Sale Not Compulsory

NEW YORK, Nov. 16—(BUP)—A statement to correct the impression that the New York Yankees must be sold was issued today by Byron Clark Jr., attorney for the state of the late Colonel Jacob Ruppert and the New York Yankees' ball club.

"Any statement that any person holds an option to purchase the Yankees is erroneous," Clark said. "The executors of the estate want it made clear that there is no compulsion to sell the ball club, but that their position is that if a favorable offer is made on favorable terms their duty is to consider and accept it."

Carpetball Notes

All members of the City Carpetball League learned with deep regret of the passing of Vice-president Ed. Heap and his beloved wife during the last ten days. Ed was one of the best in the league, taking a win or a loss in his calm way. The league has lost a good friend and member.

We regret that owing to unforeseen circumstances the schedule did not appear last Saturday, but hope to carry on every Saturday from now.

Welcome to Tom Ferguson and his gang who have joined with us for the season, bringing the total to nine teams.

Only one or two reports received to date. Will gather up the rest and publish in full by next Saturday. Whispers of some heavy scoring to date, but apparently the Auto Trimmers can't get their car started.

Schedule for the Week.

SPORTS – DAY BY DAY

By FRED D. CRAIG

The Peterborough Hockey Club will soon make an appeal to the sporting public of the city for financial assistance. The players and executive members feel that the entertainment they gave local fans last winter and the publicity gained for their home city by their feat of capturing the Ontario and Eastern Canada intermediate championship justify them in seeking a measure of aid from the community at the start of another season. Running a hockey team these days is an expensive proposition. In the first place the number of players that have to be carried is much greater than in the earlier years of hockey. Equipment, too, is much more costly. The amount of padding and protective equipment worn by the modern hockey player would cause the eyes of the old timers to pop right out of their heads. Sticks and skates, too, are more expensive.

* * * * * *

In the case of the Peterborough club pre-season practices represent a heavy item of expense. Lacking the benefit of artificial ice it is necessary to travel to Oshawa for workout and that means an early drain on the treasury. Group travelling expenses, too, represent a considerable outlay. The jumps are fairly long and if Kingston happens to be thrown into the group this winter the item of travelling will give the Peterborough club a decided list toward the red. The Petes won two championships last season and had a long list of home games including a number of outstanding exhibition fixtures. In spite of all that the club was lucky to do just a little better than break even. And that is counting in, too, the revenue obtained from subscriptions and other sources entirely outside of the gate receipts.

* * * * * *

There is rather a full week-end in the National Hockey League. Tonight the New York Rangers, the only undefeated club in the major loop stage their opener at Madison Square Gardens with Detroit Red Wings as their opponents. The Detroiters got a tie with the classy Young Men of Manhattan a week ago but tonight is likely to be a different story. Canadiens, badly walloped in Montreal Thursday night come right back against the Maple Leafs in Toronto. The Leafs rather put their press agents on the spot by the lopsided win which makes it difficult to smoke up tonight's game as much of a box office draw. There are three games Sunday night, Toronto playing at Boston, Detroit at Americans and Canadiens at Chicago. Just for the fun of the thing we'll call all those three fixtures in favor of the home talent in each case. If we're wrong it's too early to worry about it; we'll be wrong often before the ice goes out of the arenas.

When The Cadets Won

Thirty years ago Peterborough football fans were in a high state of excitement over the announcement that the Royal Military College team of Kingston and Varsity seconds would meet at Riverside Park here in the final game for the intercollegiate intermediate championship. Interest was added by the fact that there was a Peterborough boy on each club, Harry Smith playing on the half line for the R.M.C. team and Pete Campbell quarterback for the Varsity squad. It was not surprising that a big crowd greeted the rival college squads when they trotted out on the field. The cadets brought plenty of support with them for they arrived on a special train with practically the whole R.M.C. student body along and they made their presence known. Varsity on the other hand had to depend on the Peterborough fans for rooting assistance.

* * * * * *

As for the game itself, it was a stubborn, hard-fought battle between evenly matched teams in the pink of condition. Neither team could make any material gains through the line or in sweeps around the ends and the argument soon settled down into a two-bucks-and-a-kick affair, with both squads hope for breaks in the shape of fumbles. A kick to the deadline by R.M.C. was the only score in the first two periods but in the third the soldiers drove the Toronto collegians back into their own territory and held them there while five singles were pounded over the goal line. Varsity came back in the last period to register two rouges and the game wound up with R.M.C. victorious 6 to 2. Prominent in that battle of long ago were two Varsity players who were destined to shine with Varsity seniors, Pete Campbell, star quarterback and Jeff Taylor, big lineman.

Peterborough curlers are warned to keep next Friday night clear and to be sure to obtain leave of absence from friend wife for that evening. Further than to say that President Doug Carlisle of the Peterborough Curling Club has arranged an unusual treat for that occasion and that it will be something that no local knight of the stane and besom would think for a moment of missing we are unable to make any definite announcement today. However, the curling fraternity is asked to keep its eye on this column early next week when the mystery will be solved to the satisfaction of all concerned.

There will be two lively games of basketball in the Y.M.C.A. house league tonight and enthusiasts of the cage game who are looking for a little excitement in the line of Saturday night entertainment could do worse than take in the double-header. The four clubs who are battling it out for the Dominion Life trophy are well-balanced and stage quite a fight every time out.

A Rally Call To Juniors

A rally call is extended to all junior hockey players in Peterborough to attend a meeting in the Chamber of Commerce on Tuesday night at which plans for the season will be discussed. This invitation is for all of last year's players who are still eligible for the junior ranks as well as for all other youngsters who wish to try out for the team this season. A cordial invitation is also extended to all fans who are interested in junior hockey and would like to lend a helping hand. Included in the business to be transacted at Tuesday night's meeting will be the select of a junior coach and manager. There are prospects of a good junior grouping this season and every effort will be made to round up a Peterborough team that will make a determined bid for the group honors.

Frank Boucher, coach of the New York Rangers, is of the opinion that the race in the National Hockey League this season will be closer than a year ago. He bases that view on what he has seen of the Black Hawks, Red Wings and Amerks all of which he says are stronger than their 1939 editions. That may be so, but the unfortunate part of the N.H.L. setup is that the Canadiens are apparently no better than a year ago, if as good and that is a bad feature, especially from the viewpoint of fans in Canada who realize the importance of Montreal's interest in professional hockey being maintained. Only two clubs in Canada are now in the big show and it is desirable that Montreal should continue to be represented in the N.H.L. A series of weak teams there would be a dangerous proposition.

By RUTH RAY KANE

READ THIS FIRST:

Disheartened because she can find no work, Lona Ackerman, whose father is serving a life sentence for murder, finds some consolation after telling her troubles to Jim Claridge, an acquaintance she has decided to trust. Aside from Claridge, she is alone in the world, jobless and broke. Jim gives Lona a lead for another job and she applies at the office of the Western Realties company. Lona likes her new work, sees more and more of Jim evenings. On Sunday they decided to go to a nearby lake for a picnic. Avoiding old friends who had snubbed her, Lona plunges into the lake, infuriated, and swims out farther than she intended.

(NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY)

CHAPTER TWELVE

WITH THREE-FOURTHS of the lake behind her, there was nothing for Lona to do but keep going. Tiredly, she swam a few more yards, trying to take it easy, hoping her strength would return. But her arms only seemed to grow heavier and her breath shorter. Alarmed now, she pushed desperately against the water. Each yard seemed like a mile, each minute dragged endlessly. . . . And then suddenly, a streak of pain hit her!

Cramps, like a giant hand reaching out from somewhere in the bottom of the lake dragged at her. With a faint cry she double up and went under. Choking, trying to hold her breath, struggling to free her limbs from the grip that was twisting them into helplessness, she went down, and came up again.

"Jim!" she managed to scream out across the suddenly hostile water. Then she was fighting again. Fighting and—losing! The world seemed to have turned to water . . . terrible, crushing.

"Jim—" she tried to cry again, and a swift gladness shook her as she felt, rather than saw, a dark form loom close to her. Frantically she reached for him, grasped a wet shoulder, tried to find his neck. If she could only get her arms about his neck.

"Easy, girl!" he heard him mutter. "Take it easy. Let go! . . . Let go—"

She knew she should loosen the grip that had tightened itself, somehow, about his neck, but she couldn't do it. The water was too terrible! How could she let go? He was straining, trying to pull away from her, panting.

"Jim—" she tried to cry again, and then something hit her on the jaw, something hard. After that she knew no more.

She was lying on the sand when she regained consciousness. Jim was bending over her, working her arms. His face was white and his teeth were set and he was breathing hard.

"Girl!" he cried, when he saw that her eyes were open. "You're all right?" He dropped her arms and gave her a little shake by her shoulders. In his eyes was a look she had never seen there before.

"Tell me you're all right!" he repeated as she stared up at him. "You—God, you scared me, girl." With a sudden swoop he gathered her into his arms, wet and dripping, as they both were, and Lona felt him tremble.

"I'm sorry, Jim," she managed to gasp. The tears came then and, choking, she tried to hide her head on his wet shoulder.

"Suppose I hadn't followed! Or if I hadn't got there—in time!" He looked at the water and she felt him shudder. "And I had to—hit you! You wouldn't be quiet—" There was horror in his voice as he looked at the dark bruise swelling on her chin. "Sure you're all right?"

"Of course I'm all right." Lona felt her heart beat with a sudden vigor that sent a glow creeping over her body despite her chattering teeth. "Only I'm cold—" she brought out, and tried to burrow closer.

Her distress seemed to bring him back to himself.

"Of course," he acquiesced. "What am I thinking of, keeping you here like this? You'll get pneumonia." He looked about ruefully, and Lona saw that they were at the farther end of the beach, opposite the bathhouse. From across the water she could hear, faintly, the cries of the bathers on the other side, the bathers she had tried to escape.

"I'll have to carry you," he decided and, lifting her bodily in his arms, he set off through the trees without further ado.

"I'm too heavy, Jim!" she protested, her face against his chest, the exhaustion she had been fighting stealing over her, taking possession of her body. Beneath her ear she could feel his heart pumping hard and it filled her, suddenly with a feeling of safeness, of being cared for. She pressed closer to him, and her arms went about his neck. "Jim," she brought out, realization of all that had happened taking hold of her. "Oh, Jim!"

He halted for a moment and stood, looking down at her, seeing the tears that started in her eyes. "Don't girl!" he said, and his voice was tender. "Don't cry. You're not to cry again—ever! You're safe with me, now."

His arms strained her to him with a new tightness and she felt his heart racing. He rubbed his face against her wet hair. "Do you understand?" he brought out.

"Yes, Jim, I—understand," she managed to murmur before she allowed her tiredness to overcome her completely, deliciously.

Safe! That word, spoken in Jim's low drawl was running through her mind like a song as she went back up her boarding house stairs to her room. Safe! She had never expected to connect that word with a man, after all she had been through. She had never expected she would allow a man to love her, either, or to love anyone herself.

For Jim loved her? She knew that, now, and the realization was warm and comforting. It seemed to envelop her in sense of security that was unlike anything she had known since the gay, thoughtless days back in Bridgewater. He was so casual about it, so sweet and so reticent. Not demanding, as she had always thought love must be.

Through the long ride home he had scarcely spoken a word to her. She had sat with her shoulder pressed to his, warmly, not needing to speak. Now and then he would look down at her, and his eyes were solemn and tender, and the half-smile that crinkled up his face was full of meaning. Meaning that made her heart race.

He hadn't even kissed her. For a moment as they sat in the chugging car before her boarding house to say good night she had thought he was going to. He had taken his arms from the wheel and put them about her slim body and held her infinitely close for a long moment.

"Good night, girl," he said in the drawl she had come to know so well. His lips had rested for a moment on her hair. Then, as if he knew the shyness that was possessing her, he released her gently.

"Good night, Jim," she whispered back. "Thank you for a beautiful time. It's been — wonderful."

"I'll wait until you get to your room," he told her, protectingly. "Turn on the light and wave. Until tomorrow, then." He gave her hand a parting pressure and she felt suddenly humble.

"Until tomorrow—Jim."

Just that, but her heart was singing as she hurried up to her room. It was so wonderful to be happy, she thought, with queer humility. So wonderful and so undeserved.

She could still hear the comforting chug of the noisy roadster as she fitted her key into the lock of her door. She turned on her light as she stepped into the room. Could he see her, she wondered, and flushed as a honk from below answered her question. Going to the window, she watched the roadster out of sight, its tail light winking like a red eye in the night.

She was still standing there by the window 15 minutes later, when a knock at her door and the whining voice of her new landlady interrupted.

"A telegram for you, Miss Ackerman," the woman sang out before she could open to her. "It's been here since before supper, and I couldn't raise you. It must be real important. It's from the capital—"

"From the capital!" Lona's face paled suddenly, and her hand shook as she took the fateful yellow envelop. It must be Daddy.

Her worst fears were verified.

"FATHER DYING. COME AT ONCE," it said, cruelly, in bald, uncompromising capitals.

For a moment the room whirled.

"I didn't know you came from the capital." The landlady was eyeing her curiously. "Anything happened that's bad?"

"I must use the telephone," Lona managed to bring out, then. Her hands were trembling, and her legs were shaky under her weight as she went back down the steps she had mounted only a little while ago so confidently. Fumbling, she dialed Mrs. Peterman's and asked for Jim.

Davie Kerr Is Leading League Goalies

By SYDNEY GRUSON
(Canadian Press Staff Writer.)

The loudest drums have been beaten for a lot of other guys so far this season, but Lester Patrick and Frank Boucher can't be feeling so badly about the first two weeks of the National Hockey League campaign.

True enough, Chicago Black Hawks and Toronto Maple Leafs are ahead of their New York Rangers, but the front-running Hawks have played four games and the Leafs three, while the Rangers have gleaned enough points in just two games to stay right behind them.

And in the pay-off department, goals-scored-against, who else but Ranger's Davie Kerr is leading with a 1.5 average. That is probably the greatest source of satisfaction to the Ranger bosses, who are as convinced as ever that the Ranger 15 is good enough to retain the Stanley Cup.

The Rangers make their bow to the home fans tonight against Detroit Red Wings, one of the two clubs with whom they are tied for third place. The league's other game brings Montreal Canadiens back against the Maple Leafs in Toronto, with the Flying Frenchmen barely having time to recover from Thursday night's 6-2 beating from Toronto.

The Leafs continue to impress, Gord Drillon and Syl Apps, their biggest guns, were spiked in Montreal, but along came Hank Goldup and Pete Langelle to take up the torch and fire two goals each. It appears that Leaf power is better distributed than in many years and that Happy Day may be able to take some of the offensive load off his big two.

It is a double-header week-end for Leafs, Canadiens and Detroit. Toronto makes its first Boston invasion Sunday night against the burly Bruins, while Detroit meets up again with the Americans in New York and Canadiens travel to Chicago to engage the red-hot Hawks.

This round-up could go a long way toward shaking up the standings which seem unnatural with Paul Thompson's club in first place and Boston Bruins, the league champions, in sixth. The Hawks, however, will take a lot of beating and they're set to get off to such a running start that they won't have to worry at all about the bottom of the league.

Canadians will have to show quickly that their defence is going to stand up. In three games they've had 10 goals scored against them, while the offence got only three—a combination that can't lead to a spot in the first-division sun.

• NIAGARA FALLS, HAMILTON AND ST. CATHARINES WIN OHA GAMES

Oshawa Drops 3-1 Game To Niagara Falls

NIAGARA FALLS, Ont., Nov. 16 —(Special). — Niagara Falls clicked in all departments here last night to record a 3-1 win over Oshawa in an O.H.A. Senior A fixture A crowd of 1,300 braved the stormy weather to be present.

The Massecar-coached team forced the play throughout and their back-checking was so effective that most of the G-Men thrusts were frustrated before the danger zone was reached. The Falls' front fine of Walton, Cooper, and Bellinger was the most impressive.

McQuesten in the Oshawa cage, made many fine saves and in the second and third periods, was a big factor in blanking the home attackers.

Sy Allan, Niagara centre, suffered a sprained ankle early in the second period, and was out for the remainder of the game.

The Fallsers did all their damage in the opening frame. Cooper took Walton's pass for the first. Bellinger scored next, with Walton again providing the pass. Walton netted the third on Cooper's pass.

Oshawa got in one close call in the middle frame, and Carey moved fast to save from Thompson. The lone counter for Tracy Shaw's team came in the last minute of the third period, Thompson caging the disc on Covert's pass.

At St. Catharines

ST. CATHARINES, Nov. 16.—St. Catharines Saints snapped their three-game losing streak in the O.H.A. Senior "A" series by trimming London Streamliners, 6 to 0, here last night before 1,200 fans.

The Saints turned in their best display of the season and led from start to finish. Rossini gave the homesters the lead with the only goal of the first period. Heximer and Hastie counted in the middle stanza to make it 3 to 0 and in the final frame. Backer scored twice and Mundrick once to complete the total.

London battled hard throughout but couldn't cope with the faster locals. Penalties cost them two goals.

Star Quarterback

Hitting the comeback trail in great style this year, Bobby Porter of Balmy Beach has been selected as quarterback on the O.R.F.U. all-star squad. He will be in action against Sarnia when the Beaches take them on in the first game of the total point series for the O.R.F.U. crown.

Second Helping Captures Bowie Handicap

PIMLICO RACE TRACK, BALTIMORE, Nov. 16.—(AP)—Second Helping, a comparatively obscure 3-year-old filly, helped herself to the main portion of the purse in the lucrative Bowie Handicap when she amazed a crowd of some 8,000 with an easy triumph in the closing day feature here Friday afternoon. The mud-loving representative of Connie Smythe, Toronto, hockey magnate, plowed past the wire with three lengths to spare under the lightweight booter, Herb Lindberg, well known on Canadian tracks. Her supporters received $40.70 for two.

William Woodward's Dusky Fox was just as easily second, four lengths in front of Mrs. Marie Evans' champion of the marathon runners, Shot Put. The latter ruled favorite in the field of nine that contested this twenty-eighth running of the event.

Second Helping carried 105 pounds ran a mile and five furlongs of gumbo going in 3:02 and earned a purse of $10,200, plus a handsome trophy.

While the surprising Second Helping, considered a second-rater, was achieving her success, three other highly ranked fillies of her age labored home in the quagmire that serve as a racing strip. These were H. P. Headley's pair of Salaminia and Equitable, and Mrs. Dion Kerr's True Call. The winning daughter of Swift and Sure-Featherweight added one more upset to the many recorded of late.

Rollo dashed into the lead after a good start and True Call was right after him. As they reached the end of one mile, True Call put Rollo away. The Kerr lassie did not remain on top long, for Dusky Fox came from close behind and opened up a five-length lead around the final bend. Second Helping, which had been perfectly rated in fourth place, then rallied with a rush that carried her to the front after turning for home. She drew away with ease. Shot Put staged a characteristic rush that came too late. Yale o' Nine was fourth, followed by Abbe Pierre, Equitable, True Call, Salaminia and Rollo.

Victory for Second Helping was her eighth in twenty-two starts this year. It was her fourth score since coming to the United States racing from Canada last summer. At Narragansett in September she enjoyed a three-straight winning streak. Victory today boosted her earnings to over $19,000 for the year.

It will be recalled that the sturdy daughter of Swift and Sure registered a notable victory at Long Branch Park last spring. On that occasion she captured the $3,000 Long Branch Handicap, leading home H. R. Bain's Sir Bevidere and H. Dirks' Wise Will in a surprise score. Also rans at the end of that mile-and-an-eighth trip were H. C. Hatch's Heleno and Suffern

At The Centre Theatre

Pat O'Brien, Merle Oberon and George Brant, co-starred in "Till We Meet Again." The second feature hit is 'Blondie,' from the popular comic strip. The newsreel completes the splendid program for the first half of next week.

Hamilton Dofascos Crew Wins Four Games In Succession

HAMILTON, Nov. 16 (Special) — Hamilton Dofascos, sparked by the speedy Brady-Fritz-Shillington line, which is rapidly establishing itself as the best line in the ranks of the senior O.H.A., leaped into undisputed leadership of the league at the Barton Street Arena last night by a 5-2 victory over the Port Colborne club. It was Hamilton's fourth straight win.

Over 3,000 roaring fans witnessed the piece, which was the best home game of the two played here in the still young season, and the tilt was marked by its speed, the brilliant stick-handling and play-making of Doug Fritz, the bespectacled centre ice player, and the rugged defense staged by Leo Lamoureux, star last season of the Port Colborne Flyers.

Hamilton started the game minus the services of Marshall and Godin, both defensemen, who are on the injured list, and Lamoureux and Sherry were forced to play the entire sixty minutes with but a few moments rest for each, the relief coming from Bill Dinning, who was one of the few of last year's Dofascos to make the grade with the Redding-coached team this year. However, Bill Allan, Port rear-guardsman, was dumped heavily by Woodward in the first period and left the ice for the balance of the game. This evened up the defense a bit.

Port Colborne opened the scoring, Thompson hammering the rubber in past Jack Eley on a pass from McKelvie. This was the only score in the first period, although Sargent, in goal for the losers, was forced to stop plenty of hard shots during the session.

Swanson tripped Brunnell at the end of the first period and Port Colborne started the second period a man short. Hamilton started to turn on the heat and scored two goals within 41 seconds of each other, Fritz getting the first and Shillington the second.

Sticks started to ride high and players were dumped with a frequency that pleased the crowd immensely. Lamoureux got his first rest after thirty straight minutes of hockey, but Sherry stuck on the job with Dinning as his assistant.

At 18.50 of the second period Brady stole the puck off Swanson when the big Port defenseman was standing still and passed to Fritz who had nobody to beat but Sargent and he did it in a truly artistic fashion to put Dafascos up 3-1.

In the last period Laroche banged a hard shot at Eley and the Hamilton goalie's legs spread wide as he saved. He was still off balance when Fitzgerald scored on the rebound. The Brady-Fritz-Shillington line made the score read 4-2 five minutes later, the actual scorer being Fritz again. Shillington scored the fifth Dofasco goal in the last thirty seconds of play on a pass from Brady.

Outside of the crack Hamilton line, prominent for the winners were Lamoureux and Sherry and Eley in goal. Best for the losers were McKelvie, Fitzgerald, Laroche and Concessi.

Boucher Sees Closer Race

NEW YORK, Nov. 16. — (CP) — Frank Boucher believes at least three of the National Hockey League clubs already have shown that they are stronger this season than last, and that, consequently, it will be a better race.

The coach of the Stanley Cup holders, New York Rangers, who open their home season tomorrow night in a clash with Detroit Red Wings at Madison Square Garden, said today that unquestionably New York Americans, Detroit and the Chicago Black Hawks are better teams than a year ago. He wasn't sure about Montreal Canadiens. He had not seen them.

His own team?

"Well, we're the same squad," he said. "We're a bit heavier than most of the others, and take a while to settle down."

He predicted Detroit will give his boys a tough struggle. "They outplayed us in Detroit the other night," he said. "We were lucky to get away with a draw."

Boucher likes the new Red Wing goalie, Johnny Mowers, up from Omaha, who was brilliant in amateur in minor pro competition. Mowers and the new line that Jack Adams brought up from Omaha, Archie Wilder, Leslie Douglas and Joe Carveth, are real comers, the Ranger coach believes.

There will be only one change on the Rangers. Boucher is going to shift Lynn Patrick over to the right wing from the left, where he has played for some years. Clint Smith centres the line, between Lynn and either Kilby MacDonald or Alfie Pike, who will alternate at left.

In the first two games Boucher was not able to use Dutch Hiller because the speedy winger had injured his knee. But he will be in action tomorrow.

Argo Half Line Be Sparked By Elwyn Morris

By WILL GRUSON
(Canadian Press Staff Writer.)

TORONTO, Nov. 16 — (CP). — Bound for stardom after less than a season in Big-time football and now, by chance, one of the main cogs on the Toronto Argonaut backfield, Elwyn Morris is expected to be the man around whom the Argo half line will be built after this season.

The 19-year-old halfback, whose only previous football experience consisted of a year with a midget team and two with a Toronto High School club, showed enough promise in the pre-season training to make the Argo second team.

No one realized at that time what a large part he was going to play in helping Argos gain the Interprovincial Union playoffs. He probably would have remained just another back if Art West and Red Storey hadn't suffered injuries.

With these two on the sidelines, Lew Hayman was forced to use Morris more often and the stocky little half has come through. The men who direct the fortunes of Argos have been waiting for someone like him to arrive, for the players who comprised their great backfield when they won the Dominion title in 1937 and 1938 have nearly all gone.

Now it appears that West, the main man in that backfield, is playing his last year. West suffered a knee injury last season and he's lost much of his speed. It will be West's shoes Morris will have to fill.

During his years with Argos West gained a reputation as one of the best backs in Canada, but Hayman believes Morris will be every bit as good.

"He looks better than West did in his first season," Hayman said. "He is an exceptionally good runner, passer and pass receiver and when he learns to tackle and block a little better we'll have one of the finest backs produced in this country."

Morris' work in the Argo games against Ottawa Rough Riders proved he had something—an uncanny shift and two of the fastest feet on the gridiron. In the first game, which Ottawa won 41-6, he was the only Argo half who was able to untrack himself, running 80 yards for their only touchdown.

In the return battle he hooked up with the veteran Bobby Coulter to lead Argos to their 11-9 upset victory. He pitched a touchdown pass to Coulter and combined with him in a 52-yard runback that paved the way for Annis Stukus' game-winning field goal.

Regain Amateur Status

MIDLAND, Nov. 16—(CP)—George Dudley, president of the Canadian Amateur Hockey Association, announced yesterday that Armand Raymond of Montreal and William (Smiley) Meronek had been reinstated as amateurs.

Raymond played with Montreal Canadiens until 1938, and with New Haven and Providence in the American Hockey League for a while after Canadiens sent him to the minors.

Meronek was one of the amateurs signed by Canadiens late last season. He played as a professional only a short while.

Sarnia Nominates Perry And Butler

SARNIA, Nov. 16.—Captain Pat Butler, an inside wing, and Ralph Perry, flying wing, were nominated by members of Sarnia's 226th Battery footballers for the Imperial Oil Trophy awarded annually for the Most Valuable Player in the senior series of the Ontario Rugby Football Union. Each club in the union nominates two players for the honor.

Sarnia players have won the award three times since it was first put up in 1934. Johnny Ferraro, Montreal halfback, who won the award in 1938, turned the trophy over to Mrs. Ormond Beach in honor of her husband who was killed just prior to the opening of the season.

Winners of the trophy to date are:
1934—Norman Perry, Sarnia.
1935—Hugh Stirling, Sarnia.
1936—Syd Reynolds, Balmy Beach.
1937—Ormond Beach, Sarnia.
1939 — Eddie Thompson, Balmy Beach.

Half a million boys and girls from schools and colleges of Japan will be sent to Manchukuo during their vacations next year to help clear forests and till land in the sparsely populated sections.

Lorraine Shift Seen Proof Ruhr Shattered

By LLOYD LEHRBAS
(Associated Press Staff Writer.)

WASHINGTON, Nov. 16—(AP).—Germany's expulsion of French-speaking residents from France's province of Lorraine was regarded in informed diplomatic quarters here as one more step in Hitler's plan to absorb that long contested borderland in his "Greater Reich."

If the French are being replaced by Germans from the Ruhr Valley—as reported in informed circles in Vichy—it may also mean that persistent British bombing of Germanys highly industrialized Ruhr Valley has been effective to degree not hitherto admitted by Berlin.

Before I left Vichy recently it was widely reported that the Royal Air Force had been making it so "hot" for the Ruhr that many Germans were moving across the border and taking over homes of French refugees who had not yet returned to the occupied region. Wholesale expulsion of French from Lorraine would provide more homes for bombshy Germans from the Ruhr, and at the same time enable Hitler to "Germanize" Lorraine thoroughly.

Dates to June.

Although the expatriation of the French from Lorraine apparently has now assumed grand scale proportions, the actual start of this German program dates back to the days immediately following the fall of France. Before I left unoccupied France at the end of the summer between 20,000 and 25,000 French expelled from Lorraine, had arrived in the vicinity of Lyons.

All reported they first had been notified they could remain in Lorraine if they became German citizens. Within a few days, however, they were informed that since Lorraine was to be "rejoined" to the Reich only people of German blood could remain.

Many of the refugees, carrying only small bundles of clothing and food, said they had been forced to leave all possessions behind because they had only two hours' warning before being forced to leave their homes.

Among the refugees were many farmers who said squads of German soldiers had suddenly appeared with orders for their immediate removal, forcing the evacuation of entire villages and farm communities.

Long Defensive War Likely By Nazi Forces

(By JOHN A. STEVENSON.)

Once Germany has been forced to recognize the failure of her tremendous assault upon Britain and is reduced to a defensive strategy, she has for all practical purposes lost the war, but her humble capitulation at an early date can hardly be anticipated. Remaining a very formidable military power, as the casualties in her army have been trivial, she might withdraw her troops from Norway, Denmark and the greater part of Belgium and occupied France, and with her Siegfried Line extended northward to the sea behind the water barriers of the Rhine and the Meuse, which would enable her to keep a grip upon the iron mines of Lorraine, so vital for her industrial war needs, she could present to British armies landed on the Continent a defensive system which they could hope to break through only at the expense of very heavy casualties. Retaining control of Czecho-Slovakia, Rumania and the portion of Poland which she has absorbed, she could continue to exploit their resources and enslaved manpower and would also be still able to draw supplies of food and raw materials from Russia and the Balkan countries. Indeed, the prime objective of Hitler's conversations with Molotoff at Berlin may be a desire of the former to get assurances from Russia that, in the event of Germany being compelled to resort to the defensive, she can rely upon sufficient help from Moscow to frustrate a complete British victory.

A Siege Of Germany.

If such assurances were given, Germany would feel able to stand a long siege and would calculate that, if she could keep her western defenses intact for several years, the exhaustion of financial and economic resources and general war weariness would gradually play havoc with the morale of the British peoples. As the siege proceeded, the German army, with the help of the directing spirits in the worlds of finance and business, would take over the government from Hitler and his crew, whose prestige is dependent upon victories, and the refurbished German government would be sending forth emissaries to explore the possibility of concluding a peace which would not leave Germany completely humiliated and financially and economically dilapidated as in 1918. Once more, as in the postwar years, the argument would be pressed with subtle propaganda that Germany was the economic mainspring of Europe, and, if complete chaos, to the accompaniment of a Communist revolution, overwhelmed her there could be no hope for any recovery of political, economic and social equilibrium for Europe, and Britain could not escape the general misery and disorder which would ensue. And who can assert that, say, by 1946 such arguments would not find a sympathetic response in many circles in the British Commonwealth?

Real Objectives Of The War.

Now the real objectives of this terrible war are, first, to frustrate the sinister designs of three predatory nations, which, having come under the control of groups of conscienceless gangsters, are bent upon dominating the world and setting back the clock of humane civilization, and, secondly, once they have been suppressed, to build up some world organization which will be able to provide an effective insurance against any attempt at a repetition of this unprincipled adventure. There was happily forthcoming the other day an encouraging sign that the British Government has this second objective at heart, when Lord Cranborne, the Secretary for the Dominions, declared that in the postwar organization of the world the nations must, as an essential for the continuation of peace, agree to some limitation of their sovereignty and establish not merely an international police force but machinery for the removal of the causes of war.

Importance of Time Factor

The re-election of President Roosevelt offers considerable hope that the American people will cooperate in the evolution of some such world organization, but inspiration of vigorous leadership for it will probably have to come from the British Commonwealth, and it is exceedingly important that it should be able to achieve its war objectives before the exhaustion of its elan, and spiritual forces generate the same sort of mental lassitude and indifference which had fatal results after the last war for British policy. Operating from bases in Belgium and Northern France, the Royal Air Force could intensify its daily and nightly bombardment of vital centres in Germany, and, if German morale is as fundamentally weak as some expert psychologists suggest, a debacle, which would soon extend to the army, might soon ensue. But on the other hand, if the Germans showed the same capacity as the British for enduring a ruthless aerial devastation of life and property, the weapon of propaganda might have to be employed to shorten their resistance. They would have to be bluntly told that stern measures like a military occupation of German territory, the complete destruction of the Krupp works and other armament plants, and the segregation of the non-Prussian parts of Hitler's Reich into a separate State were regarded as measures absolutely essential to prevent the resurgence of Germany as a dangerous military power, and they could be warned that worse calamities would befall them if they did not help by a timely appreciation of realities and an unconditional capitulation to avert the loss of thousands of valuable young lives and the complete collapse of European civilization. Essential as our victory is for the future of decent civilization, the time factor in its achievement is also very important.

To Address Missionary Rally

DR. R. B. McCLURE

REV. LESTER L. BURY

A United Missionary Rally is to be held in the George Street United Church on Monday afternoon and evening with two speakers who have attracted large audiences wherever they have appeared in Ontario. Dr. Robert McClure is Field Director of the International Red Cross in China and has many thrilling experiences to tell of life in that great land. Rev. Lester Bury is well known in Canada because of his intimate connection with Labrador and the splendid work which he has accomplished there.

Noted Speakers To Be Heard At Great Missionary Rally

Many people are looking forward with deep interest to the united missionary rally in George Street Church on Monday, November 18, on which date meetings will be held at 4.30, 6.30, and 8 p.m. The speakers will be : 4.30, Rev. Lester Burry of Labrador; supper meeting, 6.30, Dr. Robert McClure of China; 8 p.m., illustrated lecture by Rev. Lester Burry.

One reason why this interest is so deep is because the two speakers are dynamic and forceful personalities who have attracted large audiences all over Ontario.

Dr. Robert McClure has been called by some the "Scarlet Pimpernel of the Orient" because of the thrilling experiences through which he has come. For some time he has been the field director of the International Red Cross in China, and is thoroughly familiar with the famous Burma Road. He has been closely associated with Generalissimo and Madam Chiang Kai-Shek who rule that troubled country. Hence he is one of the best informed men upon the subject of the war which China is fighting so bravely against Japan. So great is the demand for his services that the Niagara Lions Club stated recently that they were willing to arrange a rally of all the clubs of the district if he could come to Niagara, and offered him a large fee for his visit. He has addressed several large clubs in Toronto, the Women's Canadian Club in Eaton Uptown Auditorium, an audience of 1,200 people in Danforth Avenue Church, Toronto, and 500 in Dublin Street Church, Guelph. Dr. McClure will be heard at the supper meeting at 6.30 p.m.

Rev. Lester Burry, who will speak at 4.30 and 8 p.m., is well known in Canada because of his intimate connection with the famous land of Labrador, and success of his mission in that isolated region. His portable radio broadcasting station has brought messages of hope to the trappers in that ice-bound country in the winter, and to the fishermen in the North Atlantic in the summer. Mr. Burry has a very fine collection of pictures of Labrador and its people which he will use at the evening meeting. During his absence from home the Government of Newfoundland is carrying on the broadcasting operations, because they believe them to be essential to the character and mind of those isolated people. Mr. Burry is regarded as the essential man of Labrador.

It is not often that the citizens of Peterborough have the opportunity of hearing two such dynamic and outstanding speakers. It is believed that the full accommodation of George Street Church will be taxed especially for the supper and night meetings. There are persons appointed in each congregation in Peterborough County for the sale of tickets, and returns for same will be made on Monday in the afternoon and evening.

Murray Street Church Is Setting For Chambers-Jackson Wedding

An effective arrangement of yellow and bronze chrysanthemums and fern provided the setting for the marriage in Murray Street Baptist church at two-thirty o'clock this (Saturday) afternoon of Miss Marjorie Jackson, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Bertram Jackson, 15 Cameron street, to Mr. George C. Chambers, son of Mr. and Mrs. Joshua Chambers of Otonabee. Rev. J. H. Sutcliffe, M.A., B.D., who officiated, also sang during the signing of the register. Arthur Collison, L.R.S.M., A.D.C.M., organist, played the wedding music.

Mr. Jackson gave his daughter in marriage. She wore a gown of white lace over satin, designed on simple lines, with draped bodice and full skirt. Her finger-tip veil of embroidered net fell from a halo of lace, and she carried a shower bouquet of Bettertime roses. Miss Isabel Jackson was her sister's bridesmaid in a frock of dusky pink taffeta with bows of a deeper shade on the bouffant skirt that dipped into a slight train. Her hat matched her gown, and she carried a Colonial nosegay in blending tones. Mr. Arthur Jackson was groomsman, and ushers were Mr. V. W. Skitch and Mr. O. J. Hayward.

For a reception at the home of the bride's parents, the bride's mother wore a gown of Royal blue chiffon and Chantilly lace, and corsage of Briarcliff roses.

Mr. and Mrs. Chambers left on a motor trip, and on their return will live in Otonabee. For travelling the bride had chosen a printed silk frock with small feather hat, and coat of black French boucle trimmed with Persian lamb.

400 Missionaries Returned From Their Work In Orient

With four hundred missionaries of various denominations from the Orient now at Vancouver, some of them on relief, having left behind bombed cities, churches, hospitals, and schools, the world Christian conflict is developing to distressing proportions. In order that Christians everywhere may be informed of the situation an international observance of 'Men and Missions' Sunday, endorsed by His Majesty the King, and President Roosevelt is taking place this week-end, Nov. 17-18. Services conducted by laymen will be held in many churches, over 15,000 congregations in the U.S.A. taking part, as well as a large number in the Dominion.

In this observance, St. Paul's church will have a special service on Sunday morning, in which several laymen will speak on the situation, among them being James H. Russell, international representative of the Gideons. A male chorus will lead the praise.

On Monday evening there will be a banquet, at which Rev. A. Rueburn Gibson will speak on the subject "Christianity in World Conflict."

Capt. White Unit Not Badly Off Ralston Replies

OTTAWA, Nov. 16 (CP)—Defense Minister Ralston, replying to criticisms of lack of equipment in a Peterborough Non-Permanent Militia unit, observed in the House of Commons yesterday that the list of equipment which that unit did possess indicated it was "not badly off," considering the pressure under which the Defense Department had been working.

Clothing was issued in the order believed to be imperative, having regard to what were believed to be threats of emergencies on both coasts during the summer, Colonel Ralston said.

The Defense Minister replied to criticisms made Wednesday by Captain G. S. White (Con., Hastings-Peterborough) that the Non-Permanent Active Militia unit of which he was an officer lacked equipment and some men were still drilling evenings in summer uniforms.

Colonel Ralston briefly referred to the pressure on the Department during the summer to clothe and equip 111,000 men in three months.

Underwear Not Issued

While Captain White had complained of lack of underwear, among other things, the Minister said underwear had never been issued to the Non-Permanent Militia. The Non-Permanent Militia had been given boots and socks, however, for the first time in its history.

The Minister said he was "not speaking with any complacency" in the matter, but there had been a remarkable degree of uniformity in the way the Non-Permanent units were outfitted for camp in short order.

During the last war he himself had been in uniform in a Provincial Legislature, as an officer in the Canadian Expeditionary Force.

"As a C.E.F. unit we were entitled to a lot of equipment," he said. "As a company commander I considered it my duty to make life miserable for the Quartermaster until I got equipment for my men.

"I didn't go to the House of Assembly to make a speech about it."

Question of Advisability

Conservative Leader Hanson asked if the Minister was denying a member's right to do so.

"It's the advisability," commented Justice Minister Lapointe.

Captain White had said no member of the forces could communicate directly with Defense Headquarters. The Minister replied that all members of Parliament knew his door was always open to them.

Captain White had said he had been to the Ordnance Branch without result. The Minister said Ordnance had many demands on it, and judging by the list of equipment which Captain White's unit did have, it was not badly off. He pointed out that Captain White's unit was a Non-Permanent Active Militia unit.

The Minister recalled Captain White had complained that his unit had no "aiming rests." These, the Minister explained, were made by tyeing three poles together with a rope and most units made their own.

MAIN STREET TOPICS

MEN TO LEAD PRAISE.

The choir loft of St. Paul's Church will be occupied by about thirty men on Sunday morning, drawn from the congregation, to lead the praise service. The ladies' section will occupy seats in the gallery.

A FEW RECRUITS NEEDED.

Lt.-Col. Frank Bradburn, recruiting officer at the Armoury, reported today that he had a call to supply three or four men as replacements in Stormont, Dundas and Glengarry Highlanders, now stationed at Ottawa.

MAY BE PRESENT

Senator Pallis has written an acknowledgment of the City Council's invitation to attend the tourist dinner at the Empress Tuesday evening, informing City Clerk Outram that she will make a special effort to be present.

SKIERS EARLY

The Peterborough skiing enthusiasts have had an early start this year, and the first fall of snow that could be judiciously called such saw some of them in action. Among others, Fritz Locali and Bob Juby were in Victoria Park last night with skiis, and the report is that the snow was quite satisfactory.

DEER NEAR PETERBOROUGH

The persistent haunting of the Cavan Swamp by four deer, has led Peterborough hunters to the belief that it is not necessary to go to the north woods for game. The four animals have been reported as being seen by Clarence Blodgett, and it is believed that they have made their home in that district.

TOO MUCH WIND

George Robertson has returned from the deer hunt near Sudbury, and reports that the weather in this district is much more conductive to good hunting than it is up north. With a party of eleven, George found the storms too much, and after three days of it returned, but the returning wasn't a disappointing one, for with them they brought eleven deer.

SIX CARS DITCHED.

Six cars were in the ditch along the Peterborough-Port Hope Highway north of Bewdley on Friday evening about 6.30 oclock as F. C. Paterson was returning from a judging competition at Canton in Durham County. "I came along at around fifteen to eighteen miles an hour," Mr. Paterson said, "and was glad to get home without any trouble. The highway was very icy."

CONVOY

In the window of Fashion-Craft's store on George street, there is an unusual display this week. It is devoted to cloth made in England, and packing box from the "old country" also. A poster over the box to the effect that England delivers the goods in spite of the German attempts to prevent inter-empire commerce. There are several fine ships in the window as well, that seems to provide a suitable convoy, and above are model planes.

PLENTY OF DEER.

Parry Sound deer, especially around 12-Mile Lake, were plentiful this year—in fact so plentiful that Harry Gill, George Pearson and Charlie Heard of Lakefield bagged five in the first five days of the hunt and saved Ted Gill and Ralph Beavis the trouble of any tramp when they arrived in camp last Saturday. Harry Gill bagged a nice black bear cub of about 100 pounds in the bargain, and the party got out Wednesday after a 2-day holdup on account of the storm—but escaped being frozen in this year. Their quota comprised four bucks and a doe.

A WRECKING JOB

Provincial Constable Dave Silvester took the wrecking bar and a big hammer to three of the five slot machines in his office this week. The machines have been confiscated and the law indicates they must be broken up.

TO PRESENT BIBLES.

The Gideons, the organization of Commercial Men's Association which has for years been placing Bibles in hotels, are putting 48 new Bibles in the Hotel Champlain, 22 in King's Hotel, and 29 in Queen's Hotel. The presentation of these Bibles will take place in the George Street United Church at 8.30 on Sunday evening when a short message will be given by a member of the Gideon organization.

NEEDS THREE MORE.

Captain Walker of the 3rd Field Park Company, Royal Canadian Engineers, reported this morning that seven men had enlisted, one more was to sign up this morning and he still needs three. The three needed are two motor mechanics and a saddler. Captain Walker will be back in the city on Monday of next week should any men wish to investigate the positions, and they can contact Lt-Col. Frank L. Bradburn, M.C., recruiting officer at the Armouries, at any time.

IN 30,000 CLASS.

According to the Whig-Standard the population of Kingston has "soared suddenly until to-day more than 30,000 people are living within the city's boundaries." This number includes 2,000 students of Queen's University. Kingston's population has long been "hovering about the 25,00 mark." Kingston Township Council gave third reading on Friday to a by-law fixing at $1,500,000 the assesment of property on which Canadian Industries Limited have taken an option. "Official announcement of their final decision on a location for their new plant is expected soon," the Kingston paper comments.

A DENNE MEMORY

The Examiner recently mentioned the part the late Rollie Denne played in attracting the Johnson Outboard Motor Company to Peterborough. A reporter came across further evidence of that special ability of his in a letter written by C. J. Glaspell, former manager of the Ovaltine Company, saying that he has visited some thirty-five other cities and towns in Ontario before coming to Peterborough. His letter included this statement: "It was absolutely impossible to get away from Mayor Denne. He stuck with us until we decided to purchase the property where we are now located." That was only part of the tribute.

A.Y.P.A. Notes

THE DISTRICT COUNCIL

The annual banquet of the District Council of the Anglican Young People's Association was held at Bethany on Wednesday. There were 95 members present, and a few guests. Following the very excellent chicken dinner, the Rev. J. E. Mason, Chaplain of the Council and Rector of St. Mary's, Lifford, welcomed the members and guests on behalf of St. Mary's Branch

Miss Queenie Hope, chairman, and president of the Local Council, proposed the toast to the King. The toast to The Church was proposed by Miss Grace Marshal of St. John's, Peterborough, and responded to by the Rev. W. P. Robertson, also of St. John's, Peterborough. Canon Robertson asked, "Are we, as members of one body, The Church, suffering, because other members of that same body, The Church, are suffering in war-torn lands?"

The toast to the A.Y.P.A. was proposed by Miss Edith Abraham, of All Saints', Peterborough, and very ably responded to by Miss Patricia Earnshaw, Lakefield.

Miss Beatrice Curtis of St. George's, Peterborough, offered as a solo, "Wish Me Luck As You Wave Me Goodbye," and as an encore, "There'll Always Be An England."

Miss Phyllis Moore, as the district representative of the Baptist Young People's Union, extended greetings to the A.Y.P.A. Greetings were also received from Robert Spence on behalf of the United Young People's. Greetings were read from Helen Randall (Mrs.) in her absence, by the secretary.

On behalf of the Council and in approval of the excellent work done during the past year, Miss Patricia Earnshaw, immediate past president, and Nelson Hewitt, past secretary, were the recipients of small gifts from the Council.

Beau Pammett of St. Luke's moved a vote of thanks to the artist, and Miss Dorothy White of All Saints' moved a vote of thanks to Bethany branch for the splendid banquet.

A. R. Kennedy of The Examiner was the speaker for the evening, choosing as his topic, "This Changing World." He presented as a challenge to the young people this question, "Are you helping to pay the price of freedom?" and he felt that once having found our place or piece of work to do, we would follow it through to the finish.

A vote of thanks to Mr. Kennedy was moved by Miss Frances Legon of St. George's, Peterborough.

Dancing was enjoyed for the remainder of the evening to the music of Robert Sisson of Bethany, who was relieved from time to time by John Hooper of Peterborough.

Five Elements Necessary For Democracy

"What We Have We'll Hold," was the theme of an address to the Peterborough Kiwanis Club in the Empress Hotel on Friday. The speaker was Rev. H. L. Roberts, of George Street United Church, and with powerful words he brought forth reason for Britain's position as a nation that he believed to be the "Abiding civilization," referred to in the scriptures by Daniel.

What is it that Britain has and will hold? The speaker asked this question, and then in forceful manner answered it. It is, a city, a citizenship, and a civilization. "Our civilization," the speaker said, and the preservation of that civilization is an ideal.

England does not want territory, Mr. Roberts said, she wants what was Chamberlain's dream, an abiding civilization, wherein there is a fine citizenship. The "crumbling monuments of history tell stories of dead civilizations. Civilizations that were, in their times, great ones; they did not have permanent qualities, and when we say that ours has those qualities, it may be wishful thinking." Mr. Roberts urged that his listeners think of the qualities of the English-speaking civilization, and ask themselves what are the permanent elements? There are five such elements, the speaker said.

Striking Example.

First, there must be, and is in the English speaking civilization, a state with its own democratic government. A state in which the individual of which the masses consist can speak. A striking example of this was the presidential election in the United States. There must be government, for the people, and by the people, history has long since proved that a dictatorship cannot survive, and the crown of citizenship should be torn from the brow of he who sells his vote. It is a sacred thing, and history has also proved that a poor government is better than none.

Secondly there must be religious freedom, creed is in fact of no consequence if it does no one harm. Speaking of the present plight of the Jew, the speaker said that the civilization that persecutes the Jew will go down. The nation, above all others protecting the Jew, is the same England in which minds were sufficiently broad, and souls so great, that a man named Disreli was the Prime Minister.

Man Needs Day of Rest.

Thirdly is religious worship. The day of rest mentioned in the scriptures the speaker said, is an absolute necessity. Man must have one day of rest in seven, and without it his civilization fails. Nations have tried the eight day week, the nine day week, and history speaks of their ruin. Rest is necessary, and worship.

The fourth enduring element necessary in an abiding civilization, is property. Man should have, said Mr. Roberts, ground of his own to stand on during life, and ground to lie under, at his death. Wealth, in itself, has no harm, and man must have possessions. The civilization that says no man owns; the state owns all; must die. "We should never complain because some man has a million dollars, and another only a few." The world must be thus, and without such conditions humanity would not exist as such.

The final requisite brought forth by Mr. Roberts was the purity of marriage. In an abiding civilization there is one man—one wife. As an inspiring example of the different views taken toward womanhood by civilizations the world has known, the speaker told of a man of wisdom in an English museum. He had been regarding relics representative of ages past, and asked himself if there was one quality in the illustrations consistent, and being opposed to British ideals. "Ah," he said, at length, "there is. It is the attitude toward womanhood." To survive, a civilization must revere womanhood. Among the nations of the English speaking civilization there is a franchise for the woman. Without respect in that direction a civilization crumbles.

Duty of Kiwanians

The members of the Kiwanis Club, the speaker said, recognize as their motto the phrase "We Build," and if the five enduring elements seem to be threatened, it must be regarded as his duty, by each member, to build strength into it. There is no higher hope than the furtherance of these ideals.

That is what each man must consider when he asks himself "will the English speaking civilization survive, has it the listed qualifications?" and then with a quiet, and soul stirring nod of his head, Mr. Roberts said "It has, it will abide, it will abide."

Traffic Crashes Are Blamed On Icy Streets

Icy roads are blamed for several accidents in the city which resulted in considerable property damage, and this morning Chief Newhall urged that motorists use caution in driving for the next few days, because of the treacherous road surfaces.

The most spectacular accident occurred on Hunter street when a taxi owned by H. Finnie and driven by N. Wall went into a tail spin and jumped the sidewalk, crashing through a large plate glass window in a vacant store at 227 Hunter street west.

The window was demolished but the car received little damage. The property is owned by Mr. Duranceau and is on the south side of Hunter between George and Aylmer.

Both Cars Damaged

A two-car collision at the Perry-George street intersection about 4 o'clock Friday afternoon caused damage estimated in excess of $400. The police report indicates that a car driven by Robert Pirie, 547 Romain street and owned by his father, J. Pirie was proceeding south on George street and another passenger car driven east on Perry by Max Sanders, R.R. 5 Peterborough figured in the crash. oBth cars are said to be extensively damaged, having met almost head on.

At the Rogers-Douro street intersection, one of the worst in the city, two cars tangled at dusk Friday evening. One owned by Reg. Harran was proceeding north on Rogers and the other owned by Albert Elliott, Carlisle avenue was proceeding east on Douro. Both cars climbed the curb at the northwest corner of the intersection, one narrowly missing the big maple tree.

Busses Damaged

On Friday morning two city busses were damaged, one on Park street to the extent of $80 and the other mishap which was of a minor nature took place at the Aylmer-Charlotte intersection.

City workmen were on the job early today sanding the approaches to traffic lights, and another group was sanding the icy stretches of sidewalks.

Tams Coming In Kilts Going Out In Modern Army

By FRANK FLAHERTY
(Canadian Press Staff Writer.)

OTTAWA, Nov. 16.—(CP)—The major contributions of the Second Great War to Canadian military dress are the introduction of the battle dress uniform and revival of the wedge cap, officially known as the field service cap.

Both spring from a desire to adapt military attire to the needs of the times, to give the fighting men a garb which will be most convenient under the conditions of modern war, with its emphasis on mechanization, rapid movement and concealment.

In both, Canada is following the road marked out by the British army. The battle dress was adopted in the United Kingdom after a series of experiments prior to the outbreak of the present war. The wedge cap is an old army cap which was generally worn before the adoption of khaki about the time of the South American War. It was worn when soldiers wore scarlet tunics and blue trousers into battle.

With the adoption of khaki the stiff peak cap worn during the last war and since became standard. In these days, however, soldiers may be attacked at any time and in war areas must have their steel helmets ready to hand at all times. They needed some kind of cloth cap which could be carried in their pockets and slipped on when they took off their helmets. So the old wedge cap came back. Now it has been authorized in regimental colors for off-duty war.

Kilts and Tams

With the present war the kilts of Canada's highland regiments and one Irish kilted regiment vanished as a service garb in the Canadian Active Service Force. They may still be worn off duty. These units when on active service wear the battle dress of ski-pants with canvas gaiters.

They are permitted to identify themselves as highland and Irish units, however, by their head gear. The Scotish units wear khaki tam o'shanters for field service and the regimental glengarry bonnet for off-duty occasions. The Irish Regiment of Canada at Toronto wear a green cap, something like the Scottish tam o'shanter, for service and off-duty occasions.

Canada's tank regiments wear a black beret. This was adopted by the British army because it seemed the handiest sort of thing for men who rode in and worked around tanks. The tank units have no cap authorized for off-duty wear.

Celtic garb has not entirely disappeared from the Canadian army as the highland units of the Non-Permanent Active Militia and officers of the second battalion of the Irish Regiment still wear the kilt while two unkilted Scottish units, the Scots Fusiliers of Canada of Kitchener, Ont., and the Lorne Scots of Brampton, Ont., wear the tartan trews or tight-fitting trousers. When the present issue runs out, however, they too will wear battle dress.

The old-style stiff peak cap is still worn with old-style khaki service dress uniform, tight-fitting tunic and plain long troosers, but the wedge cap is coming inot use there, too.

Service dress, the old-style uniform for officers, continues to be worn extensively in Canada but officers up to the rank of lieutenant-colonel are expected to obtain the wedge cap when they need a new cap. For other ranks service dress is giving place to battle dress throughout the country.

Wearing of the drab peak cap is still optional for officers of the rank of colonel and up but it has a colored band instead of being plain as for officers of lower rank. With battle dress they wear the colored field service cap.

The colloquial term "brass hat" is often applied to high ranking officers who wear the colored bands on their caps. The band is of scarlet for generals, brigadiers and colonels, except for those in the medical corps who wear dull cherry, in the ordnance corps, blue, in the pay corps, primrose yellow, in the dental corps emerald green and in the chaplain service purple.

"Y" Campaign Report Is Made At Tea

Reports were presented by canvassers who assisted with the Y.W.C.A. Financial Campaign at an afternoon tea held in the Green Room. Mrs. H. R. H. Kenner expressed appreciation to all who were helping the association, and continuing to help. While the necessary amount year's work has not been reached, year'se work has not been reached, Mrs. Kenner suggested that, as in the past, some unexpected source might yet bring the total up to the objective. A letter from the National Board of the Y.W.C.A. stressed the special war work commissioned by the Government, and the request for every local Y.W.C.A. to cooperate.

Mrs. H. Paige Rowell reported total receipts and promises of $595.00 as follows: Men's special names, convened by Mr. R. Dobbin and Mr. G. A. Gillespie, $2,123.00; Women's special names, convened by Miss E. Morrow and Mrs. H. C. Sootheran, $1,917.00; Centre Ward, convened by Miss H. Munroe, $533.00; West Ward, convened by Miss A. Labrador Workers Increase In Handicraft Skill

Growing more beautiful, more exquisitely made each year are the handicraft articles that come from the hands of Labrador Coastal workers. At the annual tea of the Grenfell-Labrador Medical Mission Friday afternoon, held at the home of Mrs. W. R. Morris, 483 Homewood avenue, guests were amazed at the skill with which these fisher folk had worked the lovely blues of sky and sea, the brilliant sunset colors of crimson and yellow, the startling black and soft greys of snow shadows into handsome rugs, small mats, runners and bags of every description—it seems incredible that such a riot of color can have been created from cast-off ragged garments.

Hooked studies of the Arctic Sea were made more realistic by sewing polar bears, made from white baby seal, on the hooked icebergs. Other designs, hooked surprisingly fine, were of wild geese in flight, sailing ships, skiers and snow scenes. Similar designs are worked in small pieces for cushion tops, bags, table mats and a host of other uses. The Grenfell cloth parka cloth sets, some richly embroidered, mittens in intricate patterns and knitted and woven articles represented other home industries of the Labrador.

Mrs. F. M. Somerville, president, received with the hostess in the large living room, where a grate fire burned cheerily at one end. In the tea room white and pink chrysanthemums were gracefully arranged in a silver bowl, and Miss H. Hugel presided at the silver tea service. Mrs. J. D. Collins, tea room convener, was assisted by Mrs. D. B. Falkner and Mrs. E. H. Howson. Mrs. G. R. Langley was treasurer; Mrs. S. D. Carver was convener of an attractive table of somecooking, assisted by Mrs F. C. Anderson. Christmas cards were sold by Miss Betty Runnett, and Mrs. D. V. Canning was in charge of the sale of industrial work.

Fine Display of Antiques Is Feature of Tea

Rare antiques that gain in interest because they come from Peterborough homes, and in some cases have been handed down through several generations, were viewed with delightful exclamations Friday evening by guests at the antique tea held by the Business and Professional Women's Club in its George Street club rooms, and will be on display again this afternoon.

Exquisite heirloom silver in one display included fine Sheffield godroom and scroll mounts dating from 1810, and nearby was a gold locket 125 years old containing an ancient tintype. On the brass table were noted a ladle and skimmer with hammered iron handles that came from Alsace-Lorraine, and a samovar from Lithunania. An ancient Copper kettle, it was said, was made all in one piece.

A table of old china and glass drew much comment, and included English cups and saucers over 125 years old. A mug made of Welsh coal came out from Wales 150 years ago, and there were dainty china figurines, a priceless silver lustre loving cup, and china dogs with gold lustre ears and chain. Lovely pieces were an old English ottoman with needlepoint cover, a hand-carved wooden chair, hooked rugs, and an ancient brass fire screen.

Reminiscent of an age when clothes were no mer flimsy garment was the quilted taffeta petticoat belonging to the trousseau of a great-grandmother. A shawl woven by a grandfather in Glasgow 100 years ago is a treasured possession, and there were christening robes of delicate fineness, a glowing Paisley shawl that came from England 120 years ago, a handmade linen sheet; a grandmother's apron of black lace, an ancient family bible and a cook book over 250 years old. Fine old prints, water colours and etchings held the attention of beauty lovers, also, and a flower painting, done by Mrs. Susanna Moodie, was dated 1860.

Alex Runnett has contributed a Japanese garden of unusual beauty, altho' fashioned of paper from an old Peterborough Examiner, with dried and painted garden weeds forming a graceful cherry tree. A tourist edition had furnished the green paper that went into the making of a house model which Mr. Runnett had copied from an Ontario home, and on another the effect of melting snow on roof tops and lawns had also been cleverly obtained by the use of ordinary paper.

Receiving with the president, Miss Birdie Dawson, was Miss Violet Walsh. Miss Anne Jamieson, general convener of the tea room, was assisted by Miss Mary Easson and Miss Jane Saunders. Miss Myra Baird was convener of antiques, assisted by Miss Florence Hutchinson, Mrs. P. E. Telford and Mrs. L. McKenzie. A crystal bowl of yellow chrysanthemums, and silver candles in crystal holders were used on the lace-covered tea table. Miss Lois Stewart and Miss Leila Burgess poured tea, and assisting in the tea room were Miss Winnie Davis and Mrs. H. Kelso. Miss Sarah Eastwood was treasurer. Delightful piano music during the tea hour was played by Miss Alma Duffy and Miss Anne Deyell.

DINNERS OF THE WEEK

By MARY MOORE

SUNDAY
Chilled Cider
Roast Leg of Lamb. Mint Jelly (see note).
Pan Roasted Potatoes
Brussels Sprouts in Thin Drawn Butter.
Tossed Lettuce, Parsley and Water Cress Green Salad. French Dressing
Shredded Fresh Pineapple.
Crackers and Cheese. Coffee

Note.—Lately I have heard from two or three cooks that they are having trouble roasting lamb. Here's how: Dredge the fat after wiping it with a damp cloth, with flour. Place meat on rack in roasting pan with fat side up. Sear at 550 deg. Fahr. until well browned. Remove from oven and sprinkle generously with salt and pepper, and return to oven which reduce immediately to 325 deg. Fahr. and continue cooking uncovered, basting frequently. Allow 20 minutes to the pound after searing. Lamb should never be underdone.

MONDAY (Hasty)
Sliced Cold roast Lamb reheated in Mint Gravy
Fluffy Mashed Potatoes(see note)
Apple and Shredded Cabbage Salad
Halves of Grapefruit. Coffee

TUESDAY (Vegetarian)
Buttered Boiled Rice
Tomato and Cheese Fritters
Broccoli with Cheese Sauce
Celery eHarts
Peach Cottage Pudding Cream
Coffee

WEDNESDAY
Veal Birds Gravy
Baked Potatoes
Diced Beets
Chopped Fruit Cup—Bananas, Florida Oranges, Pineapple, Maraschino Cherries
Buttered Crispened Crackers
Cheese. Coffee

THURSDAY (Economical)
Cheese Strata (see note)
Fluffly Mashed Potatoes
Carrot Rings in Parsley Cream Sauce
Baked Apples stuffed with Mincemeat Hot Tea

Note. — To make Cheese Strata place crustless slices of white bread in baking dish—if the dish is large enough put two slices in bottom—sprinkle with cheese—and cover with 2 slices of bread, sprnikle with cheese and cover with two more slices of bread—in all to serve 6 people use 6 slices bread and 2 cups mild grated cheese. Over all pour: 2½ cups milk beaten together with 2 eggs, 1 teaspoon salt and ¼ teaspoon pepper. Sprinkle top with paprika. Bake at 350 deg. Fahr. until custard sets and edges of bread are browning. Delicious.

Mashed Potatoes.

We had complaints from The Head that our mashed potatoes were "watery." Since then we have been using evaporated milk or cream, plenty of butter as usual, but no plain milk and The Head likes them better. Maybe the potatoes are watery this year.

FRIDAY
Fried Shrimps in Batter on Toast
Lemon Wedges
Scalloped Tomatoes
Bakes Sweet Potatoes in their Jackets
Banana Cream Pie Coffee

SATURDAY
Veal Chop Suey Fluffy Boiled Rice
Heal Lettuce Sliced, with Mayonnaise. Mincemeat Pie Coffee

WARNING SIGNALS SHOULD BE HEEDED BEFORE MARRIAGE

Young Folks Shou'd Study Each Other and Ascertain the Faults Before They Trek to the Altar

Why do so many of us crash the stop signal in marrying? Why do we ignore the red lights that are hung out all along the road of courtship and go speeding to disaster? Why do we refuse to heed the warning signal of danger ahead that is flashed before our eyes so plainly a blind man could read it in time to save ourselves from marriages that wreck our lives? Nobody knows. We just do it. And then we lay the blame for our stupidity and recklessness on bad luck, as we do our automobile accidents. Probably half the married couples in the world get the surprises of their lives when they find out just what kind of women and men they have got as husbands and wives, and think: Why, I never would have dreamed of marrying John if I had had the slightest idea that he was such a tightwad! Or: Wild horses couldn't have dragged me to the altar with Mary if I had suspected that she was a nagger! and that makes the eternal mystery of the ill-mated. How is it possible for a man and woman to fall in love with each other, to "keep company," as the common phrase goes, to spend endless hours talking together, to go out to place of amusement together without getting some inkling of each other's real characters and dispositions and tastes and habits and personal peculiarities?

It is idle to say that in courtship both sexes put their best foot foremost and that they highlight their virtues and camouflage their faults. Maybe Sadie does put butter in her mouth and honey on her tongue when she is trying to catch Tom.

Tom may be a trifle more chivalrous when he is wooing Sadie than he is by nature, but there are very few boys and girls who have either the ability or desire to put on an act that would deceive the party of the other part.

Both are bound to give themselves away in every particular. Each furnishes the other with a minute diagram of his or her idiosyncrasies. Each simply bristles with information to all and sundry of what to expect if they marry him or her, and shouts a warning to keep away if they don't like the prospect.

Then It's Too Late

Such being the case, it would seem that there is little excuse for a man and woman not picking out the kinds of mates they desired. Yet the divorce courts have to work overtime trying to correct the mistakes of those who didn't like their matrimonial bargains when they got them home. The very heavens resound with the lamentations of the disgruntled husbands and wives whose life partners' little ways have gotten on their nerves.

Marriage doesn't change people. What they are on one side of the altar they are on the other. And it is inconceivable how a man can get well enough acquainted with a girl to contemplate spending the balance of his life with her without getting a line on what sort of a wife she will make.

Doesn't he ever notice whether she is tidy or slouchy; whether she looks neat and trim or like something the cat brought in? Doesn't he observe whether she is jolly and amiable or one of the temperamental one who has to be handled with gloves?

Doesn't it register in his mind that she is strong and healthy or likely to be a perpetual doctor's bill? Doesn't he ever notice that a girl is bossy or naggy or selfish, or that she never reads anything in the papers except the society column and the funnies?

Every one of these girls, unbeknown to herself, is hanging out a little red lantern, yet men crash the danger signal and marry them, and then complain that they have gotten shrews, or naggers, or lazy slovens, or wives who bore them to death.

Heed Warning Signals

And it is the same way with women. They marry men who drink, or lazy ne'er-do-wells who have never supported themselves, or grouches and ill-tempered men, or misers, or bores.

And then they complain because a sot has dragged them down to poverty, or because they have to work and support a loafer, or because they have to walk on eggs to appease an overbearing tyrant, or because they have to use the arts of a courtesan to wheedle a new hat out of a tightwad, or because they feel they will scream if they have to see their husbands eat an egg once more.

But each of these women has had her warning when she had seen the bleared eyes and the shambling gait of the drunkard; when she had watched how long it took the stingy man to open his purse and give a penny to a beggar; when she had to watch her step for fear of offending an ill-tempered man, and when she had listened at a restaurant to her escort gargling his soup.

We all get our warnings before marriage, but we don't need them. And when we crash the signals we have to pay for it.

IN MEMORIAM

AUSTIN.—In loving memory of our dear Father and Mother, who went home to be with Jesus, Alexander Austin, October 2, 1925, and Julia Agnes Austin, November 16, 1937.

They have gone across the river
To the shores of evergreen.
And I long to see their dear faces,
but the river flows between.
Some day, sometime my eyes shall see
The faces I loved so well;
Some day I will clasp their loving hand
And never say farewell.

—Ever remembered by the Family.

STURGEON.—In loving memory of a dear husband and father, Charles Edward Sturgeon, 198 Braidwood Avenue, who passed away November 16, 1938.

Sweet is the spot where you are laid,
Many a visit in silence is paid
To lay down a flower in remembrance of you,
Never forgotten and never will be.

—Ever remembered by his Wife and Family.

Slim Heavy Thighs and Hips

A mystery to many an active woman why she has those distressingly large thighs and hips — giving her such a matronly silhouette.

Usually, the reason is lack of the right exercise. Active though you may be, if you use your legs only in a backward and forward movement, you'll collect fatty pads on the outside of the thigh, you'll bulge at the hips.

Give a few minutes a day to this simple leg exercise with a side-to-side movement — and you soon see those bulges disappearing. Hips and thighs again have the lovely slim lines of youth.

Or have you a dowager's hump, a middle-aged middle, a flat bust?

Our 32-page booklet gives exercises for slimming waistline, hips and legs; for beautifying arms, shoulders, bust and posture. Gives exercises to relieve painful feet, constipation, tense nerves; also a routine for entire body.

BARCLAY ON BRIDGE

WRITTEN FOR THE EXAMINER
By SHEPARD BARCLAY
"The Authority on Authorities"

IT CAN BE A LIABILITY

IN MANY cases a declarer likes to have a singleton of some suit in his own hand or the dummy, as it is often an asset to one extent or another. There are times, however, when it can be a liability. One of the chief among these is the case of a No Trump declarer who possesses only a singleton of the dummy's suit, or the dummy has only a singleton of his suit. One more card would afford an extra chance to try a finesse, and also would aid the probability of the suit establishing, since it would cut down by one the number of cards held by the declarer.

	♠ K Q ♥ A J 9 4 3 ♦ K 7 5 4 ♣ 9 4
♠ 10 7 4 ♥ Q 10 8 5 ♦ 2 ♣ 9 ♣ A J 5 3	N. W. E. S.	♠ J 9 6 3 ♥ 7 6 ♦ A J 10 2 ♣ Q 7 6
	♠ A 8 5 2 ♥ K ♦ Q 8 6 3 ♣ K 10 8 2

(Dealer: South. Neither side vulnerable.)

South	West	North	East
Pass	Pass	1 ♥	Pass
2 NT	Pass	3 ♦	Pass
3 NT

There is nothing particularly terrible about the bidding of this hand in a rubber game, but it certainly illustrates one point clearly—the value of having a couple of cards of your partner's suit when you get into a game at No Trumps. There are many fine players who would not think of forcing with 2-No Trumps on South's hand, but would prefer to respond to the heart call with one of the other suits, depending upon which method the pair was using. They probably would wind up in a game at No Trumps anyway, but the effort to avoid trouble would have been made.

West led the club 3 to the Q and K. Followed then the heart K, spade Q, heart A and the heart J, in an effort to set up some heart tricks. When East showed out, South knew the jig was up. West won that trick with the Q and shifted to the diamond 9 to the A. East returned his club 7 to the J, and the contract was set then by the club A and heart 10.

If South had held the heart 2 instead of West, and one less diamond, he could have taken a winning finesse in the dummy's suit and also could have established a low card trick in it, to make his contract.

Your Week-End Lesson

Do you understand clearly the way that the three principal types of lead-throwing end plays may be combined in a single hand? Can you set up examples combining any two of them, and one which involves all three general kinds in one hand?

Be sure to write plainly your NAME, ADDRESS, and the NAME of booklet.

Will Need More Men

TORONTO, Nov. 15.—(CP).—War industries in Ontario "will need several thousand additional skilled and semi-skilled workers by the end of next spring," Hon. Duncan McArthur, Ontario Minister of Education, said yesterday.

He wrote to the Advisory Vocational committee of the Board of Education asking further co-operation in setting up classes for technical training.

Charge Wyngard Air School In Sorry Plight

SASKATOON, Nov. 16—(CP). — The Saskatoon Star-Phoenix to-day published the following special despatch from Wynyard, 115 miles east of here:

More and more criticism of the conditions at the Dafoe bombing and gunnery school are being heard in Wynyard as the story of conditions there becomes more generally known. Just prior to the cold weather, a small guard detail of aircraftsmen under the command of a sergeant was stationed at the school. Housed in a hut built to accommodate 120 men, the extreme cold weather of the last 10 days found this group of boys with only two small tin heaters to heat this large structure.

The story in Wynyard is that the boys slept fully clothed and with their great coats on during the cold nights and still were not able to keep warm. As there is no water suppl at the school they had a couple of barrels to keep water. These froze solid and all the water had to be obtained by melting ice on tiny heaters.

No Phone, No Doctor.

In addition, there is no telephone communication to the school and no medical man was appointed to look after the boys, nor were they provided with any means of transportation from the school, which is 14 miles north of Dafoe.

When one of the group fell ill, the boys had to pay $10 from their own pockets to bring him to the nearest doctor at Wynyard.

It is also reported that the boys were charged $25 for the hire of a livery to bring them to Wynyard on another occasion. Two weeks have elapsed since the guard arrived at the school and still nothing has been done to provide them with adequate heating equipment, still there has been no doctor appointed to care for them and still they are without means of communication or transportation.

Probe Ordered

OTTAWA, Nov. 15—(CP). — Air Minister Power has ordered an investigation of complaints over conditions at the bombing and gunnery school at Dafoe, Sask., it was stated today at the Air Ministry.

"The minister has not been officially advised of any complaints," a spokesman said. "All he has seen has been statements in the press, but an investigation has been ordered."

dead and injured.

Towns near London and in southwestern England also were raided.

London's ground guns which beat back several attacks early in the night failed to stop the renewed onslaught after midnight. A communique said, however, many of the bombers were kept so high that "accurate bombing was impossible."

Home defence crews worked feverishly throughout the night checking numerous fires in central London.

"This is the worst night yet," one Air Raid Warden said, "at least in numbers."

He said he counted 80 bombers in formation at one time during the raid.

Several apartment buildings crumbled under direct bomb hits, rescuers dug for families in the wreckage. A boarding house was smashed and other bomb wrecked a pub.

Two bombs hit a shop where nearly 100 persons were sheltered in the basement. One smashed through the roof of the building and the other blew in the shop front, showering debris upon those inside.

All Escape But One

In the whole shelter there was only one first aid case—a woman who received a slight cut.

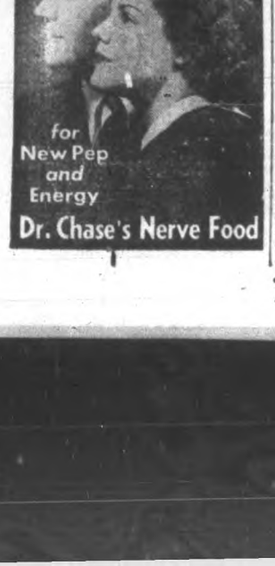
A four-storey commercial art gallery in another part of London was smashed into a heap of rubble which spread across a street, blocking traffic.

One large London hotel was pierced by a bomb which crashed through the roof and three floors before exploding. It caused no casualties.

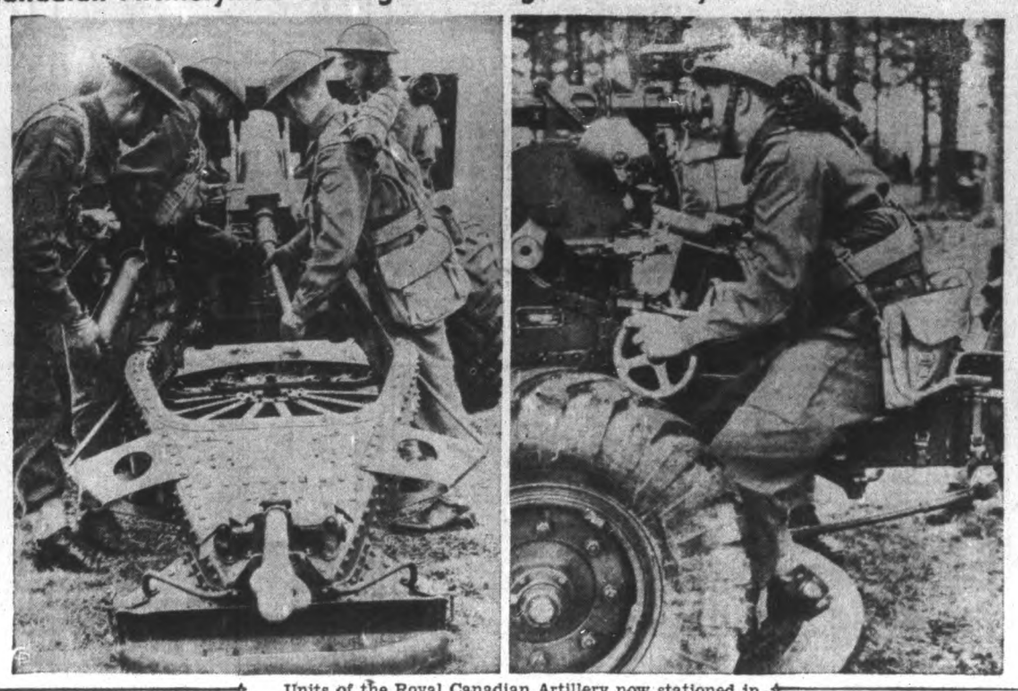
A bank and a suburban hospital were damaged badly by bomb explosions and fire.

In an east Anglian town all but one member of two families trapped in their bomb-hit homes were found dead. A large number of bombs fell in the residential district.

It was feared that a large number of casualties were caused by a lone raider which swooped low over a south coast town, dropping four heavy calibre bombs into a densely populated district.



Canadian Artillerymen Undergo Training With An "Eye To The Future"



Units of the Royal Canadian Artillery now stationed in England, are undergoing strenuous training manoeuvres on the south coast. Members of the R.C.A., who have been highly praised by high ranking British officers for their efficiency, are shown ABOVE, during manoeuvres. These gunners will give a good account of themselves on the great day when England will begin land operations against Germany and Italy.

Cottesloe News

On Tuesday evening a goodly number of young people met at the home of Miss Helen Tedford for their weekly meeting. The president Donald Clysdale had charge and also gave a splendid topic on Peace.

Gloria Kidd gave the Scripture reading, Jim Girven gave a reading, and in place of the usual Bible study period Mrs. Webster had charge of the temperance questions on the five lessons taken up in the Sunday School. The business period included plans for attendance at the rally at Peterborough and for the Christmas concert. The next meeting wil be at the home of Mr. and Mrs. George Clysdale.

At the close, Miss Olive Tedford of Toronto, who is visiting her sister Helen, served candy, and a hearty vote of thanks was given.

Mrs. F. Toms was hostess to the W.M.S. on Wednesday afternoon with a fair attendance and a splendid missionary program, "Couriers of the Cross in China" from "Comrades in the World Church." Mae Webster had charge of the study book, with the lives of Minie Shipley and Rev. W. B. Djang. She was assisted by Mrs. Forsyth, Mrs. McMillan, Mrs. John Gallagher, and Madeline Toms. The Chinese message from the Blue Book was given by Mrs. McDonald and Mrs. Webster gave a resume of the life and work of James Evans. Mesdames Toms and John Gallagher rendered a duet, "Building Every Day."

The business part of the meeting included final arrangements for the fall thankoffering service to be held on Sunday evening, November 24, at 7.30. The next meeting (annual) wil be held at the home of the president, Mrs. Johnston Blakley. A hymn, prayer and the National Anthem closed the meeting.

Mrs. Toms and Madeline served a dainty lunch and over the teacups plans were discussed for Red Cross quilting at Mrs. Clysdale's next Tuesday night.

OTTAWA, Nov. 16—(CP).—When the parcel was mailed from Canada to a soldier overseas it probably was very nice.

It arrived at Canadian Postal Corps Headquarters in England—a gluey mass of cake, matches (strictly prohibited from the mails), clothing and jam, soaked with maple syrup from a bottle that came uncorked.

Officials in the Postmaster-General's department are trying to impress on Canadians the need for careful packing and careful address. ing of parcels for the armed forces.

The maple syrup parcel is only one sample of the difficulties encountered. One woman bundled up six pounds of grapes—sweet and juicy when they left Canada but squashed and mouldy when they got to London. Decayed fruit is a common occurrence and broken bottles of pickles, jam and other edibles are no rarity.

Offi ials say parcels for soldiers should not include any sort of glass container. Tinned fruits or pickles might be sent. Matches and explosives of all kinds are barred from the mails. Parcels should be wrapped or sewn in a cotton or other cloth covering, then wrapped and tied with tough paper and strong cord.

Complaints have reached the department that tobacco mailed in Canada is not reaching the troops overseas. "Of course the post office gets blamed first," one official said. "But a checkup at both ends—in England and here—has shown that the principal cause of non-delivery is the forgetfullness of someone who was supposed to buy the tobacco.

Hundreds of such cases have been investigated. Not once has the post office been to blame.

Cause of the disappearance of some tobacco was enemy action. One ship carrying 4,000 parcels from one tobacco firm alone was lost en route to the United Kingdom.

Some tobacco parcels, and other gift mailings, have been delivered after a soldier had been transferred. Some of them may have fallen into the hands of a soldier's companions. "You know what happens to a basket of food which is delivered to the wrong person at a boys' school?" the official said. "Well, soldiers are pretty much like those boys. Probably they would just dive in."

Thousands of letters and parcels for soldiers reach the base post office in Ottawa bearing insufficient postage or incomplete address. Every effort is made to trace down the right man, the official said, but it's pretty hard when we get an address like 'Johnny Smith, Fusiliers, Canadian Army, England."

Once more—the correct way to address mail to your friends in the army overseas is to give the regimental number, rank, name and details of unit, that is, company or section, squadron, battery holding unit, in addition to regiment or service, base post office, Canada.

It should be done thus:
C-2374, Sapper John Doe
3rd Field Company
Royal Canadian Engineers
Base Post Office

Two R.A.F. Bombers Lost

Two British planes were lost in the day's activities, but a pilot said "altogether it was a most successful day."

(Three planes of unidentified nationality raided Bitolj, Yugoslavia, on the frontier near the fighting zone, for the second time last night and Yugoslavia anti-aircraft batteries went into action for the first time. No casualties were reported, although six bombs dropped near the railway station. Yugoslav pursuit planes took off but were unable to find the raiders.

(In the first attack on Bitolj on Nov. 5 two persons were killed, five were injured and heavy property damage inflicted by three planes in broad daylight. Both Greek and Italians disclaimed responsibility.

(Last night the raiders, which lighted the blacked-out city with parachute flares, reportedly came over the Greek-Yugoslav broder and flew off to the west, toward Albania.)

U.S. Recognizes Gen. Camacho

WASHINGTON, Nov. 16—(AP).—Formal recognition of Mexico's new President-elect and reports of intensified efforts for Western Hemisphere defence collaboration gave evidence to-day of continuing United States administration preoccupation with matters pertaining to Pan-American solidarity.

The recognition of Gen. Aliva Camacho as the Mexican President-elect had an unusual aspect, for it was accompanied last night by the announcement that Henry A. Wallace, Vice-President-elect of the United States, would represent this country at the Camacho inauguration in Mexico City on December 1.

Mexico's presidential election had been in dispute, and the announcement of Camacho's recognition was the first government expression here on the controversy. In Mexico, the action of the United States was received as welcome news, with special gratification manifested at the appointment of Wallace.

Mexico, however, apparently was only one of the Latin-American nations to figure in State Department consultations yesterday. State Secretary Cordell Hull, War Secretary Henry Stimson, and Naval Secretary Frank Knox conferred for almost an hour and it was believed in well-informed quarters that hemisphere defence provided the major topic.

The progress of defence negotiations with other American republics was reviewed, these sources believed, and consideration given to the necessary subsequent steps for advancing the program with all posible speed.

500 In Havelock Line Up Dry Petition

HAVELOCK, Nov. 16 — (ENS). — Backing a movement which is urging the restriction of the sale and consumption of liquor for the duration of the war, the signatures of over 500 adult citizens of this village and district have been affixed to the following petition, which was forwarded this week to the Hon. J. G. Gardiner, Minister of National War Services, at Ottawa.

"We, the undersigned citizens of Havelock and vicinity, in the electoral riding of Peterborough-Hastings, desire to go on record as supporting the request for wartime restrictions as to the sale and consumption of liquor, made to the Dominion Government by the deputation of church and temperance representatives in July, as set forth in the following program:

1. That sale of alcoholic beverages in taverns, beer-rooms, wine shops, etc., be discontinued, and that sale of such beverages be confined to Government-owned liquor stores.

2. That sale from Government liquor stores be permitted only between the hours of three o'clock in the afternoons and eight o'clock in the evenings, and on week days only.

3. That all advertising of liquor in Canada be forbidden except in place of sale.

4. That when the request in item 1 is implemented, an order issue from the Department of Defence closing all wet canteens in military establishments.

We humbly petition for your favorable consideration and action, in the interests of a better Canada, wartime efficiency, and the safeguarding of morals in a time of danger and distress.

Overseas Needs First

He emphasized also that first consideration regarding war materials had to be given to the front line—and that front line was England.

"We have gone short and we shall not hesitate to go short so long as the material we produce is needed overseas," Col. Ralston said.

The minister's review included the announcement that all officers commissioned in the Canadian army will start at the bottom and work up. After a period in the ranks, men selected by their officers commanding will be made officer cadets and be given a special officers' training course.

This change, he said, will make for more uniformity and improve the standard of officer qualification. "We face a long war and must use our manpower resources to the best advantage," he said.

Col. Ralston announced that the war committee of the cabinet now was considering lengthening the compulscry militia training period from 30 days to four months.

2 More 30-Day Camps

Such a change would at once provide "a large number of men whose individual training was complete" and would reduce the aggregate number of men to be called from civil occupations during the year. This would help to prevent undue disturbance in industry. However, there would be at least two more 30-day camps.

No one ever pretended that trained soldiers could be turned out in 30 days, the minister said.

"The real success of the undertaking lay in the fact that Canadians accepted this new principle of compulsory training as a necessary part of our activity," he contended.

The Minister told the Commons Canada now had an army, active and reserve, of 300,000 men. Canada had two full divisions, corps troops and reinforcements almost equal to another division in England.

He took sharp exception to Conservative House Leader Hanson's suggestion that Canadian troops had not been a factor in the defence of Britain. Canadians had been called on when troops were needed in Norway; they had also been ready to embark for France. There was nothing "pitiful" about troops in which the War Office had such confidence.

The Motor Unit Case.

He also took exception to Mr. Hanson's charge that Canadian motorized units had been sent to Britain with parts missing, and that it had cost $80,000 and considerable delay to put them in shape.

Col. Ralston said unsatisfactory brake equipment had involved $2,640 for materials and an estimated maximum of $1,020 for labor. However, he thought the work probably was done by the ordnance corps overseas, at no cost. Some additional tools also had been required for use in shops in England. He would find out, he said, whether these tools would make up the $80,000 to which Mr. Hanson had referred, but at any rate the shortage was "not because there was anything lacking in the tools which were sent over.

The British are more than ever dependent upon us now for the increase in airplane strength which can, in time, defeat the Hitler challenge to our world. The inevitable loss in aircraft production at Coventry will have to be made good in American factories; the losses of British ships at sea will have to be replaced in American shipyards; the shortage in British equipment will have to be repaired on American shores. If the destruction at Coventry awakens our people to a new sense of Britain's danger, the victims of this horror will not have died in vain.

Millbrook WMS Reviews Year

MILLBROK, Nov. 16—(ENS). — Mrs. J. Albert Brown extended the hospitality of her home, Tupper Street, for the November meeting of the W.M.S. of St. Andrew's Church, held on Wednesday at 3 p.m., with the president, Mrs. A. L. Sisco, giving the call to worship, offering the opening prayer, and conducting the business period.

During the latter, the treasurer, Miss M. E. Hetherington, gave the financial report to the end of October, which showed: Members' fees $15.00, fall thankoffering $57.00, giving by envelopes $34.40, donations $47.25, total $153.65; expenses $4.23, balance $149.42. Of this $100.00 had been remitted to the Presbyterial treasurer, leaving a balance of $49.42, with $50.00 to be raised in order to meet the allocation of $200 by the end of the year.

Announcement was made of the sectional rally to be held in George Street Church, Peterborough, on Monday, November 18, with two outstanding speakers, and a number of delegates will attend. The fall W.M.S. rally will be in Peterborough on January 28, 1941, and the local society is asked to make nominations for a number of Presbyterial officers, a meeting of the executive at the parsonage on Wednesday, November 20, at 3 p.m., being called for this purpose.

Miss Mary Widdis took charge for the program, the theme being "The Pilgrim Way"; Mrs. J. A. Brown read "The Singing Heart," and Mrs Fred Johnson offered prayer. Mrs. J. McKnight took the Christian Stewardship study, covering three chapters of the study book, and Miss E. L. Hetherington told the story of Miss Shipleys work in Honan, North China, in an interesting manner, under the caption, "A Courier of the Cross."

Mrs. O. Williamson closed this period with prayer, and the hymn and Mizpah benediction brought an instructive gathering to a conclusion, the hostess and the committee in charge serving home-made candy during the social hour.

Howe To Handle Production Advisory Group

OTTAWA, Nov. 16—(CP) — Prime Minister Mackenzie King told the House of Commons Thursday that the Munitions Minister, Hon. C. D. Howe, woud deal with a new "war production advisory committee" set up by the government when he speaks in the debate on the address in reply to the Speech from the Throne.

Mr. King's announcement was made when he replied to a question from the Conservative House Leader, Hon. R. B. Hanson, on an Ottawa Journal editorial.

The editorial claimed Sir Walter Layton, representative of the United Kingdom government on munitions production, had visited Ottawa as representative of Prime Minister Winston Churchill and had given certain advice on war production. It also referred to a "war production advisory committee" appointed since Sir Walter's visit.

Mr. King replied that Mr. Howe would deal with the committee, but said that it had not been set up because of Sir Walter's visit. Mr. Howe is expected to speak in the debate some time next week.

Watch, Speed Output.

Last week, it was intimated officially that the government he under consideration the establishment of a priority committee which would supervise Canada's entire industrial war effort, deciding the relative importance of the various war needs and extending assistance to industries, having regard to the urgency of the needs they could supply.

The committee might not only be responsible for the co-ordinating of the industrial effort but might also be entrusted with organizing the nation's manpower to get the greatest results.

Mr. King's announcement led to belief the government has reached a decision on this matter.

The Journal editorial said it was believed the members of the War Production Advisory committee would be Graham Towers, governor of the Bank of Canada; H. H. Mac Millan, timber controller; R. A. C. Henry of the Munitions and Supply Board; Maj.-Gen. H. D. G. Crerar, Chief of Staff; and C. P. Chester, Master of the Ordnance.

Palace, Theatre Royal Bombed

LONDON, Nov. 16—(CP Cable).—The Theatre Royal in Drury Lane has been damaged in a German air raid, it was disclosed today.

A bomb crashed through the roof, the gallery and two balconies, and exploded in the pit.

Historic parts of the theatre, one of the oldest in the world, were not damaged. Only a small piece of plaster was knocked from the royal box, in which every sovereign since the time of Charles II has sat.

It was also disclosed today that a bomb struck the grounds of Buckingham Palace recently, shattering figured glass windows in the palace picture gallery.

The palace also was twice bombed in recent days. A small calibre high explosive missile fell on the mews, damaged a stableman's flat and chipped the face of the clock tower overlooking Buckingham Palace road. No one was hurt and the King and Queen were not in residence at the time.

On the other occasion a high explosive bomb made a direct hit on the garden's lodge.

English Workers Now Producing As Men Have Never Produced Before

HENRY L. STIMSON TELLS U.S. LABOR THAT IT WILL BE CALLED UPON FOR SACRIFICES; BUT IS SURE FREE MEN WILL PRODUCE MORE AND BETTER GOODS THAN AXIS WORKERS

NEW ORLEANS, Nov. 18—(AP).—Henry L. Stimson, United States Secretary of War, warning that danger approaching the United States may now be imminent, told labor today that it will be called upon for sacrifices for the defence program but it is assured the right of collective bargaining.

Urging industrial peace as an absolute need for rearming the United States, Mr. Stimson in an address before the American Federation of Labor convention praised British workers producing under a rain of bombs and said:

"We have hope that we may not reach this supreme test; that we in America may not be called upon to suffer as these workers of England have suffered. But the danger for months has been approaching and today it may ever be imminent.

"Today our production, hopeful as it has been thus far, is as yet very far from adequate. Sacrifices will undoubtedly be called for from labor, as they will be called for from the other citizens of the republic, but such sacrifices I believe will be willingly contributed and not compelled."

Asserting it is a "basic article of our democratic faith" that free men will produce more and better goods than "coerced or recalcitrant" workers, he added:

"This convention is more than article of faith. It has been tested in the fiercest of experience. It has proven itself in the ordeal across

Begged Adolf To Let Him Fight Britain

Warns Of Sacrifices In Fear-Ridden Attack On Britain

ROME, Nov. 18.—(AP).—Mussolini told his Fascist chiefs to-day that the Italians must be prepared for "more severe" sacrifices and said he "would never turn back" in the Greek campaign.

"We have 1,000,000 men under arms," he declared on the fifth anniversary of economic sanctions against Itay which grew out of the Ethiopian campaign, "and we could call 8,000,000 more."

In his first speech since Italy's declaration of war June 10, Mussolini denied that half of Italy's battleships were put out of action for a long time in an air raid on the naval base at Taranto last week.

"It is false, I say, that two other warships and two auxiliary vessels were sunk or hit or damaged even slightly in any way," Mussolini asserted. "It is a sign of bad conscience, this enlargement and multiplication by six of the success which we acknowledged."

Day of Defeat for League

Following is the text, in part, of Mussolini's speech today:—

Comrades: you will understand that it is not by chance I chose this day to summon the provincial hierarchy of the party to Rome.

It is a day of victory for Fascist Italy, of defeat for the League of Nations, a coalition of 52 besieging nations. Nov. 18, 1935, appears a decisive date in European history.

It is the first and last attempt at attack in the grand style unleashed by the old world, represented in its egoism and in its outmoded ideologies by the League of Nations against new European forces, young and revolutionary, represented by Italy and Germany.

From that day dates the separation, contrast and conflict which, necessarily after the Munich compromise was accepted by the democracies for the sole purpose of gaining time, had to result in the war which France and Great Britain declared on Germany.

It must never be forgotten that the initiative in the war came from London, followed after an interval by Paris.

I solemnly declare, without fear of refutation either today or ever, that responsibility for the war belongs exclusively to Britain.

Berchtesgaden Meet Taken To Mean Spain's Lot Is Cast

BERCHTESGADEN, Germany Nov. 18.—(AP)—Foreign Ministers of Germany, Italy and Spain met today in this city near Hitler's Bavarian mountain retreat where many conferences of far-reaching import in the past have been held.

Informed sources in Berlin said Hitler would have individual talks with the Spanish and Italian visitors and then hold a joint conference, probably later today.

Observers interpreted the visit of the Spaniard, Ramon Serrano Suner, as indicating that Falangist Spain now is in the Axis camp and apparently ready to take a more active part in developments.

Weapons Needed

New York, Nov. 18 (AP)

BRITAIN wants "weapons—all kinds of weapons," said Arthur B. Purvis of Montreal, head of the British Purchasing Commission in the United States, as he departed on the Dixie Clipper yesterday for London.

Purvis was en route to the British capital via Lisbon to report on purchases made here since Nov. 7, 1939.

He said deliveries by United States industry had been "very good."

Then he added that Britain wants "more and more" vital weapons, including guns, airplanes, and "even ships."

Purvis said that loss of material in transit through sinking or bombing had been "negligible."

Germans Single Coast Town For Punishment

LONDON, Nov. 18—(CP).—Sirens shrieked London's first air raid warning of the day shortly after the noon hour today.

Sky raiders struck vigorously at Britain's south coast during the night and one town in the southeast was reported to have suffered its heaviest bombing of the war.

Several persons were said to have been killed. A town on the southwest coast also was hard hit by raiders which dropped 10 high explosive bombs and many incendiaries. Many civilians were found dead in the wreckage.

The "raiders passed" signal ended the nightly London raid after dawn. The attacks on the capital were described as recurrent, but not of the heaviest type. Heavy calibre bombs were dropped in the outskirts.

The Government reported damage to "a number of dwelling-houses" in the London area and in several towns along the English Channel. "Casualties were not heavy, but some people were killed," a communique said.

The raiders passed signal sounded shortly after London's noon day alarm sounded.

Rake Coast To Africa; Air Chiefs Are Shuffled Again

LONDON, Nov. 18—(CP).—Germany's war-vital industries in which the rich Ruhr Valley were reported attacked heavily today by the Royal Air Force in a quick follow-up of week-end blows at Axis ports from Hamburg, Germany, to Mogadiscio, Somaliland.

Even as the fliers struck, the R.A.F. high command was shuffled to give the army and air arm more nearly its own, concentrate the fighter command on solving night raid interception and breaking up Nazi bombing of convoys, and possibly to co-ordinate further United States and British plane production.

The Air Ministry transferred Sir Hugh Dowding from R.A.F. fighter commander-in-chief to special, unexplained duty in the United States. One source close to the Ministry indicated his mission might be to advise the United States of R.A.F. experiences with the view of standardizing United States and British planes, thus facilitating mass production.

Air Vice-Marshal W. S. Douglas, 47, was assigned to Sir Hugh's place in one of six advancements of air force leaders, all but one under 50.

Air Marshal Sir Arthur Sheridan Barratt, who commanded R.A.F. forces in France earlier in the war, was chosen to head the new army co-operation command — working with land forces in a close approach to a separate air force for the army.

Some observers took this as a hint Britain is getting ready for a plane-supported land offensive, either next spring in France or in the Near East, where a separate air commander also was named.

Hitler Demands Increase In Birthrate

BERLIN, Nov. 18—(CP).—Hitler called for an increase in the German birthrate today to replace war casualties and promised that if Germany should win the war a gigantic home-building program will be put into effect.

The preamble to a decree signed by Hitler read:

"The successful outcome of this war will present a task to the German Reich which can be fulfilled only by an increase in the population. It is necessary that holes which are made by the war in the body of the nation be closed by an increase in the birth rate.

"The building of new German homes is a pre-condition for healthy families with many children.

Greeks Gain Steadily

ATHENS, Nov. 18—(AP).—The Italians sent wave after wave of infantry crashing against Greek mountain positions today in an effort to prevent the capture of Koritza, Fascist invasion base, but the Greeks reported they repelled all attacks and gained new ground as well.

In their desperate attempt to thwart the Greek ring of steel being drawn around the most important city in Albania, the Italians were said also to have thrown a large force of dive-bombers into the battle.

The Greek Air Force, aided by Britain's Royal Air Force, itself bombed Italian positions heavily and pummelled troop-jammed roads leading out of Koritza, which is 10 miles inside Albania.

The hard-pressed Italians were reported falling back from Ritza to a new defence line 25 miles deep in Albania.

JOHN L. LEWIS, with tears in his eyes, told convention delegates of the C.I.O. today that he was stepping down as their president, and urged them to unite their ranks and support whomever they name as his successor.

"I won't be with you long. I have done my work and in a few days I'll be out of this office."

Bails Out Into Camp

Lumbermen Aid Pilot Hunt 5 Of Crew

EAST LAKE, Que., Nov. 18—(CP).—Flying Officer U. J. H. Leblanc, pilot of a Royal Canadian Air Force bomber which was abandoned by is six-man crew Saturday night, landed by parachute about 50 feet from a lumber camp, Michel Plourde, owner of the camp, said today.

Plourde said the camp foreman reported that lumberjacks in the camp heard the big Digby bomber roar over and, running out, saw the pilot drop down in the snow.

He said there was no word yet of the other five fliers who jumped from the bomber before Leblanc.

Plourde said the camp is about a mile and a half from East Lake, which lies in a heavily-wooded and remote Eastern Quebec district near the United States border.

The bomber was heard by the 50 men in the camp "sometime before midnight," said Plourde. He described the weather as clear.

Soon after the lumbermen reached Leblanc, they heard the bomber crash.

According to Plourde, the pilot told the camp foreman that he had bailed out about 10 minutes after the other members of the crew.

First, three of them jumped and then, two more. Leblanc told the camp foreman he had cut the plane's engines before leaping overboard, Plourde said.

He added that the pilot had driven 28 miles to Mont Carmel to report to R.C.A.F. headquarters by telegram and had been instructed to return to the camp to help in a search for the rest of the crew.

Plourde said that today Leblanc was back at the camp and R.C.A.F. planes from Halifax and Montreal were expected to arrive to start a systematic search of the thick woodlands about East Lake.

"Any searchers wo go out on foot will need snowshoes," Plourda remarked. "The snow in the woods is pretty deep."

He thought the searching planes would be able to use big East Lake as a base for their operations.

The bomber, one of Canada's aircraft on the Atlantic patrol, was headed for Montreal when it was banadoned, presumably because of lack of fuel.

Bill For 6 Nations, U.K. Spends 20 of the 50—U.S. Just Starting

WASHINGTON, Nov. 18—(AP).—A survey of the billions being poured out by the world's great powers for military implements indicated today that the United States has barely started spending on the modern mechanized fighting machine planned for defence.

The best available statistics, by no means complete, place the minimum current arms expenditures of the six major nations at close to $50,000,000,000 annualy. The outlays of numerous smaller countries would send the total higher, and no one has yet begun to estimate the monetary value of the lost lives, destroyed wealth and devastated areas in those nations bearing the brunt of war.

Embattled Britain, for example, has recently increased her spending to a rate of nearly $20,000,000,000 annually, or as much as all the United Kingdom's 47,000,000 people earned in a pre-war year.

In Canada, with a national income of about $4,000,000,000, the armament budget for the current year is about $810,000,000. Figures for other countries of the British Empire are not available.

What war and the threat of war are actually costing the world can only be guessed at from fragmentary information. Government authorities say that Germany has published no budgets for the last four years. Armament budgets of other powers have been changing rapidly.

Reports received by officials here gives this picture of the arms budgets of major powers, together with available estimates of national income—which are very rough and often not closely comparable — to provide a yardstick for measuring the effort involved:

United States— For the year ending next June 30, total budget $12,058,000,000, armament burget $5,000,000,000. Estimated national income $4,000,000,000.

Greek Hate Mystifies Duce

May Take a Year But We'll Break Their Backs Rants Musso

ROME, Nov. 18.—(AP).—Turning to the war against Greece, Mussolini, in his harangue to the Fascists to-day, said the Greeks "hate Italy as no other people," although "the reason is a mystery."

Greek foreign policy in recent years was based on this hatred, he charged, describing it as a policy of "absolute complicity with Great Britain."

"It could not be otherwise," he shouted, "considering the King is English, the political class is English and the Bourse, in both a figurative and real sense, is English."

Papers allegedly found by the German general staff in France, he declared, showed Greece had offered the Allies all its air and naval bases since last May.

"The rough mountains of Epirus and its muddy valleys do not lend themselves to lightning war," he explained. "I do not believe it worth the trouble to deny all the news given by Greek propaganda and its English loudspeaker.

"That Julia Alpine division which was supposed to have suffered enormous losses, fled and been pulverized by the Greeks, was seen by General Soddu, who after his visit telegraphed me Nov. 12:

"'I went this morning to visit the Julia Alpine division and must report a magnificent impression was brought back from this superb unit, stronger than ever in its Alpine rocks.'

"With absolute certainty I tell you we will break Greece's back. Whether in two months or 12 months, it little matters.

"The war has been barely begun. We have men and means to annihilate all Greek resistance. English aid cannot prevent accomplishment of this most firm proposal.

"To think or suspect something otherwise, means not to know me. Germans and Italians together, we are a bloc of 150,000,000, resolute, compact and firm from Norway to

Decision Unlikely Before Christmas Recess

OTTAWA, Nov. 18—(CP).—Possibility of steps to reduce wheat acreage in the Prairie Provinces next spring is the subject of much private discussion on Parliament Hill but today the impression was that the Government will wait until after parliament's Christmas recess before announcing any policy in this connection.

In his speech last week Agriculture Minister Gardiner quoted in the House figures on which he based his belief Canada's wheat surplus will be reduced to not more than 100,000,000 buahels in the next five years. Then he said:

"There is nothing in these figures which should induce Canadian

Claims Only 1 Warship Seriously Hit; Shies Off Greece

ROME, Nov. 18 — (AP).—Mussolini claimed in a speech to his Fascist chiefs to-day that Britain was to blame for the present war and denied that the British Fleet had disabled half Italy's battleships at Taranto.

Speaking at his Palazzo Venezia at an observance of the fifth anniversary of imposition of economic sanctions against Italy in the Ethiopian War, Mussolini claimed that only one warship was damaged in the Taranto naval base raid last week seriously enough to keep her out of action for any great length of time.

Preparation for the fight between the totalitarian powers and the "Old World" began at the time the sanctions were voted by the League of Nations, he asserted.

In his first speech since Italy declared war on Britain and France last June 10, Mussolini denied British claims that half of Italy's battleships would be out of action for an indefinite time as a result of British air attacks on the Italian naval base at Taranto.

He said, however, "several units" of the fleet had been struck, but said he was assured by naval technicians that all but one could be repaired within a relatively short time.

(Prime Minister Churchill told the House of Commons on November 13 that British bombers raiding Taranto left half of Italy's battleships crippled and said the blow decisively altered the balance of naval power in the Mediterranean.

(He said photographic evidence showed that two battleships, one of the new 35,000-ton ships of the Littorio class and a 28,622-ton battleship of the Cavour class were partly submerged after the attack and

The five missing members of the crew are Flt. Lt. G. F. Clay of New Westminster, B.C.; FO. J. G. Richardson, Saskatoon, Sask.; LAC. H. E. Howard, Aylesford, N.S.; LAC. E. J. Benoit, Ottawa; and AC. Elmer Johnson, Winnipeg.

According to information Plourde received from his foreman, it is just possible that the five who left the bomber before FO. Leblanc might have dropped down either in New Brunswick territory or near the Maine-Quebec boundary.

East Lake is little more than 40 miles from the Western tip of New Brunswick. The camp where FO. Leblanc landed is less than a mile from the northern boundary of the State of Maine.

Case Of The Jitters

Huns Burn Ship Mistaking Warships

MEXICO CITY, Nov. 18.—(AP)—Informed sources said last night they believed three United States warships off the Port of Tampico were the "enemy" ships which caused one German merchant captain to scuttle his ship and three other vessels to scamper back into refuge of Tampico, where they have been marooned since the war began.

The three United States warships were sighted recently by the Mexican gunboat Queretaro a few miles off Tampico, these sources said.

Unconfirmed reports from Tampico said that units of the United States Neutrality Patrol Friday night—when the Nazi ships attempted their vain dash to open sea—were signalling the British freighter Olivebank, which had been loading lead and was about to be escorted from Tampico through the neutrality zone by the American vessels.

Nationality of the warships which frightened the German captains never has been definitely established, but the German captains said they believed them to be British.

Tampico reports indicated the Germans, who said they were signalled by the warships to surrender, erroneously interpreted the signals.

The 4,137-ton Phryia, one of the four German vessels which tried to slip out of Tampico Harbor into the Caribbean or the Atlantic late Friday night, was set on fire and scuttled by orders of her commander, Captain J. Schurt. The others, the 9,660-ton Orinoco, the 5,033-ton Idarwald, and the 6,031-ton Rhein, retreated to the port where they had been tied up since the outbreak of the war.

Had Full Cargo

The Orinoco, a combination cargo and passenger ship, had been loaded with live and butchered hogs, fuel oil and other stores, suggested to some observers here that she had a rendezvous with a German commerce raider, perhaps one of the two German pocket battleships believed to be roaming the Atlantic.

Captain Schurt told port authorities he saw four warships, which sent up flare signals ordering him to surrender.

Mexican newspapers noted today, however, that United States ships were waiting outside the territorial limits to escort the British freighter Olivebank, which sailed late Saturday. (The despatch did not clarify why the British freighter was to be escorted.)

Trade Minister MacKinnon will discuss the wheat situation when he speaks, probably this week, in the debate on the address in reply to the Speech from the Throne. the Atlantic where men are giving their all to resist the terrific assaults of the Nazi aggressor.

"Under the leadership of Ernest Bevin and Herbert Morrison, English workers to-day are producing as men have never produced before and by their labor are turning their island home into an unconquerable citadel of freedom. With the enemy's bombs literally dropping about them as they work, they are turning out more of the instruments of defence.

"This unconquerable effort has been made under the leadership of Labor itself which to-day is the backbone of the British fight for freedom."

Pledging the co-operation of the Government to Labor, Mr. Stimson declared:

"There is assurance which I think I can give you and that is the assurance that the practice and procedure of collective bargaining through chosen and independent unions will not be sacrificed. That policy is fundamental to a democratic defence of democracy.

"That policy underlies to-day the magnificent defence of Great Britain. It will stand here as the policy of the departments of this government charged with defence. Under such a policy I believe that American labor will outdo itself in patriotic effort."

Attacking aggressor nations for seeking to "bury Christian civilization under the rule of permanent economic and military force," he said the United States now faces the most "far reaching" crisis in its 150 years of existence.

"It is not only a challenge to use and our institutions," he said, "it is a challenge to the world civilization of which we in America are a part."

club.

Provincial officers guarded the club throughout the week-end.

Earl Bates, warden of York county, said he understood the club "carries on under charter of province."

Hon. Harry Nixon, provincial secretary, said there would be an immediate investigation of this.

"I do not know if the club had a provincial charter, but I will investigate immediately," Mr. Nixon said. "However, the charter does not give any club authority to operate as a gambling joint, and where we find infractions of the law we call the charters in and cancel them."

More than 300 of the "found-ins" were taken into custody at the elaborate Combine Club, formerly the Brown Derby, at suburban Etobicoke. They were released on $50 bail, while $100 bail was required of 78 other "found-ins" arrested in 10 other clubs in downtown Toronto.

Harry Leiberman, who police say was operator of the Combine Club, and 15 employees of the club were released on $1,000 bail each. Those charged similarly in the other 10 raids were freed on $500 bail each.

Use Picked Squad.

A picked squad of officers drawn from parts of the province as far distant as Barrie and Niagara Falls conducted the Combine Club raid. Using crowbars and sledgehammers they battered down four reinforced doors to reach the gaming room.

Following the raids, Attorney General Conant said there appeared to have been a "substantial breakdown in law enforcement in Etobicoke township. He recalled that, in 1939, when a number of complaints were laid regarding the gambling situation in suburban districts, he stated the matter was one for local authorities. At that time, he said, he offered assistance to local authorities on their request.

"No requests for assistance have been received....and I am not aware of any action having been taken by any local police....Provincial police have jurisdiction throughout Ontario and they will act....whenever it appears that there is a substantial breakdown in law enforcement."

statement said. "On the contrary they will be integrated with the training system of the Canadian army as in the past."

Members of these training corps units now enter as cadets and undergo similar training to a recruit in a reserve unit. They are appointed to commissions only after qualification and the same procedure the department said, will continue in the future "except that the standard of qualification will be raised and a period of training with an officers' wing of an active training centre wil be required."

"In sort," the statement added, "the training will be changed by a greater importance being attached to the practical and less to the theoretical sides than in the past."

As yet the defence department has received no decision on the length of time a cadet from a C.O.T.C. unit will be required to attend an active training centre but it will be at least one month the statement said.

Final decision on this point will be reached after Defence Minister Ralston carries on discussions with the British war office during his visit to London.

"In any case," the statement said, "no one will be considered for appointment to a commission until he has first undergone training equivalent to that ordered for recruits called up under the National War Service regulations."

At present that training is limited to a maximum of 30 days at a military training centre.

OBITUARIES

CHARLES LONG

The death occurred on Sunday evening of Charles Long, a resident of Otonabee for sixty-seven years. Coming from Meiklenburg, Germany, in the year 1873, he worked for the late John Bennett for ten years before taking up farming for himself. He farmed until ten years ago when he retired to his late residence on "River Road" in Otonabee.

A member of St. Andrew's Church for over forty-five years, and in the latter years had been a member of Knox United Church. He took great interest in the building of Coldspring Union Sunday School and has been one of the trustees since 1907.

Left to mourn his loss are his widow, two daughters (Emma) Mrs. J. Gerard, and (Minnie) Mrs. C. F. Kitney, and two sons, Alex of Peterborough, and Bert of Otonabee.

Also four granddaughters and three grandsons.

The funeral will be on Tuesday, at 3:30 p.m. from his late residence on the River Road, Otonabee. Rev. V. E. R. Zufelt will officiate, and interment will be in Little Lake Cemetery.

JEAN ELIZABETH TROTTER

A short, and useful life ended on Saturday, when Jean Elizabeth Trotter passed away in her home, at 212 Reid street. She had been ill for the past seven months, and was in her 18th year.

Born in Peterborough, she was the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Herbert A. Trotter, and with the exception of four years in Valleyfield, Quebec, her entire life had been spent in this city. Educated in Prince of Wales School, and in the Peterborough Collegiate Institute, she was a member of Knox United Church, the choir, Miss Lewis' Sunday school class, and one of the most dependable workers in the Canadian Girls In Training.

Surviving are her sorrowing parents, and one brother, Warren. A host of friends mourn the passing of one whose life has ended so soon.

The funeral will be on Tuesday from the family residence at 2:30 p.m. Rev. V. E. R. Zufelt of Knox United Church will officiate, and interment will be in Little Lake Cemetery.

Peace could have been saved even in the last days of 1939 if England had not, under pressure of the Polish Ambassador who went to the Foreign Office at 11 p.m. September 1, advanced conditions for its adherence to the conference proposed by Italy which absolutely were inacceptable because they were humiliating; namly that German troops, already on the march, should not only halt but withdraw to their line of departure.

What happened in the successive days we already have seen and it is superfluous to recall it.

France was wobbling, but still far from being on her knees and no one in the world could foresee an army famed as the strongest in Europe would melt like snow under the sun when on June 10 Italy entered the war.

The English defeat in British Somaliland was as complete as that at Dunkirk. So also at Berbera the English fled. Likewise in Libya we have been the ones to attack and the lightning-like occupation of Sidi Barrani must be considered not a conclusion but a premise.

Our navy guards our lines of communications in the Mediterranean and Adricatic so effectively that the enemy navy has not succeeded in interrupting them or even disturbing them.

The Italian Air Force always more than equals its task. It has dominated and dominates the skies.

"A strong people like the Italians does not fear the truth. That is why our war bulletins are documentations of truth. We publish month by month our losses in men and material.

The Part That Hurts.

In this connection I want to recall the shout of joy raised in the House of Commons when Churchill finally was able to give the good news: that concerning the action carried out in the port of Taranto by English torpedo planes. Only one, as announced by the bulletin of armed forces, has been seriously damaged and its repair will take a long time.

The other two, in the unanimous opinion of technicians, will quickly be restored to their former efficiency. It is false—I say false—that two other warships and two auxiliary vessels were sunk or hit or slightly damaged in any way....

Mr. Churchill, in order to complete the picture, should have been able to give his honorable listeners some indication of the fate of the Liverpool, Kent and other first line units recently torpedoed in the central Mediterranean or in the port of Alexandria by Italian submarines or torpedo planes.

Everything concerning developments in the three-power pact, in the west or in the Danubian basin is the result of common agreement, as well as everything regarding the future position of France. It is now clear the Axis does not desire a peace of reprisal or rancor, but it is equally understood that certain claims must be satisfied.

These more than legitimate claims could have been the subject of discussion before the war if they had not been countered by ridiculous and tragic "nevers"; when there was some sign of abandoning them it was already too late. Italy had chosen its path by May, 1939.

Because of their legitimate character our claims will have to be granted without compromise or a temporary settlement which from now on we reject categorically.

Italy Asked To Get In.

To consecrate the fraternity of Italian-German arms I requested the Fuehrer, who consented, that we be permitted to participate directly in the battle against Great Britain with planes and submarines. I add at once, Germany had no need of our aid. I am grateful to the Fuehrer for having accepted my offer.

English aid cannot save the Hellenes from the catastrophe which they wanted and have shown they merit. To think or suspect something otherwise means not to know me.

Three hundred and seventy-two fallen comrades, 1,081 wounded and 650 missing in the first 10 days of fighting on the Epirus front will be avenged.

mediately after conferences with third parties.

Informed sources said that Ciano besides learning all about Molotoff's visit at first hand can bring first hand information to German leaders on Mussolini's talk last week with Rumanian chief of state General Ion Antonescu.

Ribbentrop met both visitors, Seranno Suner in the Berchtesgaden station and Ciano in Salzburg.

The Italian and Spanish Foreign Ministers were guests of Ribbentrop at a luncheon in Fuschl Castle, near Salzburg, after which Baron Alexander Von Doernberg, German Chief of Protocol, called for Serrano Suner at his hotel and took him to the Berghof, Hitler's mountain chateau.

There, Hitler took the Spanish minister to his office.

Ribbentrop was present at their talks.

(In Berlin, the German press asserted the conferences were a sign that Germany 'holds all the trumps.' Neither the press nor official sources however speculated as to the ground covered. Instead, the press spoke of the beginning of "a highly political week."

(Spain and Rumania are described by the Hamburger Fremdenblatt as "two geographic pillars marking the space within which the great fight of the Axis powers against England in the Mediterranean is fought."

(Dienst Aus Deutschland, perhaps foreshadowing a visit by Premier Ion Antonescu of Rumania, says that while talks with Serrano Suner show the diplomatic interest of the Axis in Western European developments, yet interest "is equally directed toward question of Southeast Europe.")

Italians Fall Back Fast On Koritza

Counter Attacks Fail 130 Tanks Cut Off In Wild Greek Push

ATHENS, Nov. 18.—(AP).—Hard-pressed Italian troops were reported falling back to-day from the key town of Koritza to a new defence line 25 miles inside the Albanian frontier, with their counter-attacks smashed and a motorized column of 130 tanks cut off on a mountain road.

All along the border battlefront, Greek military reports indicated, the invasion of Greece which Italian forces launched three weeks ago to-day has turned into a desperate defence of Albania from fierce Greek counter drives.

A government spokesman declared last night that Greek mountain troops who seized new heights commanding Koritza, springboard for the Italian invasion toward Phlorina and Salonika, had driven to the very gates of the fortified city.

The Italians were reported fighting a rear-guard action there to cover the withdrawal, under fire, of strong forces which barely escaped being trapped.

Italian troops, beaten back in repeated counter attacks intended to reinforce their weakening grip on the town, were said by the Greeks to be falling back to new defence lines in the ridges 25 miles from the Greek-Albanian frontier and 15 miles past Koritza.

The motorized column reported cut off was said to have attempted a "last chance" dash through snow-clogged mountain passes toward the Yugoslav frontier.

Some of the tanks as well as abandoned war material were reported in Greek hands and Greek advance parties were said to have penetrated northeast of Koritza to positions commanding the Koritza-Yugoslavia road which passes between Lake Presby and Lake Ochrida.

Blizzards, Ice Cause Scores Of Road Crashes

TORONTO, Nov. 18 — (CP). — First widespread snowfall in the southern sections of Ontario, accompanied by a thin coating of ice over sidewalks and roadways, caused hundreds of crushed fenders to cars and bruises to individuals, but few serious accidents.

A survey by The Canadian Press showed that while driving conditions were the worst this season, motorists generally took extreme care, proceeded slowly, and when collisions occurred they were not serious.

Snow fell heavily over large portions of the province and in some section there were blinding blizzards on Saturday. It was reported from Goderich and Tavistock that student fliers of the Royal Canadian Air Force succeeded in grounding their planes successfully during the storm although at Tavistock one landing was forced and was effected on an open field.

Milder weather on Sunday, accompanied in many places by light rain, removed most of the snow and at Caledonia 80-year-old Chief Osborne Clear Sky, one of the last of the famous Tuscarora Tribe of the Six Nations, said after this snow leaves there will be Indian summer.

Dozens of persons were in hospital during the week-end — many of them suffering minor injuries received in traffic collisions and many more with sprains, bruises and fractures suffered when they slipped on icy pavements.

One of the most spectacular crashes due to ice occurred in Hamilton where a motor car slid into a trolley pole and knocked it down. A street car soon afterwards got tangled in the loose wires and a couple more poles fell before the matter was cleaned up.

One serious accident was reported from St. Thomas where Ac. W. McMillan of the Royal Canadian Air Force suffered back sprain and a slight concussion when struck by a motor car during the storm.

It was reported from Tillsonburg that the snowfall there was the heaviest for November in the last 35 years.

Crack Passenger Train Stalled In Winter's Opener

The eastbound "Olympian," crack passenger train of the Milwaukee road, is shown as it was stalled in a snowdrift a quarter of a mile long near Granite Falls, Minn.; in places the snow was higher than the car windows. Passengers were transferred to a local train and taken to Minneapolis after a night abroad the trapped train. Minnesota was the hardest hit of the states in the severe storms that swept the U.S. Many towns in the state were isolated.

Stop Acts Of Sabotage By Exposing Spies

WASHINGTON, Nov. 18.—(AP)—Asserting that 'four totalitarian powers' are co-operating to stall United States' preparedness, Representative Martin Dies advocated Saturday a program of exposure to ward off sabotage of defense industries.

Dies named Germany, Italy, Japan and Russia as the "totalitarian Axis partners" and declared that the orthodox method of fighting saboteurs —apprehending them after the commission of their crime—has failed in Europe.

He suggested that his House of Representatives Committee on Un-American Activities be given funds and powers to deal with potential saboteurs in advance of their acts of destruction.

"With all due respect to the Department of Justice and the Federal Bureau of Investigation, and they are doing fine work, I think the whole method of approach must be radically changed," the Texas Democrat said.

"I am going to recommend to Congress that the committee be given more power with respect to those who refuse to testify or to appear so that all these saboteurs may be exposed."

Dies added he would ask Congress for at least $1,000,000 so that the committee could proceed with the examination of 300,000 persons "connected with subversive activities."

If the funds are granted, he said, these people will be brought before the committee, one by one, so the public might learn about all their connections.

"It has been definitely proved," the chairman said, "that when these agents are exposed their usefulness is definitely at an end."

Dies announced that committee employees had prepared a 500-page printed "white paper," which he said contained "irrefutable evidence connecting consular representatives of the German Government with fifth-column activities." It will be made public later this week.

He said that a second paper would be prepared in Italian Consular representatives and "Russia and Japan will be eventually involved."

2 Children Die In Sudbury Fire

TORONTO, Nov. 18. — Northern Ontario fires claimed five lives over the week-end, two of the victims being members of the Fort William Fire Department, who were killed while fighting a restaurant blaze on Friday night. The following day a member of the Algonquin Regiment died of injuries received fighting the fire.

At Sudbury two children were overcome by smoke and severely burned when fire of unknown origin swept through their suburban home. They died in St. Joseph's Hospital, Sudbury. Maurice Lalonde, 9 months, and Raymond, 3 years, were asleep in a bedroom off the kitchen when the fire broke out. Mrs. W. Lalonde, the mother, had gone across the road to a neighbor's for a moment.

The Sudbury fire was first discovered by Private Pete Landry of the 14th Forestry Company, C.A.S.F., who is stationed in Sudbury. His attention was attracted by smoke and he rushed into the house and managed to bring the children out. Another neighbor, Fred Lodder, drove them to hospital.

The baby died a few minutes after the hospital was reached. Raymond died several hours later.

Upon completion of that tour of duty, "Mrs. X" does a six-hour shift in a London hospital as a volunteer nurse. Gardiner Scores Firms With Camp Excuses

OTTAWA, Nov. 18— (Staff). — There is to much talk in Canada about the lack of skilled labor, said Hon. J. G. Gardiner, Minister of National War Services, in a radio address last night in the "Let's Face the facts" series. He made it clear that pleas from Canadian factories for exemptions from military service for skilled workers would not be widely granted.

If factory managers could not produce under wartime conditions, said Mr. Gardiner, then they were not good enough to hold their positions and it might be found necessary to replace them.

Mr. Gardiner called on Canadians to stop talking "against military training for men who are making planes, munitions, arms and ships, and remember that in one year from now a man will be needed to use every gun, operate every plane, and drive every truck made and in the front line of battle."

Cracking down on the critics of his no-exemption rule for compulsory training, Mr. Gardiner continued: "As Minister of National War Services I would say after seeing Britain in action, it will take much longer to train a soldier than it does to train labor for plants."

Civilians Hold Line.

"The civilians of London by their fortitude and courage are holding the line in the battle of nerves, but the Battle of Europe will be fought in the field by armies," he said. "We do not need much skilled labor to do these jobs. I inquired in factories and shipbuilding yards everywhere, and was told in every line of industry that not more than 5 per cent. required any skill before coming in to do the job, and in a very short time they could operate the machines and tools in the plant."

The stocky little Minister took full advantage of the invitation to go and talk to the British workers. He cited a number of cases. "One girl running a rather important machine said she lived in the country. I have seen similar girls milking cows, and I am sure it took much more nerve, ingenuity and skill to sit on a stool and pull teats than it did to operate this inanimate creation," Mr. Gardiner said.

In the House of Commons on Friday Defence Minister J. L. Ralston indicated that training of a smaller number of men for a longer period, with new arangements for exemption of munition workers, was under consideration.

Mr. Gardiner said Britain is the front line in the defence of democracy, and "Britain is depending upon the North American Continent more than any other part of the world to sustain her effort.

"The British Navy is holding the line while we who turned our swords into pruning hooks and plough shares at the end of the last war beat our plough shares and pruning hooks into swords again.

"The real Battle of Britain is being won or lost in the factories of the democracies. British factories are working night and day to turn out munitions, arms, tanks, trucks, planes and ships. Our factories must do the same."

LAKEFIELD, Nov. 18—(ENS). — "Roughing It In The Bush," by Mrs. Susanne Moodie, will be read at the Kawartha Kids Klub meetings this year, as decided at the initial meeting of the new project, "The Club Girl Stands On Guard," when the girls met at the home of Doreen Northey on Friday evening. The leaders, Minnie Charlton and Hazel Northey, gave an outline of how the club girl can stand on guard, by keeping in good health, being efficient, by helping others in the home and helping share responsibilities of the community.

The meetings will be opened with "There'll Always Be An England."

Current events will be given at each meeting with Bernice Slater and Hilda Northey appointed to report the latest news at the next meeting, which will be held at the home of Phyllis Webdale, on Thursday evening, November 21.

A demonstration on good posture will be presented at the next meeting by Frayne and Marion Johns.

The election of officers resulted with Doreen Northey as president; Bernice Slater, secretary; Muriel Bullock, treasurer; Eva Higgins, press secretary; Minnie Charlton, pianist.

Following the meeting dainty refreshments were served by the hostess, and her mother, Mrs. Sherman Northey.

Right vs. Advisability

When Defence Minister Ralston was replying to criticism made in the House of Commons regarding equipment shipped from Canada to Britain, he had occasion to refer to his own experience when on active service, and this he said: "As a company commander I considered it my duty to make life miserable for the quartermaster until I got the equipment for my men. I didn't go to the House of Assembly to make a speech about it."

Admittedly there was a bit of a barb in the tail of that statement. Subsequent debate brought forth the view that no one is denying the right of a member of Parliament to make statements, but there is a serious question regarding the destrability of doing so in many cases. And that we believe is the touch-stone by which such matters should be judged.

There was the claim that 500 units had been shipped from Canada and it was found on delivery there were no fan belts. The explanation was that a cable was sent and two days later the belts were on their way. It was stated there was no delay on that account and no interference in the training.

Then there was that other case where it was claimed not enough tools had been sent with certain mechanized units. The explanation of that was that there was a shortage of tools in England. It had nothing to do with the tools which had been sent with the machines, as those had all gone forward. More tools were needed with which to carry on work in the shops. And those were forwarded.

One can well question the advisability of bringing such matters before Parliament. There is not a business house in the country which has its deliveries coming in 100 per cent. right all the time. Human nature and human habits may be efficient, but they do not reach perfection. When something is missing then the cure is to get in touch with the supplying company, and that is done many times. One does not give an interview to a newspaper about it. He simply pursues the ordinary method of business and has the thing set right.

Our belief is that Parliament is in session for the purpose of making more effective our war effort. It does not seem right or advisable that its time should be used in bringing up matters which could all have been explained or settled in a few minutes of conversation between the responsible Minister and the member who desired the information. No one questions the right of a member to say a number of things, but that point about the advisability of doing so is one which sticks up today like a young hill and cannot be overlooked.

More Bands Are Needed

Kipling who knew his soldiers once wrote that the band was the soul of the regiment. In the language of the street he had something there. Nothing puts so much pep and enthusiasm into a military body as the stirring music of a good band. In this war we in Canada have sold our bands short. There are not nearly enough of them.

Uncle Sam is not making that kind of a mistake. Under the scheme of national training about to go into force military bands are a part of the establishment. There are to be bands, lots of them. Thirty have already been authorized and more are coming. Men called out by the draft who are musicians will be encouraged to go into these musical organizations. That is as it should be. There is nothing so drab, nothing so devoid of color as a body of men in military uniform marching along without martial music. They have to be keen soldiers indeed to look enthusiastic over their jobs. Ever watch a body of troops trudging along while the band up front is silent? And notice the difference when the musicians blares out a lively march. In a split second the whole unit is transformed. Shoulders come back, heads go up, arms swing and men step out with a new interest in life.

It is in recognition of that fact that the United States military authorities are seeing to it that plenty of music is provided for the hundreds of thousands of new soldiers the training camps across the border will be handling soon. We could well afford to take a leaf out of the American book in that respect.

Canada's war effort would be all the more enthusiastic and effective if we had more bands in action. Somehow we have been acting as if we did not want patriotic music and plenty of flags in sight. They are essentials in war-making on a democratic basis but apparently that is not the official view in Canada.

Soldiers In Accidents

Driving along No. 7 Highway in the Western section of the province a representative of the Examiner had pointed out to him two places where car smashes had occurred. One member of the air force and two infantrymen had been killed. In the crash at the hamlet of Shakespeare one man died instantly and the other never regained consciousness, and the doctor who was waiting for him when the ambulance arrived at Stratford hospital said he had possibly never seen a case when a person had received more serious injury.

These are not isolated cases, and it is something which is causing worry to the officers. We have heard it discussed frequently, and one contention is that leaves of absence have a good deal to do with some of the cases. The men know that the transportaion methods of today permit them to go a considerable distance, but there is always the urge to report back at a certain definite time, and there is probably not much margin left on the return trip. Some of them drive but most of them hitch hike. It is in traffic accidents that so many of them have lost their lives. Naturally those in authority hesitate to curtail the leaves of the men, and yet they cannot stand aside and watch the death toll mount. They feel a responsibility for the welfare of their men, and that is right enough as it is their duty to provide for their safety. Cars carefully driven can take the soldiers far and bring them back safely, but the thing is not working out that way. Too many of them never get back, and too many others are badly broken and in need of long and careful treatment.

A Better Plan

The intimation from Hon. Mr. Ralston that the period of compulsory training in Canada is likely to be extended to four months will occasion little surprise. Most military men, at least, were aware that the 30-day scheme could not be expected to bring results in proportion to the heavy cost of the training plan and they have been looking for just such an announcement as was made by the Minister of Defence the other day. There has been a feeling that the 30-day plan was just a mild dose of compulsory training to test the reaction to the scheme and that it would be extended before long.

However that may be there seems little doubt of the wisdom of the change that is foreshadowed. From all points of view the training of fewer men for a longer period is an improvement over the calling out of large numbers for a training session that, with Saturday afternoons and Sundays taken out, came closer to a 20-day than a 30-day period.

In the first place it will make available a reserve of reasonably well-trained men. In the second it will not dislocate industry nearly so badly as the other plan for the intention is to spare men who are engaged in essential war work.

That is a very important matter because the problem of manning the huge new plants that are going up all over the country will be a major one in the near future. A new army of industrial workers will be needed for these immense factories and it is going to strain the resources of Canada, so far as trained manpower is concerned, to the utmost to keep the war industries moving at top speed and to maintain production at the desired level. Massed German raids on British industrial towns are a challenge to Canada to forge the weapons and manufacture the munitions to blow Nazism off the map of Europe. That is going to be an essential part of Canada's war effort and nothing must be allowed to interfere with its success.

As It Was On The Tenth

We noticed a report of a debate at a recent gathering in the country and it had to do with present and past methods of living in rural areas. One young man who was upholding the present-day plan said this:

"The people in the country today are not living in the age of boot-jacks and home-made soft soap."

We think he could have presented his case without pointing a finger at the boot-jack as something from which escape had been made. For the moment we will allow the soft soap to stand at one side. But the boot-jack—well that's different. Getting off the long boots of other days without the aid of the boot-jack would have been like trying to shave without a razor or getting dressed up without a rubber collar.

We've got one around the house some place; probably it is enjoying a long rest down in the cellar. But on the Tenth Concession there were boot-jacks; every house that had a window, a door and a chimney would have a boot-jack.

When the men came in after working out on a wet day particularly they never could have taken off those long-legged leather boots in any other way. They stopped outside on the porch and they worked a spell on the heel scraper that was nailed out there. Then they did some more rubbing on the corn husk mat inside the kitchen door, but that didn't get the boots off.

The boot-jack was a simple wooden contrivance with the business end slightly elevated from the floor, and in there was a V wedge into which the heel of the boot went; the other foot went on top of the jack to keep it steady and make it behave. Then with a yo-heave off came the boot.

The hired man on Lot Four was a smart chap and he used to get his long boots off by using a kitchen chair. He would get his foot and leg and boot wrapped around the chair leg and tangled up with the bars and beams and all things which go to make a kitchen chair and he's got 'em off that way. Of course the hired man was smart. He could play the fiddle and mouth organ, dance and call off all at the same time.

We do not know who invented the first boot-jack, but it always did seem there have been monuments raised to men who did lesser things. He brought the solution to the problem which was present along the Tenth in every house. You could use some tallow or castor oil and soften up those knee length leather boots, and it wasn't much of a trick to wrap the trousers tight so they'd fit inside in the morning. But when you'd been out on a wet day the things seemed to contract and if it hadn't been for the boot-jack a lot of folk of other years would have had to go to bed with the boots on. That's why we felt just a little grieved to think a young farmer of today would speak in a slightly poo-hoo way about the boot-jack of other days.

NOTE AND COMMENT

The New York Times says it in a sentence when it remarks that "the spirit of Nelson and Drake has taken wings."

The official Turkish radio says that Germany with Italy is weaker than Germany alone. That will make Senor Mussolini's face redder than ever.

Britain is spending nearly $70,000,000 a day on the war, and there is no indication that that is the ultimate peak of wartime expenditure.

Six cabinet ministers at Ottawa have had the 40-minute limit on their speeches lifted. The motion was not made by the Hansard staff, we understand.

New United States docks to build the world's biggest battleships are being rushed. Evidently Uncle Sam does not believe that the day of the superdreadnoughts is passing.

Canada proposes to send two ministers to South America. An army of trade commissioners in the same section of the globe would be a useful addition to the program.

Gabriel G. Serkau has been sentenced to prison at Bridgeport, Conn., for embezzling over $14,000. The Star should remember him as the individual who wanted Canada to enter into a barter deal with Russia.

Sixty-eight persons have been killed in traffic accidents in Toronto so far this year. With a month and a half to run last year's toll has already been exceeded by seven.

HAPPY WAY

¶ When I get home these chilly nights I shed the boots from off my hoof, allowing it be mighty good arriving safe inside my roof. And when I've quaffed my bowl of soap and warmed my aching shins a bit, the folks they bring their woollen yarn and for a spell they sit and knit.

¶ Then neighbors they drop in a spell, a-sitting down like what they should, a-waiting till I finish off the chopping up my kindling wood. My neighbor lights his corncob pipe, his feet stuck on the kitchen range, a-showing thus that when he comes he's feeling that he isn't strange.

¶ And then we talk on politics, and how the taxes come like rain, a-mounting up most every year, like suffering from a-growing pain; we speak of days what's went and gone, of days what won't come back no more, when they were living side by side on lot sixteen, concession four.

¶ The women they sit talking too, about the styles a-coming new, and like as not they gossip there, discussing of their neighbors too.

¶ It is a pleasant thing, it be, for folks to drop in after tea, not formal way but natural, like what the neighbors ought to be. Much better far to spend the time with neighbors what be friends to you, than rearing round the town at night, a-wondering what the deuce to do.

U.S. Navy Plane Hidden By Veil of Secrecy

By CHARLES P. STEWART

WASHINGTON.—Secrecy already is beginning to veil Uncle Sam's naval activities.

There isn't exactly a censorship. That is to say, if reporters can dig up any news, they can print it. They can't dig much of it up, however. When they ask questions officialdom won't answer. So all the scribes can do is to speculate.

For instance, a few days ago word was received that United States warships and planes seemed to be extremely busy in the eastern Caribbean. Air reinforcements were arriving in Puerto Rico. Dispatches from San Juan said so. But why? No explanation. Warships also were sighted from the Puerto Rico coast, steaming out into the Atlantic. What was their mission? The navy department wouldn't tell. The entire neutrality patrol fleet put to sea from Key West. Whither it was bound was another mystery.

Washington correspondents accordingly did some guessing.

They surmised that the U.S. might be getting ready to occupy Martinique, Guadaloupe and French Guiana should the Vichy government show signs of surrendering them to Germany. Or, they thought, maybe preparing to take possession of the West Indian island bases we recently acquired from Britain. Or, again, they weighed the possibility that the navy folk had received word of more sea raiding in southern waters.

Pure Guessing

But it was all pure guesswork. As the situation develops, there probably will have to be more and more of it.

The least sensational guess is that the U.S. simply is about to take over the bases the British are leasing to them, for John Bull won't object to that; quite the contrary. The Germans and the Vichy outfit emphatically will object, though, if the U.S. assumes charge of Martinique, Guadaloupe and French Guiana. They won't be able to do anything about it, except howl diplomatically, but it will be quite an "incident," nevertheless.

If, however, the navy's informed of an Axis raider at large in the Pan-American oceanic neutrality zone, there's liable to be some shooting.

Supposing such a raider's presence, it isn't likely to give up without a fight. The pocket battleship Von Spee didn't, not so very long ago. First it fought and then scuttled itself rather than surrender.

And that some other Axis ship, or even more than one, isn't loose in the south Atlantic is no certainty. The Von Spee succeeded in snooping out from Germany despite the British blockade. It's no safe bet that a few more didn't manage to do so also.

Perhaps it would seem that, if any did, we should have heard of their depredations before now.

Yet, during the last war a German raider called the Moewe operated for a pretty long time off the South American east coast without being so much as suspected.

This craft's system was to catch an Allied merchantman, take its crew and passengers, if any, on board, and then sink the captured vessel. It ran up a score exceeding 20 ships. They were reported missing, of course, but nobody knew what had become of them.

Finally, though, the Moewe became so cluttered with prisoners as to have scarcely standing room on board. Therefore, the next time it overhauled an English ship, it didn't sink the latter, but loaded all its captives on to the captured vessel, telling them to beat it into the nearest port. It was a tactical error. The prisoners made Pernambuco. Thence the news was disseminated. Immediately the British sent men-o'-war to look for the Moewe, found it and sent it to the bottom.

I remember the affair perfectly, for I got the finest scoop out of it in my newspaper career.

Censors Hurt Others

I was Buenos Aires correspondent at the time for a North American news association. Upon the Moewe prisoners landing at Pernambuco, their story promptly was telegraphed down the coast to B.A. There I got it, and naturally wired it at once to my New York headquarters. It went by the Central and South American Telegraph Co.—across to Valparaiso; thence up the South American west coast to Panama; thence to Galveston; thence to New York overland. From there it was broadcast everywhere in the United States.

It was a news beat. I couldn't understand it, for the yarn was available to anyone in Buenos Aires. Years later I learned how it happened. The U.S. wasn't in the war then. Consequently my dispatch, wired all the way across neutral soil and through neutral waters, got through. My opposition filed with the Western Telegraph Co., which was by way of London. There the British censor threw the opposition's account into the waste basket.

This just goes to show what a censorship does to news services. I was glad of it in that instance, but I don't like the principle.

Quite

"What about that notice outside your shop, 'Money returned if not satisfied'?" protested the disgruntled customer.

"Ah," said the shopkeeper, "I am satisfied with your money."

NO CHANCES

• Where Will These People Live ?

EDITOR EXAMINER: Sir,—As one watches the rapid construction of the Dominion Government sponsored manufacturing buildings and the addition to the plant of the Canadian General Electric Company by the company itself, which I am informed will cover an area of more than six acres in all, and then realize that within a period of about six months some 1,200 new employees will be engaged in important production, should we not in Peterborough be anticipating how this small army of people is going to be housed. It is a question pertinent to every citizen. The landlord, tenant, owner of vacant property, business man industrialist and men in every walk of life.

Other cities of similar size to Peterborough have had such an experience. For instance Kingston now claims to be in the 30,000 class, brought about to some extent by militia activities and to a greater extent by the establishment there of the Aluminum Company plant and now by the acquisition of the C.I.L. industry. Is there any thing we can do, any plans that can be laid to receive the influx of new citizens that are required to take care of this great manufacturing expansion.

It is known that building of homes follows industry, but should we wait until it is actually upon us if there is anything we can do in advance.

There are two sides to the housing question, one is the providing of living quarters for the many who are bound to come to our city and the other is not to build beyond what might be looked upon as our permanent population after the war is over. There are many angles to it and as I stated above every citizen interested in the growth of our city should give it some thought.

Yours truly,
R. M. GLOVER.

• What Will Hatch After the Visit ?

BERLIN has issued the usual formal notice of the results of the visit of Molotoff of the Soviet Union. That is to the effect that agreement was reached on all important questions affecting the interests of the two countries. Secrecy surrounds what those questions are or might have been. And whatever they were Italy had no place in the picture. This is important in view of the claims repeatedly made by Mussolini for a dominant influence in the Balkans.

The raid on the Italian fleet and the damage done to capital ships could not have been unknown to Molotoff, and certainly this British naval success went a long way to offset the fanfare of the Nazis over the visit of the Soviet Premier to Berlin. The smashing given by the Greeks which becomes more pronounced each day as the news comes in must also have had a sobering effect on the deliberations, whatever they were about between Hitler and Molotoff.

But it would be unwarranted optimism not to expect any hatch from this meeting in Berlin. There is a suspicion that the Russians have sold the Turks down the river. The world will soon know if that is true. Moreover, Hitler can hardly afford to let Mussolini down without an attempt to retrieve Italian fortunes at low ebb in this black week. A despatch from Istanbul tells of the rejoicing of the Turkish people over the British victory at Taranto. Nowhere else except in London and Athens was the enthusiasm greater. And without doubt in other parts of the Middle East and in Africa, British prestige has been fully re-established. The opinion of one Turkish writer is to the effect that the needle of the compass has turned toward final British victory and will never turn back. Perhaps the one sure thing that can be taken out of the Molotoff visit to Berlin is an acknowledgment by Hitler that the war is going to be prolonged and certain fences had to be mended by an assurance of vital supplies from Russia. That can be no worse condition than has existed since the outbreak of the war.—St. Catharines Standard.

EXCESSIVE FIRE WASTE

DURING the past few years the government, the press and fire prevention organizations throughout Ontario have issued many warnings to the people regarding excessive fire waste in Canada. Few of us realize that while fire insurance is a good indemnity for the individual, it does not reproduce, and in consequence the nation is poorer after every fire, by the value of the property destroyed.

Then again, insurance rates are based on careful statistical records of insurance companies and are increased or decreased in proportion to the combined experience of the underwriters. The remedy for this annual wastage is largely in the hands of the people.

We admit that the world is travelling faster — everything is being speeded up—and in consequence fire hazards are on the increase. Notwithstanding that, the report of our government fire marshal proves that the bulk of our fire waste is caused through carelessness. If care is observed by everyone, there is no question that many fires could be prevented, and that a material saving in property and lives could be effected. A reduction in fire toll in the Dominion is to be assured only if the people exercise care when working in close proximity to inflammable material and take every precaution to avoid starting fires.—Chatham News.

LONDON TAKES IT

TO the visitor from overseas, London, in the days before the war, had a fascinating beauty. It was the beauty found in unexpected byways, the beauty of tradition, the beauty of the past living beside the present. But in eyes of the world London was never more beautiful than it is today.

The film camera senses this in the opening shots of London Can Take It, a short newsreel that is being shown now in several Winnipeg theatres. It is dusk and the evening sun lingers fondly on gleaming St. Paul's. People are waiting for the bus to take them home. Soon it is evening. Then from the sky comes the drone of bombers. The air is filled with the wail of sirens, "like the howling of wolves," remarks a Canadian. Bombs crash to destroy in five seconds the labor of five centuries.

Quentin Reynolds, Collier's correspondent in London gives the commentary accompanying the film which shows the army of the people fighting back. We see Londoners who work in the daytime as clerks, bankers, peddlers and shopkeepers, become air raid wardens, firemen, ambulance workers, and members of the demolition gangs. As a neutral, covering the war front in London, Reynolds takes his hat off to unconquerable men and women, free and unafraid, an Imperial people who make it an Imperial city.—Winnipeg Tribune.

JOB OF DESCRIPTION

WHAT many people in the United States probably have been thinking about Colonel Charles Augustus Lindbergh has now been reduced to plain and unmistakable language by the Louisville Courier-Journal.

It denies that the public is served "by being given a chance to hear a defeated soul reveal its weakness." At the same time, it must be admitted that the Courier-Journal did a tolerably respectable job when it described Lindbergh in the same editorial as "becoming a minor national pest, not as bad as grass-hoppers, but worse than the dogs cluttering up our city sidewalks."—Victoria Times.

Weather O.K.

Two men, both noted for their caution when it came to money, met on the street.

"Well, well," said one, "fancy running into you like this. I was just looking for someone to lend me ten dollars."

"Is that so?" replied the other. "Well, it's a nice day for it."

A Bible Message For Today . . . .

According to the grace of God which is given unto me, as a wise masterbuilder, I have laid the foundation, and another buildeth thereon. But let every man take heed how he buildeth thereupon. For other foundation can no man lay than that is laid, which is Jesus Christ. . . .

Every man's work shall be made manifest: for the day shall declare it, because it shall be revealed by fire; and the fire shall try every man's work of what sort it is. If any man's work abide which he hath built thereupon, he shall receive a reward. If any man's work shall be burned, he shall suffer loss: but he himself shall be saved; yet so as by fire.—I Cor. iii: 10, 11, 13-15.

To The Editor

LIKES SUGGESTION

Editor Examiner:

Sir,—I quite agree with Mr. J. J. Turner in suggesting that the point of land at McDonald's Mill should be named the Walter Stocker Park. The rows of small trees were planted there under his direction and I think his work for the city should be recognized. I have been speaking to many citizens in the last few days and they all agree that Alderman Stocker's untiring efforts to beautify the city should be rewarded in some way.

Yours truly,
W. ALLEN.

A Bit of Nonsense

Working Order

The office telephone was out of order, and a workman was sent to carry out repairs. After a time, the workman suggested that the occupier of the office should call up an acquaintance in order to test the working of the instrument. The man called for the telephone number of his own home. When the connection was made, he spoke into the transmitter:—

"Maria!" There followed a few seconds of waiting, and he repeated his call in a peremptory tone, "Maria!"

The storm that had been gathering broke at this moment. The telephone wires were struck by lightning and the man was hurled violently under his desk. Presently he crawled forth in a dazed condition, and regarded the repair man plaintively.

"That's her!" he declared. "The telephone works fine."

Nothing Serious

An R.A.S.C. recruit had been out on an Army lorry for his first day's driving, and when he returned he had to report a slight accident.

"Sorry, sarge, and all that," he announced brightly, "but I ran over a fellow."

"Good heavens was it serious?" gasped the sergeant.

Fire, Road, Rail Mishap Toll Snuffs Out 16

TORONTO, Nov. 18. — (CP).—Traffic accidents, fire and railway mishaps contributed to a death toll of at least 16 in Ontario during the week-end. A survey by The Canadian Press showed six persons dead as a result of fire, five because of highway accidents, one through an industrial mishap, one because of gas and three because of railway accidents.

Three men were dead of injuries suffered when they fought a fire in Fort William Saturday Assistant Fire-Chief J. A. McEwen of that city was killed instantly when the front of the blazing building collapsed and Pte. Gordon Cyploski of Iroquois Falls, Ont., died Sunday of injuries he received. Fireman Thomas Ross, who fell 20 feet when another part of the building collapsed, died a few hours later. Five other men were seriously injured combatting the fire.

In Sudbury the small children of Mr. and Mrs W. Lalonde were overcome by smoke and severely burned when fire of unknown origin broke out in their home Saturday night and they died in hospital soon afterwards. The children, Maurice, nine months, and three-year-old Raymond, were alone in the house, asleep in their beds when the fire started and were rescued by Pte. Pete Landry, member of the active service unit in Sudbury, who saw the burning house and rushed in to take the children to safety.

Burns Prove Fatal.

In Toronto 14-year-old Harold Roberts of nearby Unionville died in hospital on Saturday of burns he received on Friday when his clothing caught fire in a gravel pit. No one could say what had happened, but the boy had been sent to get anti-freeze out of a barrel and in some way it ignited.

Miss Margaret McCormick, 60, of Toronto, was asphyxiated by gas fumes in her home early on Saturday. Police said jets in a kitchen stove in her home were open when they arrived.

Most serious traffic accident of the week-end occurred early on Saturday in the Western Ontario village of Shakespeare when two Tavistock members of the armed forces, Lac. Frank Holley, 23, of the Royal Canadian Air Force, and Sergt Robert Cawthorpe, 25, of the Highland Light Infantry of Canada, were killed. Their car collided with a large transport truck operated by John A. Pike, 17, of Stratford. Pike, who allegedly turned out to pass two other cars which had been involved in a minor collision, has been charged with reckless driving. Two girls in the car, Beatrice Millington and Edna Hammer, also of Tavistock, suffered serious injuries, but were expected to recover.

Another traffic death was recorded when Henry Briscoe, 79, of Toronto, died on Saturday of injuries received when struck by a street car on Friday.

Pte. Antoine Simon, 25, Indian member of the Royal Hamilton Light Infantry, Canadian Active Service Force, was killed early on Saturday when he walked in front of a freight locomotive at Barrie. Police said they believed he had been blinded by the headlight of the locomotive and stepped on the track.

Falls Under Train.

At Sudbury, 13-year-old Roy Phillips of Biscotasing, 90 miles to the northwest, died in hospital Sunday when he fell under a moving Canadian Pacific Railway freight train. Blood transfusions given by his father, Colin C. Phillips, failed to make him rally.

William Durrant, 65, of Oakville was killed Saturday when his car collided near Oakville with one operated by Allan Cudmore, also of Oakville.

The industrial accident occurred at London Saturday when Joseph Polankai, 47, of that city was struck on the head by a toppling light tower. He died in hospital Sunday. The accident occurred at the scene of a war production plant construction project.

At Windsor James M. McKenzie, 48-year-old car inspector for Canadian National Railways, was killed instantly late Saturday when crushed under a switch engine. He was crossing tracks in the yards to inspect a train when the accident occurred.

Ronald Healey, 21, of Easton's Corners, Ont., was killed at Kemptville Sunday night when he was struck by a car.

Survivors Of Gallant Jervis Bay Arrive At Canadian Port With Thumbs Up

These Canadian survivors of the gallant Jervis Bay, LEFT, are shown as they arrived at a Canadian east coast port after having being picked up from the sea by a Swedish freighter under the command of Capt. Sven Olander, shown RIGHT, with the mate of his freighter. Captain Olander, who was in the convoy defended by the Jervis Bay, turned his ship back to return to the scene of battle and pick up survivors of the armed merchant cruiser. His return meant rescue for 65 survivors of the gallant defenders. Pictured from LEFT to RIGHT are: George M. Squires of St. John's, Newfoundland; George Beaman, Halifax; Dalton Green, Ottawa; K. 4 Young Folk Drown In Car

MARINE CITY, Mich., Nov. 18.—(AP). — Four young persons plunged to their deaths Saturday when their automobile careened off a highway three miles north of here and fell into Newport Shores Drainage Canal.

The victims were identified as Ruth Cane, 16, Marine City; Melvin J. Jones, 19, Fair Haven; his sister Elsie, 15, and Walter A. Fahs, 18, Lenox.

Thirteen-year-old Lawrence LeGrow, only witness to the tragedy, told State Police he heard a loud report an instant before the car swerved off the highway. One tire was found to be flat when the car was hauled from the canal.

Sunday Schools Hold Rally At Eddystone

ROSENEATH, Nov. 18—(ENS).—J. R. McClean, field secretary for Ontario Council of Sunday School was the speaker on Thursday night in Eddystone Baptist Church, when a rally for the schools of Alnwick and Haldimand was held. A banquet was held preceding the rally.

Mr. McClean's subject was "The Church Family," or comrades in a common cause. "It is the duty of Sunday school leaders to foster and develop a loyalty to all church organizations, until it includes a spirit of comradeship with all Christian movements. The day of isolation is past politically, nationally and denominationally," he said. "The motive of all Christian teaching must be comradeship with God and service to Christ. The unfinished sketch of God's kingdom left by Jesus Christ is ours to finish."

Don Lee of Baltimore, president, was in the chair. The devotional period was in charge of Roseneath group, and included a talk by S. Bradshaw on the subject, "The Christ Child Made Central," and a chorus by the group. A duet was rendered by pupils from Grafton school during the evening. Roseneath school won the attendance banner with the largest representation and greatest mileage.

CONVICT'S DAUGHTER

By RUTH RAY KANE

READ THIS FIRST:

Disheartened because she can find no work, Lona Ackerman, whose father is serving a life sentence for murder, finds some consolation after telling her troubles to Jim Claridge, an acquaintance she has decided to trust. Aside from Claridge, she is alone in the world, jobless and broke. Jim gives Lona a lead for another job and she applies at the office of the Western Realties company. Lona likes her new work, sees more and more of Jim evenings. On Sunday they decide to go to a nearby lake for a picnic. Avoiding old friends who had snubbed her, Lona plunges into the lake, infuriated, and swims out farther than she intended. When Jim rescues Lona from drowning after she had been seized with cramps, she realizes they love one another. Returning from their outing, she finds a telegram from the prison warden stating her father is near death.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY

CHAPTER THIRTEEN

WHAT, LONA kept asking herself all through the next six hours, while the speeding train carried her toward the grim prison hospital where her father lay dying, would she have done if this thing had happened before she knew Jim? Back in the days when she was alone, broke, jobless and friendless. She shuddered to think of it.

For Jim had taken charge of everything. He'd seen to it that she made the first train south, and made arrangements for a chair when he found there was no Pullman. He'd driven her to the station himself in the same gaudy car they'd used to picnic with in the afternoon, and stood with her hand in his until the train came shrieking into the station. He'd even offered her money. But she waved it back decisively.

"I've enough, Jim. Besides, this is my debt. It's got to be MY money. You see, don't you?"

"Of course, girl. I understand. But if there's anything I can do, you're to wire. You'll remember that?"

"I'll remember, Jim, and—thanks for everything. You seem to be always—helping me out." A little sob choked her, and she clung to him as the warning bell on the train sounded and he had to leave.

"Goodby, girl, and good luck. I'll see Sanders in the morning and tell him what's happened. Don't worry, he'll hold your job until you get back. And don't take it too hard, girl. Maybe it's—all for the best."

With that he was gone, and she was left alone to face the dragging miles between her and her father. Poor, patient Daddy! She realized, as she watched the slow passage of the light-streaked night outside the car window, that in the back of her mind there always had been the hope that some day she would have her father back again. That she might be able to make up to him for what he had suffered. That hope was futile, it seemed. She laid her head on the arm of her chair and sobbed, as the grinding wheels gathered speed.

Dawn was breaking when she stepped, finally, from the train into the station at the state capital.

"Northwestern Penitentiary," she directed the staring taxi driver in a tired voice.

"You can't get in there now, lady," the driver objected. "They don't let nobody—"

"It's an emergency," she cut him short. "Take me to the warden's office."

The city was stirring as they flashed through it; the busy, teeming capital city in which her father had lived for so many years now, without ever having seen more of it than she was seeing at this very moment. The thought maddened her, and as they approached the gray stone walls of the forbidding group of buildings where were housed the wards of the state, she could have cried out at the unfairness of it all.

Out of the east the sun had come up rosy and promising. How Daddy had loved the sunrise! Was he seeing it now, she wondered? Was he still—oh, but he must be still alive! He couldn't have—gone until she saw him. The fear that had been eating at her all through the night still nagged her as she forced herself to speak calmly to the sleepy-eyed attendant in the warden's office. She HAD to tell Daddy about herself and Jim! He had to be alive!

She was trembling when the attendant finally raised the warden on the phone.

"He says you're to wait," the man told her. "He'll be right over and take you to the hospital."

"Oh, could you tell me if—it's my father I've come to see. Could you tell me—how he is?"

The fellow shrugged. "Dunno. Is he real bad sick?" His voice was disinterested.

"He's—they've sent for me."

"I wouldn't know about the sick ones." He shrugged. "Ain't none of 'em died during the night, if that's what you want to know." He crossed his feet and looked at the desk impatiently. She got the impression that she had disturbed his rest and that he resented it. She sat very still, after that, until the warden came.

She had met Warden Lewis on her last visit to the place, and remembered him as a big, gruff, wheezing, kindly sort of man. His lined eyes softened when he saw her sitting there, and he came over and took her trembling hand.

"I'm glad you got here, miss," he told her, his manner holding a quaint, old-fashioned deference she would have found charming under other circumstances. "He's been asking for you."

"Oh, may I see him, please? How is he?"

"You must be prepared for a change in your father, miss. He's been sick quite a long time, you know."

"Sick a long time? And I didn't know! I left him here alone and sick. Why didn't you tell me?"

"He wouldn't hear to it. He's an unusual man, your father, miss. You'll have to be a great woman to be worth what he thinks of you. It's a shame this pneumonia catching him the way it has. Another month and the board would have granted his parole."

"Parole! You mean they would have set him free? Sent him back to me? And I didn't know!"

"Not the way you think, miss. You see, your father's lungs were never very strong. He would have had only a few months anyhow. That's why we were going to parole him. . . . But—he's got pneumonia now."

"Is there no hope Are you sure? Oh, if he'd only live so I could get him out of here! Get him home with me. He could die, then, in peace. You're sure there's no hope?

TWEED

Two Go To Jail For Wire Theft

TWEED, Nov. 18.—(ENS)—Goldwyn Randalls of Toronto was acquitted in county police court, when he appeared with Henry Crawford of Waterloo and Joseph Miller, Northbrook, on a charge of stealing approximately 900 pounds of copper wire from a power line at the disused Bey Mine Ltd., near the village of Northbrook.

Crawford drew a seven months' reformatory sentence when he pleaded guilty to the theft charge and to a similar count dated two days after the first offense was alleged to have occurred.

Miller was sentenced to one month in the county jail, when he pleaded guilty to theft on the first date. According to a statement made by Randalls and produced by Constable W. J. Franks of the C.I.D., Toronto, Randalls had been walking home October 24, when Crawford gave him a ride. Once in the truck, Crawford had offered him a job getting the wire, and he had accepted. He was paid $10 for two days' work.

Crown evidence disclosed the wires had been stripped from 7,200 feet of line, cut with an axe and taken to Toronto, where it was sold to a junk dealer.

King Brings Cheer

Coventry, Eng., Nov. 18 (CP)

THE KING personally brought words of sympathy, cheer and assurance of an empire's support today to stricken Coventry—parts of which have been blasted to a smoking, shattered shell by a Nazi air raid.

Taking the townsmen completely by surprise, the khaki-clad King pulled up before the town hall in his car which had threaded its way through debris-strewn streets.

A knot of persons gathered around him to cheer. His Majesty smiled.

Warsaw Ladies Speed War Work

WARSAW, Nov. 18—(ENS).—In the absence of Mrs. T. Cooper, Mrs. Henry Clements presided at the W. I. on Thursday afternoon, with the attendance rather slim.

A lot of work for soldiers, including a pile of knitted blocks by Mrs. David Taylor, was brought in, but no work was done. On Thursday, November 21, the whole afternoon will be devoted to war work.

Mrs. Digweed reminded the ladies that only work done through the Red Cross could be called Red Cross work. There is a heavy penalty for calling work Red Cross when it is not.

Rev. J. W. Wilkinson gave a talk on "Home," in relation to things at the present time, and the children in the home.

Mrs. Charlotte Cooper had the splendid idea of taking her "current events" from The Peterborough Examiner.

The cup to be given the winner of the oratorical contest was exhibited. Mrs. Weller gave a short report of the convention she attended in Toronto.

Mrs. Tennyson is visiting friends in Peterborough.

Mrs. Gordon Sharpe has returned home.

Harold Barnett enjoyed his month in the military camp.

The Rock Lake and Ireland party of hunters returned home on Thursday, each having obtained his deer and thoroughly enjoyed the holiday.

Snow fell all Friday and this looks as though it might remain.

It was decided to hold next week's meeting at the parsonage. The meeting closed with a short Bible contest.

DEFIANTS DEFEAT SPITFIRES IN OVERTIME BASKETBALL CONTEST

House League Games Are Keen Contests

Fifteen seconds separated Spitfires from the leadership of the Y.M.C.A. House League at the Y Saturday night when Defiants scored a last second basket that tied the score and enabled them to win out in overtime 30-25 and take the top rung. Wellingtons after having to default their game through lack of men borrowed a player and then proceeded to down Hurricane's 36-33 in a fast second game.

Defiants had to stage a last minute rally to win their game and are on top with two wins in as many tries, while Hurricanes and Spitfires are tied in the second slot with one each way and Wellingtons bring up the rear with none for two. A better crowd than on the previous week watched a pair of fine, hard-fought cage battles, both of which were anybody's game all the way.

Spitfires and Defiants staged a red-hot opening game with the score as even as two teams could make it, the score being all even at the half 13-13 and deadlocked at the close of the regulation playing time, 25-all. Defiants who trailed almost all the way with the exception of the half-way mark when the score was tied turned in a last-minute scoring drive that brought them back from a six point deficit and tied it up with a quarter of a minute remaining when Currie scored at that point. Both teams opened it up wide all the way in a torridly fought battle that featured fast offensive play and unyielding defense with checking unusually hard and no quarter asked or given at any time. Spitfires took the lead after a scoreless opening two minutes and clung to it to the half mark when Defiants tied it up only to yield the edge as the last period opened. Then with the score tied 25-all at full time, Defiants scored five points in the overtime while holding the losers off the score sheet. Currie who scored the tying marker, McPerson and Gillespie were the winners' best and Sedgewick and Stewart led the losers. The teams:

Defiants, 30: Centre, Craig (10); forwards, Currie (8), Ward (4), guards, McPherson (3), K. Gillespie (3); subs, C. Gillespie (2), Burns.

Referee—Steve Csumrick.

After they were forced to default their game to Hurricanes through lack of players, Wellingtons borrowed a man and then proceeded to pile up a 24-13 first-half lead that enabled them to chalk up a 36-33 win in a hard-fought battle.

Wellingtons put on a big opening half offensive show that had earned them an 11 point margin at that point and despite the losers' last-half rally was good enough to carry them to a win. Both teams featured attacking power rather than defensive play and both had enough chances to make the score much higher. Better shooting could have greatly changed the final count. Steve Csumrick, the player that Wellington's borrowed from their opponents was a big factor in the bringing down of his team, turning in a fine offensive showing to notch 16 points and lead the winners with Dougherty and Grose also standing out. Thorburn led the losers with 15 and Sam Rogow stood out at guard. The teams:

Wellingtons, 35: Centre, Csumrick (16); forwards, Smith (2); Dougherty (6); guards, Grose (3); Broadley (1; sub, Ferguson (8).

Referees—K. Gillespie and S. Currie.

Beinn Dearg set the pace until a furlong from the finish of the mile and a half course, when Longriggan got in front. A final spurt by Beinn Dearg overtook Longriggan who was ridden by Pat Beasley. The time was 2:42 3-5. The favorite, the Earl of Derby's Tutor, last year's winner, also ran.

SPORTS – DAY BY DAY

By FRED D. CRAIG

It looks like Ottawa Rough Riders and Toronto Balmy Beaches in the finals for the Eastern Canadian football title. After a slow start the Ottawa crowd outscored Argos 12 to 1 at the capital Saturday in the first game of the Big Four playoffs and have an eleven-point lead for the second fixture in Toronto while the Bammies defeated Sarnia Battery 12 to 0 in a game at Toronto in which the Gunners never had a chance. Argos have not given up the fight by any means and declare that they will come through Saturday. "The breaks beat us," Les Ascott said yesterday during a week-end visit home. "We had one touchdown called back that looked all right to us and got the worst of a couple of other pieces of bad luck." However, eleven points is a big margin, when you haven't got it and you are facing a powerful foe, well equipped in all departments like the Rough Riders.

* * * * * *

If there was any doubt as to the value of Tony Golab and Andy Tommy to the Ottawa club it has disappeared after Saturday. It was the injection of these two stars into the game in the second half that was the spark that touched off the hope of any Ottawa victory. Up to then Argos had outplayed Ross Trimble's men during two quarters and had scored the only point of the game. Golab, always a threat and the fleet-footed Tommy changed the whole run of the battle and in the last half Riders scored twelve points and held Oarsmen off the score sheet. Both Golab and Tommy contributed largely to that result and the crowning effort was the fine kicking of Sammy Sward, who outbooted Selkirk and Folwell so effectively that the Argos were almost constantly on the defence in the last two periods. That condition will apply again next Saturday, making the Toronto chances of overcoming an eleven-point lead a mighty slim proposition unless the Argos' aerial arises to new heights or Lou Hayman's team has more luck in shaking Bobby Coulter, Elwyn Morris and Art West loose than they had on Saturday.

Balmy Beach, winning their seventh O.R.F.U. game in a row without a single loss, had no trouble beating Sarnia Saturday. In fact, on the run of the game, they should have won further away. Beaches' superb defence stood out as usual and the Gunners only moved the yard sticks once during the afternoon. On the other hand, Porter, Seymour, Manson and Don Crowe had little difficulty in tearing off neat hunks of yardage when carrying the ball. Ponton's crew have set up a rare record from the viewpoint of defensive football this season. In seven league battles they have been scored on only 12 times, less than two points a game and it is this consistently strong defence that is causing many folk to give Beaches an even chance to defeat the Big Four winners for the Eastern Canada title. Of course, the Bammies still have another game to play but if Sarnia were to succeed on Saturday in overcoming that twelve-point margin it would be one of the biggest upsets in modern football.

James P. Fitzgerald celebrated Saturday the 40th anniversary of his appointment as sports editor of the Toronto Telegram and sportsmen all over the country will join in congratulating a man who for four decades has been actively interested in the sporting life of Canada. "J.P." who began writing sport at the turn of the century has a unique personal knowledge of athletes and sporting events of the past forty years and if he ever got round to writing a book on his experiences it would be mighty interesting reading and a treasure trove of accurate information in regard to Canadian sport. Peterborough baseball enthusiasts will remember the veteran sports editor for his connection with the Canadian League. He was president of that organization when Peterborough entered the loop in 1912 and the local club always found him a square-shooting prexy. Veterans in all branches of sport have reason to regard him as a friend and will unite in the felicitations that are being extended on his reaching the 40th milestone in his chosen profession. Genial, frank and friendly, "J.P." has been a credit to Canadian newspaper work and to Canadian sport over a very long period and has earned the good things that are being said of him.

The promise of two lively games in the Y.M.C.A. basketball loop Saturday night was more than fulfilled for the weekly double-header was packed with interest in both games. The feature of the twin bill was the Frank Merriwell finish made by Ken Gillespie's Defiants to nose out the fast-travelling Spitfires in overtime. Joe Stewart's speedy club led in the last few seconds of play and looked to be sure of their second straight win. However, Sam Currie looped in a million dollar basket with the whistle about to be blown and the Defiants went on to win by five points in overtime. The victory sends the Gillespie club to the top of the league ladder. In the other end of the double-header Wellingtons won a hard-fought verdict from Hurricanes by 36 to 33 after defaulting the game first. The four clubs in the loop are so close to an even footing in strength that it promises to be a battle all the way for the Dominion Life trophy.

There is an unusual look to the N.H.L. standing today. Not that there is anything new about the Toronto Leafs showing at the top of the heap, of course. They have been there often before and were leading at this stage last year. The surprising feature is that you have to read right down to the bottom of the list to find the Boston Bruins and that the classy Rangers are no higher than fourth place. In between them are the Chicago Black Hawks and the Detroit Red Wings, both of whom have been doing quite nicely for themselves, thank you, since the campaign opened. Of course the Rangers' position is not quite as bad as it seems for the Young Men of Manhattan have only played three games and have yet to be beaten, getting a win and two ties in three starts. The Bruins however are having a tough time, not scoring a win in their first three games.

Toronto Leafs were the biggest gainers in the week-end games. They started in with a win in Toronto over Canadiens Saturday night by a 4 to 2 score which was about as expected and then went on to Boston Sunday and scalped the Bruins 4 to 1 which wasn't on the cards at all. Only a goal by Bill Cowley saved the Rossmen from a shutout. Detroit Red Wings, tied for second place, had a profitable week-end trip to New York. Saturday night they came from behind to earn a 3-3 draw with the Rangers and Sunday shut out the luckless Amerks 2 to 0. Canadiens also played two games over the week-end and saved the journey from being a total loss by tying Black Hawks in Chicago after having been well beaten in the early stages of the game.

Curlers were promised an announcement in this column this week that they would be glad to hear. Now we can let the feline out of the gunny sack. G. D. Carlisle, chairman of the membership committee—incidentally not the president as the column said the other day—has arranged a meeting for the club rooms on Friday night at which the feature will be the showing of a two-reel movie film showing the 1940 competition for the MacDonald- Brier Tankard, one of the biggest events in curling every year. The picture shows the highlights of the competition which was held in Winnipeg last winter and will be full of interest to the curling fraternity. President Tom Mackay and the committee would be glad to welcome all local curlers and their friends for this unusual event.

Balmy Beach Whips Sarnia In First Game Of O.R.F.U. Playoffs

Toronto's Balmy Beach, only unbeaten rugby team in the east, whipped the 2-26th Battery team from Sarnia 12-0 Saturday, in the first game of the Ontario Rugby Football Union playdowns. Beach carried most of the offensive all afternoon, but ran into a surprisingly tough Sarnia defence with the soldiers keeping the score down until late in the game. This picture shows Don Crowe, triple-threat Beach backfielder, making yardage around the end of the Sarnia line. The teams meet again next Saturday in Sarnia.

Springfield Indians Beaten by Providence For First Loss in Eight Tries

Cleveland Barons and Springfield Indians have finally been toppled from the American Hockey League's unbeaten ranks.

The Indians had their name sent into the losing column last night, after winning four and drawing three, when they lost 3-1 to Providence Reds.

The Barons, winners of their first five games, ran up against their old jinx—the Indianapolis Capitals—and were set down 7-2 in another Sunday night game. The Barons did not take a game from Indianapolis all last season.

The losses, however, failed to dislodge the Indians and the Barons from the top of their respective divisions. Eddie Shore's Indians, with 11 points, carry a two-point edge over New Haven Eagles in the Eastern Section. In the Western Division, the Barons have 10 points, while Hershey Bears, Pittsburg Hornets and Indianapolis are tied with seven points.

Ramblers Won 4-3.

In other Sunday night games the Philadelphia Ramblers won 4-3 over Buffalo Bisons and the Eagles defeated Hershey 3-1. On Saturday, the Bears walloped the Eagles 5-1; the Barons took the measure of Philadelphia 5-2; Springfield won 5-3 over Providence, and Pittsburg topped Indianapolis 5-3.

The Capitals scored five of their goals against the Barons in the third period. Thomson and Joe Fisher scored for the Capitals in the first and second period respectively, and then in the third Cecil Dillon, Jones, Kilrea, and Bush, with two, were the scorers. The Cleveland goals went to Milford and Mackenzie.

Norm Mann, Bentley and Giroux scored the goals for Providence that meant Springfield's first loss. The lone Springfield tally went to Max Kaminsky after the Reds had gone into a two-goal lead.

A Stormy Game.

The Buffalo-Philadelphia game was a stormy affair, with a free-for-all breaking out that involved every player on both teams except Goalie Claude Bourque of Philadelphia. The fight started between John Polich and Lorne Mercer. Foster scored twice for Philadelphia, while Smith and Lude Wareing got singled. The Buffalo goals went to Bob Gracie, Tony Hemmerling, and Shannon.

Marcel Tremblay, Allan Shields, and Earl Roche scored for the Eagles against the Bears, whose lone goal went to Roulston.

Bill Summerhill led the Barons in their Saturday victory over Philadelphia, scoring twice and pinging up an assist. The other Cleveland goals were scored by Joe Jerwa, Milford and Cunningham. Wareing got one of the Philadelphia goals and Milford the other.

Mackei, Frost, Bruce, Kilrea and Hamill were the scorers for Hershey against New Haven on Saturday night. The single New Haven goal was scored by Vic Myles a little more than a minute from the end of the game.

Eddie Convey and Johnny Sherf each scored twice and Drouillard once as Pittsburg beat Indianapolis. The Indianapolis goals went to Keating, Jones and Jenning.

Shore's Indians had to come from behind to defeat the Reds on Saturday. The Reds started off the second period with goals by Jack Shill and Platz, but the Indians took the lead on successive goals by Hunt, Thurier, Shore and Thibeault. Windy Steele then scored for Providence, but Hunt got his second goal only 10 seconds from the end of the game to put the contest away.

LEAFS DEFEAT CANADIENS AND BOSTON TO LEAD THE LEAGUE

Toronto Scores Four Goals In Each Game

By ROBERT CLARKE
(Canadian Press Staff Writer.)

Boston Bruins must feel a lot like a man who was unaccustomed to public speaking.

Certainly it is that the Bruins are not playing the role mapped out for them by most observers. With a little more than two weeks of National Hockey League play in the record books, the Bruins find themselves in the embarrasing position of being last in the league.

True, they have only played three games, while the majority of the clubs have gone through five contests. But even then their record in their contests so far isn't anything for Manager Art Ross to get enthused about, although at the start of the season Ross pronounced that this was the best Bruin team ever.

All that the Bruins have to show from their three games is a draw with Montreal Canadiens, who have been able only to mark up two ties in five games. The other two contests went the way of the opposition, with the Bruins being defeated 6-5 by Chicago Black Hawks and 4-1 by Toronto Maple Leafs.

The Bruins bowed to the Leafs last night in Boston, 4-1, giving Toronto its second victory of the week-end. On Saturday night at home the Leafs topped Canadiens 4-2 and now dwell at the top of the standing, two points ahead of the Black Hawks and Detroit Red Wings.

Wings Blank Amerks

In other Sunday night contests the Hawks and Canadiens tied 4-4 while the Wings blanked New York Americans 2-0. The Wings came out of the week-end firing with the second best record, for they played a 3-3 tie with New York Rangers in New York on Saturday night.

The Leafs, who have now won four straight games since being beaten by Rangers on the opening night, were led during the week-end by Defenceman Wally Stanowski. Stanowski, rapidly developing into one of the best rushing rearguards in the league, scored a goal against both Boston and Canadiens.

Others to bag scores against the Bruins, who were held to a marker by Bill Cowley, were Dave Schriner, Hank Goldup and Billy Taylor. Schriner, Lex Chisholm and Syl Apps, besides Stanowski, were the Toronto scorers against Canadiens.

Five Rookies Score

The other Montreal score against the Hawks went to Tony Demers, while George Allen scored twice for the Hawks and single tallies were run in by Doug Bentley and Mush March. Quilty's goal came with less than four minutes of the game left, giving Canadiens a split in points.

First N.H.L. Shutout.

Another rookie—Goalie Johnny Mowers—held the spotlight in the clash between Americans and the Wings. Mowers scored his first N.H.L. shutout as teammates Gus Giesebrecht and Eddie Wares fired shots by Goalie Earl Robertson to give the Wings victory.

The Wings put on a third-period spurt to gain a tie with the Rangers. The New Yorkers carried a 3-1 lead into the third session through goals by Bryan Hextall, Clint Smith and Mac Colville against a first-period tally by Alex Motter for the Wings. Motter scored his second goal near the half-way mark of the third period, while Ken Kilrea fired the tying shot with less than four minutes to go. The Rangers had to fight furiously to keep the Wings from winning in the overtime.

Drillon Presented With Trophy at Montreal Forum

Rough Riders, Balmy Beach Have Big Leads

By SIDNEY GRUSON
(Canadian Press Staff Writer.)

The conclusion was general in Eastern football circles today that the leads built up by Toronto Balmy Beach and Ottawa Rough Riders in the first stage of the playoffs would be more than sufficient to carry them through to the section final. That final was predicted as early as two months ago.

The best in their unions on paper before the season started, the Riders and Beches justified the confidence by leading the Interprovincial and Ontario circuits, respectively, in the regular schedules. They swept aside any remaining doubts in the first playoff games Saturday.

12-1 Win Over Argos

The potent combination of Andy Tommy and Tony Golab led Riders to a 12-1 victory over Toronto Argonauts at Ottawa while Balmy Beach crushed Sarnia Battery 12-0 at Toronto. Both series are on a total points basis.

For two quarters Argos had the best of play and a one-point lead over the Eastern champions. Annis Stukus kicked them a point early in the game on a play that started out as an attempted placement field goal and became a straight punt when the ball was fumbled on the snap-out.

Then Ross Trimble sent his dynamite twins into action and the tide turned. First Tommy raced 50 yards to set up play on the Argo 20. Orville Burke shot a 10-yard pass to Tommy Daley, and Golab sent Daley around the end for the touchdown, converted by Tiny Herman.

Superior Punting

Long-distance kicking by Sam Sward brought three more points and Sward's superior punting eventually carried them into position for Herman's field goal from placement. Argos, unable to cash in during the first half, didn't have the power to do much about it in the second.

Even an inspired fight such as they put up in defeating Ottawa 11-9 once this season could hardly make up the difference for Argos next Saturday. Ottawa has the better first stringers and, just as important, the better reserves.

The Beach-Battery game was a hard-fought ground duel, featured by the air-tight defence of the Toronto club. Sarnia had the ball in Beach territory only in the game's dying moments and it required two successive 15-yard penalties to carry them to the Beach 33.

Sealed Verdict

A newly-developed quarterback sneak, in which Beaches fake a plunge off their ace, Frank Seymour, led to the touchdown that sealed the verdict early in the first quarter.

Johnny Mason, the quarterback, executed it perfectly and went 34 yards to the Sarnia two, from there he went over on second down on the same play.

Bob Porter kicked a lone single in the second quarter and, after a long kicking duel, the Beaches broke through to block a punt by Freddy Daws in the fourth quarter. Reg. Turnball fell over the line after picking up the ball two yards out.

This was the easiest of the three victories Beaches have scored over Sarnia this season. They should be able to add to their margin next Saturday.

Toronto Horse Again Winner At Bowie Races

BOWIE, Md., Nov. 18.—(AP)—For the second day in a row, the Toronto-owned silks of Connie Smythe were borne to a surprise feature race victory, when Sir Marlboro, paying $26.50 for $2, accounted for the $4,150 major prize in the fifth Thomas K. Lynch Memorial Handicap, opening day headliner here Saturday afternoon. The bay colt lasted to head Dixiana Farm's rank outsider, Dollar Bay, running the mile and a sixteenth in 1:45 3-5 over a track still wet from recent rains.

Taylor in Saddle

The G. D. Widener entry of Rosetown and Birch Rod, favorite at 95 cents on the dollar, finished third and fourth as named. Rosetown lost the place by three lengths.

Nearly 10,000 fans saw Walter Taylor, who is here trying to beat out Earl Dew for the 1940 jockey title, boot Sir Marlboro to his upset score in the event named in memory of the late turf writer and treasurer of the Bowie track.

Friday Smythe's Second Helping had won the $10,000 added Bowie Handicap at Pimlico, paying 19 to 1.

The downfall of the G. D. Widener entry marked the fourth straight setback for favorite players, who had managed to begin the day with a winner.

Exciting Finish

Sir Marlboro, here from Rockingham, has done his best racing in sprint affairs. He and Rosetown went out to battle for the lead. Rosetown forged into a daylight advantage before the end of a half-mile, but soon was joined again by the ultimate winner. Sir Marlboro put the filly away and pulled clear entering the last furlong, but Taylor had to ride his hardest to keep the Canadian colt's head in front when the amazing Dollar Bay rallied in the late stages and thrilled his few backers. Burning Star tried to pull himself up on the backstretch, and was a distant trailer.

A well-known former Canadian-owned campaigner, Brodea, provided another of the surprises at Bowie Saturday. Brodea, now owned by J. H. (Bud) Stotler, romped to a length and a half victory in the sixth race to pay off at $64.50, $21 and $13.40. Jockey Willie Garner had Brodea in command going to the first turn and was never headed, beating Esssjaytee handily. The race was at a mile and a sixteenth. Brodea, prominent on Toronto tracks during the 1940 season, was formerly owned by Ken Dawes of Montreal and trained by Harry Giddings.

Slash In Bacon Arouses Farm Leaders

TORONTO, Nov. 18.—Discrimina- by hog producers from one end of by hog prdoducers from one end of the Dominion to the others in the $2.19 per hundredweight drop for grade A bacon under the new Canada-United Kingdom agreement, H. H. Hannam, president of the Canadian Federation of Agriculture and secretary of the United Farmers' Co-operative, said last night.

"Farmers will be indignant, not at Great Britain for buying at a price which Englishmen can afford to pay in wartime, but at the inequality of sacrifice and the discrimination against agriculture which is permitted to occur in Canada in connection with our war effort. No other industry in Canada is being asked to make a comparable sacrifice," said Mr. Hannam.

Canadian hog producers, he suggested, will be gratified to know of the increased volume of bacon to be taken under the new agreement. They realized, he explained, that without the extra export the bacon market would be glutted and the price seriously depressed.

"But," he said, "the market price of hogs has already dropped in anticipation of this announcement. Likely there will be a further cut, and the farmer will notice that he will be required to shoulder the greater part if not the whole of the price loss.

"It will mean that after fifteen months of war, during which time labor and other costs of production have steadily risen, the farmers' price of hogs will be forced down close to that which prevailed in depression years before the war.

"It is one more demonstration—if any were needed—of the desirability of producers, through organization, putting themselves in a position where they can market their own products—not just dump them on the market at any price."

Shells For Hitler

This British sailor lovingly fondles an armful of shells on board a destroyer which had been assigned to escort duty. Escort duty has been made doubly dangerous now that the Nazi Stuka bombers have been working in conjunction with U-boats.

Fogarty Fegen Is Awarded Victoria Cross

LONDON, Nov. 18. — (CP).—A sturdy Irish captain—Fogarty Fegen—who went down with the ship, H.M.S. Jervis Bay, her guns blazing and her colors flying, was awarded the Victoria Cross posthumously to-day.

The Jervis Bay was sunk Nov. 5 as she challenged a powerful German raider in mid-Atlantic. The "suicide" stand of the armed merchant cruiser allowed at least thirty-two of thirty-eight ships in convoy to reach British ports.

The Admiralty announced that four ships were sunk by the raider and that one other ship still was unaccounted for. Another ship, also escaped from the raider, but later fell victim to enemy aircraft.

Captain Fegen, 49, went to his death maintaining the great traditions of the Royal Navy. During the first Great War he served as a lieutenant and later was in command of the destroyers Moy and Paladin. In 1924 he was appointed to command of the training ship Colossus. Later he was attached to the Dartmouth Naval College, and then became commander of the Naval College at Jervis Bay in New South Wales.

His commands since 1929 included the cruiser Suffolk, in China, and the cruisers Dauntless, Dragon and Curlew in reserve. For a time he was executive officer of the cruiser Emerald. He was appointed to the command of the Jervis Bay two months before the war.

The Jervis Bay, hopelessly outgunned and facing superior armament, poured shells at the Nazi raider and sank in flames following an explosion. At least sixty-five survivors, take aboard a merchantman, were landed at an Eastern Canadian port.

Naval Hero

The name of Captain Fogarty Fegen will take a prominent place among British naval heroes following his heroic action in sacrificing the armed merchant cruiser Jervis Bay to the might of a powerful German raider so that a convoy might slip away to safety. Captain Fegen directed the Jervis Bay in an attack on the raider and held the German ship at bay for two hours, enabling 33 out of the 38 ships in the convoy to break formation and escape. With his arm almost severed and suffering from multiple wounds, Capt. Fegen directed the attack until his ship plunged to the bottom.

Case Of Jitters

According to this version, it was thought possible that the patrol boats sighted the Phrygia, thought it was the Olivebank, and sent up signals.

The Phrygia's master said he was too close to one of the warships to flee. His officers and crew—forty men—took to lifeboats and came ashore.

Burned For Hours

Washington sources said the United States patrol vessel had advised the Mexican gunboat Queretaro they were waiting for the Olivebank.

The government was silent on this point.

The Phrygia, after burning for hours, finally blew up and sank five miles off the Tampico Jetties.

"On leaving the port," Captain Schurt declared, "we saw the four ships. They fired signals demanding that we surrender. The Idarwald and Rhein raced for shore, but due to the proximity of one warship to us and the bad condition of our vessel we opened her and set her aflame."

At this tense moment, according to the captain's story, the fourth vessel — the Orinoco — was still in the vicinity of the harbor bar. She headed back immediately.

The story of the flares explained why it was that no one along the waterfront had heard gunfire during the night—a circumstance which for a time had caused much speculation.

The crew of the Phrygia — she carried about forty men — came ashore in lifeboats without casualty.

Of the four ships it developed late in the day that only the Orinoco had carried a cargo—and she had great stores of pork, sugar, coffee, beans and the like. The others sailed with ballast.

Three of the vessels had given their destination as the Canary Islands, the fourth as Vigo, Spain. Even at the hour of their sailing, however, there had been speculation among shipping men that they perhaps were headed for a rendezvous with a German war vessel.

Under Secret Orders

The Phrygia blew up Saturday afternoon and slowly sank, five miles south of the Tampico Jetties. She went to the same sort of graveyard as the 32,581-ton German liner Columbus, scuttled last December far off the United States Atlantic coast in a vain effort to breach the British blockade.

Before Captain Schurt broke his silence every available and potential informant had shown a marked restraint as to what had happened to the Phrygia.

The Mexican gunboat, the Queretaro, was said by the commander of the naval district of Vera Cruz to have sailed Friday night with the German vessels under "secret orders." He declined to discuss her subsequent movements and would give no other information.

The 9,660-ton Orinoco, the last to leave anchorage, never actually cleared the harbor.

The Idarwald, 5,033-tons, and the Rhein, 6,031 tons, returned and tied up at the precise spots where they had spent the months since the outbreak of war. Visitors were forbidden.

The Phrygia had been preparing to dare the British blockade since last February when she took on 2,000 tons of the Idarwald's cargo. In May she was ordered to sail but this was delayed.

Italians Fall Back

Moving Into Albania

In the Pindus mountain sector, north of the Greek town of Konitza, the Greeks were said by a government spokesman to be pushing into Albania.

"Our guns dominate the Konitza-Erseke road in this area," the spokesman declared, "and our troops are mopping up in the Konitza region up to and beyond the frontier. We also captured Italian booty on the road from Konitza to Melissopatva."

He added "we are mopping up the terrain" farther southwest along the Kalamis River front to the Ionian Sea.

(A British communique said Royal Air Force planes, which have dropped bombs repeatedly on Italian communications, with forces in Albania, struck again over the weekend at Brindisi, Italian port opposite Albania.)

The Greek ministry of home security said last night two Greek villages were bombed and machine-gunned by Fascist fliers but that there were no casualties.

(Reports from Yugoslavia told of a third violation of Yugoslav neutrality by four foreign aircraft which crossed the border yesterday, swept through Yugoslav anti-aircraft fire and dropped 36 bombs on Kicevo and two nearby villages 40 miles from the Greek-Yugoslav-Labanian frontier. The planes, which were not identified, were pursued by Yugoslav fighter planes.)

The ministry of home security communique contained a report of Greek naval operation in the Adriatic Sea between Italy and Rumania.

"On Nov. 14-15," the communique said, "a Greek destroyer flotilla under Admiral Kavadias made a raid through the Otranto channel into the Adriatic Sea. The Greek flotilla steamed as far as the island of Sasero but nowhere sighted enemy craft and returned to its base."

the smaller ship was beached. In addition, Mr. Churchill said, a third battleship "probably" was damaged severely, two cruisers were damaged badly, and two fleet auxiliaries were submerged.)

"A strong people like the Italians does not fear the truth—it demands it.

"For this reason," he claimed, "Italian military communiques record not only the blows we give, but also those we receive.'"

He congratulated the Italians on the spirit with which they bore war-imposed sacrifices, then warned:

"These sacrifices so far are tolerable, but they may become more severe."

Mussolini told his party chiefs Italian losses in Greece were 372 killed, 1,081 wounded and 650 missing.

"They will be revenged," he shouted, "for whatever happens. I will never turn back."

"We have 1,000,000 men under arms, and we could call 8,000,000 more."

Mussolini began his speech with a furious attack on Britain which he claimed was exclusively to blame for the war.

The preparation for war began when the League of Nations imposed sanctions on Italy five years ago for the invasion of Ethiopia, he said.

The peace still could have been preserved, he declared, "if England had not rejected every one of Germany's attempts at rapprochement."

It could have been saved, he added, if Britain had not adopted a program of "encirclement" of Germany and if Britain, in response to Mussolini's last-minute attempt to forestall war after the Polish invasion had begun, had not imposed "humiliating conditions that the German troops should withdraw from Polish soil."

The Duce said the war, once begun, could be concluded now only "with the annihilation of the modern Carthage—England."

He said Italy's operations in Egypt foreshadowed resumption of the Italian offensive and added that the Italian attack on Sidi Barrani "must be taken not as the conclusion but as a premise."

Bomb Big Berthas

British planes struck through a southwesterly channel gale after dawn this morning for a bombing attack on Cap Gris Nez where German long range guns engaged in a duel across the Strait of Dover last night with British coastal batteries.

Observers on the cliffs near Dover could see the flashes of bombs exploding along the French coast.

The air ministry said yesterday that the night-long British bombardment of Hamburg — Saturday night-Sunday morning, the second in two nights on the greatest seaport in Europe—left in flaming destruction targets that ranged from big shipyards to industries producing synthetic "but presumably edible" fats.

Returning pilots said that as they shuttled back and forth over the city with loads of heavy bombs they could see the destruction below clearly enough "to make certain that considerable damage was done."

(A German communique admitted that some military damage was done at Hamburg but claimed it was "very limited.")

The air ministry reported other attacks on Antwerp, Dunkirk, and airports in German-held territory.

Reports from the African and eastern Mediterranean sectors told of week-end raids on the Italian Adriatic port of Brindisi and indicated that British bombs might have damaged the important railway which links Addis Ababa, Ethiopia, with the sea at Jibuti.

An admiralty communique yesterday said British light naval units had bombarded the big Somaliland port of Mogadiscio, hitting shipping and targets ashore and escaping damage from shells fired by Italian shore batteries.

Wartime Innings For Color-Blind

LONDON, Nov. 16—(CP).—Color-blindedness is a defect which disqualifies applicants for a variety of jobs such as engine-drivers and taxi drivers, but it may prove of use in war.

Color-blind airmen have proved they can detect camouflaged guns that normal eyes cannot see. It may be that a type of camouflage designed to deceive the color-blind will have to be used to hide guns, ammunition depots, hangars and other strategic material from them.

One person out of every 55 cannot tell red from green, and 1 in 50 confuses green and brown. Very rare are the totally color-blind to whom the world appears like a photograph in black and white. The pastel-shade color-blind, much more prevalent among men than women, cannot distinguish between the lighter shades of pink and yellow and blue and green.

Color-blindedness is sometimes called "Daltonism" because although it was known for centuries, the first to study the subject was John Dalton, the famous chemist, who in 1794 published on account of his own case and analyzed its peculiarities. For days he went about in his scarlet gown of a Doctor of Civil Laws at Oxford happily inconscious of its effect on those around him. And when asked what color gown he thought he was wearing, he pointed to an evergreen.

"Verboten" Road

This amusing sign at a sentry post in Dover strikes a humorous sign in German, reads, "Military warning. Danger to life, no through way." signed, "Heinrich von Pigow, Oberlieutenant.' The sign was probably posted as a warning to possible Nazi invaders. A British Tommy grins at the notice as he leans on the barrier.

1941 MOTOR VEHICLE PERMITS AND DRIVERS' LICENSES ARE NOW AVAILABLE

Secure Yours Early and Avoid the Usual Last Minute Rush

There has been no increase in the fees for permits and licenses. The fees charged in Ontario are still lower than in any other province of Canada or in the neighbouring states.

Table of comparison of fees in Ontario and two neighbouring provinces and states for three popular makes of passenger cars:

CAR	ONTARIO	QUEBEC	MANITOBA	NEW YORK	MICHIGAN
No. 1—4 cyl.	$ 2.00	$17.80	$14.00	$12.00	$ 8.40

No. 3—8 cyl.	10.00	21.30	16.50	14.50	10.15

Ontario's highway system is the largest in the Dominion, and for the very reasonable fees, indicated above, a great highway system comprising over 20,000 miles is maintained and made available to the motorists of Ontario and visitors from other parts of America.

The revenue collected from motorists by way of registration and license fees and the gasoline tax has made possible the construction and maintenance of this great system of highways.

For the convenience of motorists, permits and licenses are issued through the offices of 189 agents located throughout the Province.

DIED IN TORONTO

Joseph B. Hay of Toronto, former newspaper man, who collapsed and died while walking on Bloor street Saturday evening, may be remembered by some Peterborough people as one time proprietor of bowling alleys in Victoria Hall, in the Bradburn Block. He revived the pastime in Peterborough, but it went into another slump and Mr. Hay retired from his local venture.

BOYS ENJOY HIKE

Members of the Ashburnham Boys' Club from the Y.M.C.A. had a good time on Sunday, when they hiked to Lock 23 above Nassau and cooked dinner in the open. Each group built a fire, using one match for each blaze, and learned considerable in the way of woodcraft from the two leaders, Doug Grant and D'arcy Windsor. Games were indulged in and in the evening an impressive religious service was held around the campfire.

WOMAN IS INJURED

Mrs. Doherty, Darcy street, Cobourg, sustained a bruised right arm when the car in which she was riding, and driven by Donald May, Cobourg, met in collision with an automobile driven by Fred Goodfellow at Charlotte and Reid streets Sunday afternoon. May told police that he did not see the stop sign. He was driving south on Reid street and Goodfellow east on Charlotte street, when the collision occurred. Neither driver was hurt nor were other passengers. Both machines were damaged.

"MORTALS AND IMMORTALS"

"Mortals and Immortals" was the subject of the Lesson-Sermon for First Church of Christ Scientist of Peterborough on Sunday. The Golden Text was "He that loveth his life shall lose it; and he that hateth his life in this world shall keep it unto life eternal." John 12:25). Selections from the Bible included the following from Romans 8:16, 17, "The Spirit itself beareth witness with our spirit, that we are the children of God: And if children, then heirs; heirs of God, and joint-heirs with Christ.' Correlative citations from the Christian Science textbook, included the following: "The great spiritual fact must be brought out that man is, not shall be, perfect and immortal...The evidence of man's immortality will become more apparent, as material beliefs are given up and the immortal facts of being are admitted."

THE SHORTER ROAD

A motorist who left Peterborough a few days ago reported on his return that Highway 7A shortened the trip by 18 miles. There had been no snow on the outgoing trip and apart from a few rough sections the going was good. On the return trip there had been snow and a good deal of it had stayed on the roads in the bush section where there was no chance for it to be blown away. The road from Port Perry to Peterborough was reported as being "not so good" under such conditions.

Sir Percy Lake, Grand President Of Canadian Legion, Dies In B.C.

VICTORIA, Nov. 18—(CP)—Lieut. General Sir Percy Lake, 86, former Commander-in-Chief of the Mesopotamian Expeditionary Force in the first Great War and grand president of the Canadian Legion since 1934, died in hospital here Saturday night after a short illness.

He was Quartermaster-General in Canada from 1893 to 1898, Chief of the Canadian General Staff from 1905 to 1908, and Inspector-General from 1908 to 1910.

Sir Percy was credited in a large part with reorganization of the Canadian Militia on up-to-date lines at the close of the last century.

Sir Percy was stricken on the eve of the annual Remembrance Day ceremonies.

He had a brilliant military career in the British Army, with many years' service in India and Canada. He retired in 1923 and came to Victoria with Lady Lake, but he never forgot his fighting comrades. In 1926, at the age of 71, he became first president of the Canadian Legion of the British Empire Service League, welding all the various veterans' organizations into one strong organization.

He stepped down from the Canadian Legion presidency in 1928 to make way for General Sir Arthur Currie, but he was made a life member of the Dominion Council in appreciation of his work. Six years later he succeeded to the office of Grand President of the Legion.

Sir Percy is survived by Lady Lake, the former Hester Woodyear, who he married in 1891, and his brother, Sir Richard Lake, former Lieutenant-Governor of Saskatchewan, and four nephews and a niece, all residing here.

Sir Percy Lake, K.C.B., K.C.M.G., was born in Tenby, South Wales, the son of a distinguished military family. His grandfather served with Wellington at Waterloo as a Guards officer.

Sir Percy entered the British Army as a subaltern at the age of 18, joining the East Lancashire Regiment in India, where he served for six years, including the Afghan War.

He wa sappointed Quarter-Master-General in Canada in 1893. He was quarter-master-general at Army headquarters in London from 1899 to 1904 and during the South African War was in charge of mobilization in Britain.

In 1905, he was appointed chief of the general staff in Canada. In conjunction with Sir Frederick W. Borden he reformed the whole militia system to conform with the British plan, and initiated the Militia Council of Canada.

He became Inspector-General in 1908, a post he occupied for two year. His connection with the Canadian Militia ended late in 1910, and when he departed for an army post in India the Canadian Defence Department published a special order of appreciation for his work in the Dominion.

Sir Percy was divisional commander in India for two years, and in 1912 he succeeded his friend, Sir Douglas Haig, to the post of Chief of the General Staff in India.

In January, 1916, when the health of General Sir John Nixon failed, Sir Percy took over command of the Mesopotamian Expeditionary Force. He built up the force in preparation for a sustained offensive.

In August he was recalled to England, and his successor, Gen. Sir Stanley Maude, acknowledged that his subsequent triumph was largely due to General Lake's careful preparations.

M. E. Holt, Manager

Kingston Chosen By C-I-L For New Factory

By telephone Saturday night and a letter this morning, Mayor Hamilton was informed by R. S. Beck of the Nylon Department of Canadian Industries Limited that its projected factory would be built in Kingston.

The news was not surprising to Mayor Hamilton and Alderman Bradburn, chairman of the Manufacturers Committee, but it was received with a remaining shade of disappointment although intimations during the last month or two were pointing to Kingston as the Ontario city that was likely to get this highly desirable industrial plant.

Mr. Beck's letter from Montreal this morning was as follows:

Dear Mr. Mayor:

As explained in our telephone conversation of this evening (Saturday), I wished to advise you before you learn through the press that the management of our company has decided to locate the new Nylon plant at Kingston.

We should like to thank you, however, for your kind co-operation in the work which we carried out in and around Peterborough. You were quite closely associated with this work and, therefore, there is hardly any need for me to repeat that finding a continuous supply of cold water proved to be the controlling factor in the selection of a site. Unfortunately the test wells drilled at Peterborough did not produce the water we had expected and proved to be quite inadequate to meet our needs. Since that time we have considered mechanical refrigeration, as suggested in your letter of October 12 to Mr. G. W. Huggett, copy of which was sent to me by Mr. H. I. Bradburn. This means of obtaining our cooling requirements, however, has proved to be a distinct disadvantage as compared with naturally occurring cold water.

You may be interested in knowing that the particular requirements for this plant were somewhat unique and not necessarily common to all C.I.L. plants, and I can assure you that full consideration will be given Peterborough for any plant we may erect in the future."

Took Land Option

Peterborough was one of the first cities visited by Mr. Beck and engineers of Canadian Industries Limited. They took an option on two suburban farm properties, one of them the late John Harper farm west of May's school and the C.P.R. on No. 7 highway cut off. The company engaged its own pumping crew, and when they abandoned the quest for water in the conviction that the local natural supply was insufficient for their needs, the Manufacturers Committee of the council decided to continue the exploration. They engaged another company of drillers and continued the tests over a rather wide area of that section of North Monaghan.

In that work and investment in the possibility of getting a C-I-L unit, the city had the assistance of North Monaghan township council, and active co-operation of Reeve M. H. Johnston, Deputy-reeve A. W. Archibald and Bruce Johnston, township clerk.

Both councils in fact endorsed the joint effort to find water in volume if even several springs combined would provide sufficient flow. Prolonged drilling was abortive, and the company has now decided to run a pipe line out into the lake at Kingston.

"I know that Mr. Beck wanted to come to Peterborough if the quantity of water they required could be obtained here," Mayor Hamilton said. "We did everything we could to locate water, and North Monaghan supported us in every way. This unit of the C-I-L is going to be a splendid industry and will be a great asset to Kingston. I appreciate the courtesy of Mr. Beck in telephoning us Saturday night, and I certainly feel that Peterborough will get strong consideration if the company decides to build any other plant in this province."

MONTREAL, Nov. 18 (CP)—Canadian Industries Limited announced today a site near Kingston, Ont., has been chosen for the construction of a $1,500,000 plant which will manufacture nylon, synthetic textile fibre.

The 100-acre site, two miles west of Kingston city limits and fronting Lake Ontario, was selected after surveys had been made in a number of eastern Canadian areas.

The announcement said construction will start immediately, with production expected in about a year.

To Distribute Wool From Auburn Plant

The vacant factory building owned by the Dominion Woollens and Worsted Limited at their Auburn property has been leased for two years by a company which is said to be sponsored by the Dominion government and known as Melbourne Merchandizing Limited.

The building will be used as a distributing centre for wool, and its occupancy begins on December 1.

Alderman Bradburn mentioned this prosect several weeks ago, and it was confirmed this morning by Mayor Hamilton. They had been hoping that the building might have appealed to some manufacturing company and would have brought employment of labor.

$1,800 In Prizes To Stop Hitler

Wednesday night is "Smash Hitler" night in Peterborough. At each of the three theatres prizes will be given out to the amount of $300 for each show. Part of this prize money will be used up in giving each patron one war savings stamp, while the remainder will be given in the form of bonds.

The Business Men's Association is sponsoring the project. It is a non-profit venture on the part of the merchants of the city, and the impulse is entirely one of patriotism. It is their object to sell in the neighborhood of 4,500 tickets, which, when the war savings stamp given is taken into consideration, will cost each patron only 25 cents.

Tickets are on sale at most retail merchant stores, and at each of the three theatres. The prizes will be the same, and of the same amount at each of the theatres, and when totalled will be more than $2,000.00 including the stamps. Each theatre will have programs including two shows, and equal prizes will be drawn for at each of them.

Deer Hunters Are Returning

Apsley district hunters report fine deer hunting and the section north and east of Stoney Lake also lived up to the reputation estimated in former years. In the Ketchecum district, however, hunting was poor according to all reports reaching this office so far. Ketchecum Hunt Club, 14 strong, returned on Saturday and only a few deer fell to their lot.

Tom Beatty, who was hunting with Bill Crowe, Frank Hardin and Wes Dunsford from Warsaw at Crowe's Landing, bagged three deer and are going in again for the last day's hunt on Tuesday.

Most of the clubs have not reported as yet. Everett Nicholls is with one club that has not come back yet, and two other groups still out include Fred Jopling and Cliff Hartmann.

The Johnson Motors Club hunted at Island Lake in the Parry Sound district and had great luck. The group included Hugh Campbell, Clarence Neal, Sid Black of this city, and the following from Toronto: Ralph Broad, Stewart Holland, Vern Darling, R. M. Thomas and James McConnell. They had four guides and brought out eight deer, not counting one that was eaten at camp. On the second day of the hunt Sid Black killed a black bear weighing just over the hundred-pound mark.

Cheese Factories Closed For Year

The cheese factories of Peterborough county have locked their doors for the winter, until the grass is green again and cattle are turned out into the pasture fields.

The producing season wound up last week all the way from Trent Bridge to Dunsford in Victoria county, but W. J. Moore reports that there are some factories still operating in Northumberland, the new one at Port Perry is still taking in milk, and Silverwood's in Peterborough will probably run all winter.

The price of cheese for British export has held up steadily all summer, and closes the local producing year at the peak for 1940.

GIRLS MISSING

Early this morning the local police department was notified that three North Monaghan girls, Letitia Martin, Frank street, 15 years old, and Dorothy Salvey, 12, and Viola Booth, 10, High street had been missing from their homes since 4:30 o'clock Sunday afternoon. When the children had not returned home at an early hour today the father of one of them called police.

Four Boys Held For Damaging Vacant House

CAMPBELLFORD, Nov. 18. — (ENS).— Chief Constable George Hardie arrested three juveniles and a youth this morning to solve a series of break-ins that have taken place in the town during the past month.

The break-ins reached a climax Sunday night when the four are alleged to have entered a vacant house on Portage street, owned by T. J. Horkins, and wrecked the place. Twenty windows upstairs and on the ground floor were smashed, light fixtures were torn out and the balustrade of the staircase ripped away. A neighbor heard the tinkle of breaking glass and went outside in time to see the boys running away. She recognized one, and notified the police and the case was soon completed.

The four boys, three of whom are under sixteen are now in the Campbellford jail.

The distressing part of the recent vandalism is that a tenant was to have moved into the house to-day.

The series of crimes started about three weeks ago when the weigh scale house owned by W. N. Fowlds, the Horseman soft drink warehouse, W. J. Gibson's confectionery and A. J. Meyers' cheese warehouse were all entered and small amounts of merchandise stolen. At the cheese warehouse a large cheese was broken into and is now a total loss.

Police had the boys under surveillance on suspicion but the break-ins broke out again over the week-end when Dunk's grocery store, McArthur's grocery store and Anderson's dairy were all entered and some articles stolen.

The finale came late Sunday evening when the onslaught on the Horkins residence started with the subsequent arrest of the four boys.

Ten-Day Term On Drunk Count

Ten days in jail was the sentence imposed by Magistrate O. A. Langley, K.C., in police court this morning after Horace Dickson, Keene, had pleaded guilty to having been drunk in charge of a car.

Magistrate Langley also forbade Dickson to drive anywhere in Canada for the period of one month. The accused told the court that he did not posess a driver's license. The car he had been in was the property of a friend.

Dickson was arrested on Bethune street late Sunday night after Sergt. John Thompson and Constable Naples found him asleep in an automobile.

"There was no one hurt and no accident," Chief Constable Newhall explained after Dickson had pleaded guilty. "The car was not in motion when the officers got there."

Tourist Dinner Set For Tuesday

Men about town are reminded of the dinner, Kawartha pictures and general get-together to talk over tourist business-building at the Empress Tuesday evening. It will cost you seventy-five cents, but you can spread that over the eats, color movies and helping the council put on a show for the visiting resort owners, and handing out greetings to D. J. Taylor, deputy-minister of Fish and Game, Leo Dolan, director of the tourist publicity bureau for Canada and J. Douglas Oliver, Toronto, director of the tourist bureau of the Ontario Government.

Warden McColl and the other members of the county council have been invited, and if the local crowd turns out as it should there is bound to be a full house. One reason for putting on the nose-bag with the sports gang is to see Fred Roy's picture (in color) of Clare Althouse catching and landing a twenty-eight pound muskie in Lake Katachawanooka, between Lakefield and Young's Point. You really ought to see this, and may be it might even be better if it were slow-motioned. But, any way, at the risk of being sued for libel, if you want to see a classic specimen of "how not to play a big muskie" you really should see this Althouse unrehearsed, unstaged moment that comes once in a life time and what happened.

A New Grand Gun

LONDON, Nov. 18 (CP Cable)—British artillery, according to the Daily Express, has been provided with a newly devised 25-pounder field gun which, the paper's military correspondent said, makes the famous French 75s "Pipsqueaks" compared to "this grand weapon." The correspondent added that the gun is the "best compromise between a heavy and a light gun" and fires a 25-pound high explosive shell.

Rambling Reporters

THE SPICE OF LIFE

Attempting to find the most varied casualty list in the forests near Peterborough has been easy. Herb Routley has returned from his hunting grounds on the shores of Hay Lake, north of Maynooth, and his victims range in size in a manner that is admirable.

With pride in his voice, Herb was heard telling friends this morning, that his party had bagged four deer, one porcupine, and four good sized mice.—J. W. H.

WANTS ANTI-AIRCRAFT GUN

Tom Beatty, local garage man, has a lot of sympathy for those anti-aircraft gunners in England who try to knock Heinkel bombers out of the sky...that is since he returned from the deer hunt.

Tom was hunting with three men from Warsaw, Bill Crowe, Frank Hardin and Wes Dunford, and on a nice day last week he was waiting on a runway. It was pretty quiet, so Tom sat down against a tree and snoozed. Suddenly Frank Hardin who was near, sighted a deer and fired. The shot awakened Tom, just in time for him to see a big buck zoom through the air before his very eyes. Apparently the deer just saw Tom as he awoke, and the bewildered hunter let go, but as he said, how can one hit a deer that has wings. He is returning on Tuesday and wishes he could borrow an anti-aircraft gun on a swivel.—McG.

With The Engineers

Arthur Lasenby, former employee of the C.G.E. Company is now on active service with the 3rd Field Park Company Royal Canadian Engineers. He is the son of Mr. and Mrs. C. L. Lasenby, 481 Patterson street, Peterborough.

Burma Road Is Rotary Subject

Dr. Robert McClure, a Canadian who was for many years a resident of China and who was the leader of the International Red Cross in that country was the speaker at the regular luncheon of the Peterborough Rotary Club, presided over by President T. J. Carley today.

Dr. McClure whose knowledge of conditions in the Far East is extensive gave the Rotarians a most informative address upon the subject of "The Burma Road," which he said had been built as an alternative trade route into China.

The speaker who was introduced by Rev. Dr. George Easton included in his address a review of the political repercussions that followed the closing the road by Britain earlier in the year.

Rotarian R. F. Downey expressed the thanks of Rotarians to the speaker. Dr. McClure had given an address to the members of the Ontario provincial police in Toronto earlier today and made a hurried trip to Peterborough in order to speak to Rotary.

Dr. D. W. Clark was introduced to the meeting as a baby member of the Peterborough Rotary Club.

Ten Specialists Join Engineers

The quest for more recruits for the 3rd Field Park Company, R.C.E. ended satisfactorily. Captain H. S. Walker expressed pleasure at the result of his latest trip to Peterborough, and the men who have enlisted with him will leave shortly for the camp near Truro, Nova Scotia.

Credit was given by Capt. Walker to Lt.-Col. F. H. Bradburn, M.C., for the splendid response to the call by the Engineers, and owing to Col. Bradburn's knowledge of tradesmen, their whereabouts, and their inclinations, as well as their comparative ability, the 3rd Field Park Coy. finds itself richer to the extent of ten specialists. Difficulty was evidenced only in the securing a saddle maker. Peterborough has been unable, to date, to supply one. "There are several in Peterborough, and they're good ones, too," Capt. Walker said, "but, unfortunately they are veterans of the Great War, and are not able to take the job."

Col. Bradburn said that the recruiting for the S. D. and G. Highlanders has been a simple task, for many men in Peterborough seem anxious to join their friends now in Ottawa.

Failing To Support Wife, Brings Term

After he had pleaded guilty to the charge and his wife had told the court that the accused had not given her any money for nearly a month, Robert Sloan was sentenced by Magistrate O. A. Langley, K.C., to a month in jail for failing to support his wife and small child.

Mrs. Sloan testified that about a month ago Sloan had brought her and her child from Norwood and left them at the home of her mother in North Monaghan. Her mother, she said, was not able to take care of them. Sloan had not come near her since that time and had contributed nothing to her support.

Remarking that the accused would not likely be able to pay a fine Magistrate Langley imposed a sentence of one month on Sloan.

Back In The Dumps

CHICAGO, Nov. 18—(APP).—Cab Driver Sam Abrams felt pretty good. He was back on the job after five days' illness and a friend had just paid a $5 debt of long standing. And then — two men hailed his cab, shoved guns in his ribs and robbed him of $12, including the five-spot. They even fished around in the gutter to retrieve a quarter which Abrams had dropped. Then they drove off in the cab.

Do Not Measure Greatness By Achievement

Speaking on the subject of "Greatness" last night at Knox United church, whose congregation was celebrating its thirtieth anniversary on Sunday, Rev. H. W. Cliff, M.A., B.D., of Cooke's church, Kingston, quoted two texts of striking implication, one from the 145th Psalm, "Great is the Lord, and greatly to be praised; and His greatness is unsearchable," and the other a series of verses from the 18th chapter of St. Matthew, including: "Unless ye become as little children, ye shall not enter into the kingdom of heaven."

Greatness was essentially a quality and emanation of the spirit, Rev. Mr. Cliff said, and was not to be thought of only in the terms of achievement. To bear life's burdens and tasks valiantly and in steadfastness and reliance and in unity with the spirit of God, that was in itself to be truly great. Spiritual greatness can be expressed by ordinary men and women in obscure places going about their daily affairs, commonplace affairs they might be, in fidelity to their trust and responsibilities. Jesus chose as His apostles men who were obscure in their day, but in them he saw their potential spirit of greatness. And when He gave Himself in the fullness of His divinity to rescue us and make us heirs to the kingdom, He chose a cross that thereon the sublimest sacrifice of all times might be made as a manifestation of divine greatness.

Greatness manifested itself in the understanding spirit, in the kind and sympathetic heart, and in the seemingly simple things of life. Those men and women who contemplated the fact of their human existence on this planet, that they are here to reproduce themselves to work and build homes and make them sweet abiding places for themselves and their families, in duty to their country, their King and to God, all this simple but tremendous understanding make life in turn great. Of such persons are those who have a deep sympathy with their fellow men, with their hopes and fears and achievements, and who by their Christian lives leave a deep impression on the lives of others, thereby attaining true greatness themselves, although their names may not be enscrolled in the records of their nation.

To know how to accept self-denial and suffering was another element of that greatness which Rev. Mr. Cliff, who is president of the Bay of Quinte Conference, made the theme of his message. If we are truly Christian we can never escape from self sacrifice and self denial, because Jesus set that example by sacrificing Himself for mankind. In Great Britain at the present time men and women were resolutely and cheerily giving themselves in self sacrifice to maintain all those things which had been passed down to them by their forefathers.

From the elevation of its thirtieth anniversary of Knox church, Rev. Mr. Cliff said, reminsful of its achievements and of the simple greatness that had marked the lives of many of those who had passed on to their reward, would set a new endeavor that life in this community may be more marked by the Christian spirit for the furtherance of the kingdom of God as they held communion with the greatness that is in nature, in the best literature, in the great personalities of every age and race, in the crucial events in Britain and in the greatness of the Bible from which all Christians take their inspiration.

Rev. William MacDonald, a former minister of Knox church, assisted in the service, and the music included special anthems by the choir, and solos by Mrs. Dorothy Sager Goldie. Rev. Mr. MacDonald announced the news of the death of John Long on Sunday, "who had been full of years and abundant labors, and had been a consistent and regular member of this church. We deeply regret his passing, but such is the will of God."

Saves Only $35

CHICAGO, Nov. 18—(AP).—B. C. Lehman, a tailor, took a $35 tuck in the loot which three robbers obtained from his shop. He had his hand on a $45 roll of bills in his pocket when the men entered the shop, ordered him to face the wall. While complying, he took $35 off the roll and tucked it down his waistband. The robbers fled with the other $10, plus $150 from the cash register.

Cotton—Prust

TWEED, Nov. 18.—(ENS)—Audrey Eileene, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. W. E. Prust, Tweed, was united in marriage to Raymond Gilbert Cotton, son of Mr. and Mrs. G. H. Cotton of Sulphide on Saturday morning at eleven o'clock. The ceremony was performed by Rev. H. L. Morrison, B.A., pastor of Tweed United Church, at the home of the bride's parents, and in the presence of members of the families of the young couple.

The wedding ceremony was held in the living room which was attractaively decorated with bronze and yellow chrysanthemums, while the dining room in which the wedding breakfast was served was decorated with yellow and white chrysanthemums.

The bride, who was unattended, was given in marriage by her father. She was gowned in a sheer crepe afternoon dress in the smart como rose shade, with a corsage of white gardenias and wearing an heirloom locket. Mrs. Prust, mother of the bride, wore blue crepe with corsage of pink roses. Mrs. Cotton, mother of the groom, wore soldier blue crepe and corsage of yellow roses.

Following the wedding breakfast the young couple left on a short wedding trip to Hamilton, Toronto and other Western Ontario points. The bride's travelling outfit was an imported English wool dressmaker suit in the new Bordeaux wine shade, with Hudson seal hat, coat and muff, black suede shoes and gloves. She wore a string of beautifully matched pearls, the groom's gift.

On their return, Mr. and Mrs. Cotton will reside in Sulphide, where the groom is a member of the office staff of the Nichols Chemical Company.

Covered-Up Mode

By PRUNELLA WOOD

THOSE chilly girls who shiver in the wintry winds will welcome this season's covered-up evening fashions, which manage to look casual and important all at the same time.

For dinner, the theatre, night clubs and all but the most glitteringly formal occasions you may safely wear sleeves this year. For dinners at home the shops are showing entrancing things that will make you look your glamorous best.

Lines are simple and flowing, colors are daring and fabrics are luxurious. You may, for instance, choose a severe shirt-waist style, and have it made up in rich velvet or lame to add excitement to your evenings.

You may have a high neck and long sleeves, and yet manage to look dressed for comewhat-may, whether it be dining, dancing, or applauding the newest star of a hit show on Broadway.

Jewelled buttons and belt buckles also add importance to current covered-up fashions and you may go the limit in costume jewelry.

With the rest of the world spending the winter in air-raid shelters, America is in the midst of one of its most brilliant seasons in years, the color and gaiety of the after-dark scene heightened by a feeling of the imminence of disaster.

So dine, dance and be merry — and dress to fit the part.

PRIMROSE PATH IS THORNY FOR MAN AS WELL AS WOMAN

At the End There Is Disaster for Both and They Have to Pay Penalty for Illicit Love.

Dear Miss Dix—I am the secretary and assistant to a very prosperous doctor and have been for a number of years. He has been very wonderful to me in the past, giving me a handsome salary and taking me everywhere he went. Before the war we went to Europe. Last year to Brazil. Now he has announced that he is going off alone and I will not stand for it. I have told him that I am going with him and we have had some stormy scenes, and in spite of this he is preparing to go alone. He has recently bought a plane, without my approval, and spends two or three days a week getting his flying hours when he should be in his office practicing medicine. I used to play golf with him, but now he will not even go to the course, so as I will not leave him I do not get to play. I have always walked in his private office, no matter who the patient was, but now he resents it and asks me to please knock before entering. This makes me suspicious of him and makes me feel that he is getting tired of me. And you know that any sane, sensible woman who has given the best years of her life to a man is not going to stand by and have some woman make a fool of him through flattering him. He doesn't know it, but I have saved him several times from the claws of women.

I used to be beautiful and he did not think of anyone else. What would you advise me to do to get this irresponsible, crazy man to be like he used to be, confiding and trusting? I simply will not step out of the picture for another woman, no matter what I have to do, and I can do plenty, and I will. However, I would rather it did not come to an issue if it can be handled any other way. WORRIED.

ANSWER—I commend this letter to the careful perusal of all men who are under the delusion that free love is free, that only wives are tyrants, and that when they get tired of their love nests all they will have to do will be spread their wings and fly away. A mistress can have a man far more under her thumb than a wife ever can, and it is a thousand times easier to get a divorce from a wife than it is to get rid of a Lady Love.

If you have tears to shed, bedew this poor doctor with them. For what he has suffered from the henpecking of this strong and dominant woman who has managed him and his affairs through all these years; who has handled his money and his business and his practice; who has told him where he got on and where he got off; who has gone with him wherever he went; who has not even allowed him the privacy of seeing his patients alone, nor as much liberty as a dog on a leash, is beyond all telling.

They say that the woman who takes the primrose path pays and pays and pays, but the man also has to pay. And often when he has settled his score he is destitute of everything that makes life worth living.

And now the doctor wants to be free. The woman has lost her beauty. He chafes under her dictatorship. Perhaps there is another woman, younger and fairer. However it is, he is tired of her. But he has no more chance of escaping her than a convict on Devils Island has of getting free. "Hell hath no fury like a woman scorned." He will know all about that when he tries to break the bonds with which she has fettered him.

The woman knows her power. She knows that she can keep him with her threat to ruin his practice and smear his name by dragging their sordid romance into court, but one wonders why she wants to keep his body when his soul and heart have gone from her?

What happiness can she promise herself in forcing her companionship on one who hates and loathes her? She has even less to gain in such a situation than the discarded wife who has, at least, her husband's name and social position as a consolation prize.

As for thinking that she can turn the man who is tired of her and trying to free himself of her, back into the ardent, trusting, confiding lover, that is a miracle no woman can work. When a liaison is ended, everything is over.

Dear Dorothy Dix—I am a young wife and my husband and I are about to move to his old home town where he has been sent by his firm. I am willing to go wherever his work takes him, but this raises the problem of what we should do about his father who is a widower and lives in the old home. Shall we ask him to live with us? He is a darling and financially independent, but much as I like him I so long for us to be alone.

The first two years of our marriage we lived with my parents and as kind as they were we both knew that we would have been so much happier if we had been by ourselves. Do you think it will hurt my husband's father if we did not ask him to share our home? He is very sensitive. Would people in this small town consider it a lapse of duty on my husband's part? I would not subject him to this for the world. The father is a strong, healthy man in his middle 50s. LINDA.

ANSWER—Probably your husband's father would be extremely grateful to you and call down blessings on your head if you would leave him alone to stay where he is and live his own life, free and untrammeled by having to conform to the rules and regulations of your house.

Children always think they are conferring a great favor on their parents when they ask them to live with them, and that the old people should be perfectly happy just siting around watching them, and that they should be grateful for being saved from being lonely.

But that is not the way the thing works out in real life. No people are so lonely as old people who have nobody of their own age to talk to; nobody so bored as old people who have nothing to do; nobody so uncomfortable as old people who haven't the liberty in their children's houses of even having the things they like to eat cooked the way they like them, or to ask a friend to dinner, or to have their old things about them. They would be a thousand times happier if their children would let them stay in their old environment and free to follow their own tastes.

My advice to you is to write your father-in-law before you go to the town where he lives and tell him that if he wishes to live with you you would be glad to have him, but that you feel that he may want to keep his own home and just come and visit you whenever he feels like it.

He may feel that he has to go and live with you because it will hurt your feelings if he doesn't, just as you feel that you will offend him if you don't ask him to live with you.

Anyway, both of you will be a thousand times happier apart, and better friends, if you don't try to live together. DOROTHY DIX.

Dean of Arts is Speaker At Queen's Alumni Dinner

College songs and faculty yells enlivened the scene as seventy Queen's Alumni from Peterborough and outlying districts gathered for their annual re-union dinner in the Recreation Room of the Y.W.C.A. on Friday evening. Miss Alexandria Howson, the president, was in the chair. Guests included the speaker of the evening, Professor John Mathieson, Dean of Arts at Queen's University, and Mr. and Mrs. Ross Winters of the Queen's Extension Department, Kingston.

Dr. C. M. Scott of Peterborough, in his introduction referred to Professor Mathieson's long service to students as a lecturer in Mathematics, Science and Arts classes, as a beloved Sunday School teacher, and latterly as Dean of the Arts Faculty. In this capacity, the former Professor was looked upon by all as a friend depended upon for wise counsel.

The Dean spoke of changes in university life, of efforts being made to carry on the traditions of its early founders and at the same time to adjust the curriculum to the needs of present day students. Of the latter there are 9,000 living graduates. Actual winter attendance is about 1,900, of which 600 are in engineering alone. Attendance in medicine is still limited by university regulations. The influence of war is felt most in the Arts registration, which always fluctuates with the industrial situation. Whereas the University, first founded as a Presbyterian College, once required less than half a million for yearly maintenance, it now spends $800,000.

Curriculum changes to meet demand of the times are in line with those of other universities in condensing the two years of C.O.T.C. training into one for lieutenant's standing. In addition, 1,300 men students over 18 come under compulsory military training system. Women students are enrolled in the St. John Ambulance Corps, and in the motor mechanics courses at the Technical School.

Academically, students receive the advantage made possible by a smaller university in their recently innovated system of November tests, which is the means of early self-checking of students before they come up against the most serious end-of-term examination. This system has brought about an earlier and more fruitful application to study. Another development is the series' classes offered by competent graduates to extra-mural students in the Fort William and Port Arthur districts. The Industrial Relations' Course and Conference held in the summer with subsequent term courses by the Economics Department, is another development, also the Canadian-American Relations' Course, which resulted from alternate yearly conferences held alternately by St. Lawrence and Queen's Universities.

Queen's centenary celebration is to be held in the autumn of '41. Its present Chancellor is Hon. Charles Dunning, who succeeded the late James Richardson.

Miss Helen McGregor of the Collegiate Institute, in her vote of thanks to the speaker, expressed the feelings of all graduates who, in their college years, had come into contact with the Dean. She spoke of the influence exerted by Queen's leaders such as Professor Mathieson. Their mellow and kindly personalities have matured and deepened with the years spent in the glow from the hearth of the Mother University, which added to its theological beginning the study of the great humanities. "What a difference in the world to-day if these subjects had been studied with equal care by ruthless leaders in Europe," she said.

Dinner arrangements were in charge of Miss Verna Burgess and Miss Amelia Thompson., Mrs. R. L. Hale, accompanied by Mrs. H. Mitchell, contributed two delightful songs. Chaplain V. E. R. Zufelt asked the blessing. Mrs. Leo Copp, vice-president of the Summer School Association, conducted the games, and Mr. Jack Telford played for dancing which followed the dinner.

The slate of officers nominated for 1941 is as follows: Honorary president, Miss Alexandra Howson; president, Dr. J. A. Bannister; vice-presidents, Dr. C. M. Scott, Miss Verna Burgess; treasurer, Mr. V. R. Henry; secretary, Mrs. R. G. Cornell; associate secretary for membership, Miss Fern Rahmel; Chaplain, Rev. V. E. R. Zufelt; executive committee, Mrs. E. C. Dolman, Mr. Hubert Sills, Mr. Donald Craighead (Norwood), Mr. Moon (Omemee), Miss Helen McGregor, Q.M.S. Gordon Denike.

Tested Recipes

The following recipe is one of those affairs that the hostess can serve with much elegance when she has guests—and a nice silver pudding dish to serve it from.

Puffy Cherry Cobbler

The batter part is spongy and quite different. Cherries may be replaced with canned plums (or fresh Lombards when they are in season.)

Empty contents of 1 16-oz. can of cherries into a saucepan, add ¾ cup sugar, 3 tablespoons quick-cooking tapioca and 2 tablespoons butter. Stir until well mixed and cook five minutes. Pour into medium-sized pudding dish. Beat the yolks of 2 eggs until light and thick and lemon colored. Add 6 tablespoons sugar, 1 tablespoon at a time, beating after each addition until no sugar granules are visible. Fold in ¼ cup sifted cake flour with a light motion. Add ¼ teaspoon salt to the egg whites and beat until foamy. Add ¼ teaspoon cream of tartar at this point and beat until stiff, but not dry. Fold lightly into the batter. Pour over the cherries and bake at 350 deg. Fahr, for 30 minutes or until the sponge topping springs back light from the touch. Serve warm as possible with heavy cream.

Do You Know?

To keep waffles or pancakes hot after frying, heat a covered baking dish and put the cakes into it as they are taken from the griddle.

I'll do anything. Anything!"

"Well, of course, I'm no doctor. We thought maybe seeing you might—"

"Take me to him! This minute. What are we waiting for? Take me to him! I'll make him live. He can't die, not now! Not until I have a chance to make up to him. He can't die!"

But the sight of her father's face against the hospital pillow, and the sound of his labored breathing, made her frantic resolution wane as swiftly as it had been born. He was thin, so terribly thin. His hair had whitened since she had seen him, and he looked old and broken.

"Daddy!" She thought she was crying his name aloud, but the word came from her lips in a shocked whisper. "Daddy, it's Lona!" Humbly she went down on her knees beside the narrow bed.

He looked up at her with staring eyes, uncomprehending.

"Lona," he brought out, in a hoarse, changed voice. "Lona! That's my girl. You mustn't tell her! Promise me you won't tell her. She mustn't—know . . ."

"Daddy! It's Lona. I'm here! I've come—"

"She mustn't know. . . . Lona mustn't know . . ."

"Daddy, please—" she began her voice raising. But the prison doctor caught her eye and motioned to her with a warning hand.

Don't you know me, Daddy? She braced herself and tried to make him understand. "I'm Lona! I've come to help you get well—"

"I don't want to get well. She'll be better off if I'm gone. Lona'll be better off without me. . . . Do you know my girl? Do you know Lona? He tried to raise his tortured body on a thin arm and peer at her.

"Daddy! Oh, Daddy!" A sob forced itself through her lips despite her efforts to be calm.

"You won't tell her I'm sick, will you?" the hoarse voice begged. "You won't tell her? I don't want her to know. Lona mustn't know. She's my girl, Lona is. My little baby girl . . ." The voice trailed off into a fit of coughing that racked the wasted frame and caused the doctor to spring forward. Warningly he nodded his head toward the door, and Lona felt the hand of a prison nurse at her elbow, hurrying her outside, pushing her away.

Unresisting, she went, trying to gather together her scattered thoughts. It was hard to believe she was seeing him at last. That pitiful figure was Daddy, her father. When she had known him, he had been straight and upright, with clear eyes. What had they done to him here in this horrible place? She sobbed, suddenly, as the nurse pushed a chair her way and helped her to seat herself out in the hospital corridor.

"You mustn't take it so hard." The nurse tried to comfort her. "He's delirious, you know."

"Will he—do you think he'll know me before—there's something I've got to tell him."

"We'll call you the moment he's lucid," the nurse promised. "There is nothing to do but wait."

The Stars Say

By GENEVIEVE KEMBLE

For Tuesday, November 19.

A particularly lively and interesting day, with things taking a sudden and intriguing turn, which may upset all previous plans and tactics, judging by the shrewd and subtle aspects of the planets. All relating to promotional enterprises, new propositions, publicity, writings, renewal of contracts and agreements are to the fore and calling for much discretion, strategy, and keen insight in order to reap the greatest benefits. Be amenable to change should it appear advisable. There may be social reaction rather disappointing, irritating.

Those whose birthday it is may look for a very lively and eventful year, with much commotion and surprise, perhaps intrigue and undercover activities. New matters, innovations, unusual adventures, in which writings, contracts, advertising and promotion have public appeal and deep significance, which call for far vision, cleverness and subtlet as well as strategy in order to rise to the ambitious climax aimed at. Sudden or surprising reactions may arise in the personal, social or even affectional relations unless circumspect and rational point of view be maintained. Change and travel are probable.

A child born on this day should be exceedingly clever, resourceful, original and shrewd. It will be equipped for much popularity in any of the professions.

J. McCloskey Passes

LOUISVILLE, Ky., Nov. 18.—(AP)—John McCloskey, 78, who probably organized more professional leagues than any other man during his sixty active years in baseball, died here Sunday.

Physicians said his death was caused by a fall at his home last Monday.

In addition to his promotion work, which included fathering the Texas League, "Honest John," as he was known in baseball circles, had been a player, scout, manager and executive, and was credited with discovering some of the game's brightest stars. He managed forty-seven teams during his career. Among the players he uncovered were Ed Konecthy, Jim Collins, Fred Clarke, Honus Wagner, Joe Tinker and Amos Strunk.

Friends said McCloskey had a penchant for choosing a weak club to manage or promote, and often the venture cost him personal funds.

May Manage Bisons

BUFFALO, N.Y., Nov. 18.—(AP)—The Buffalo Evening News says Albert Lindner Vincent, 1940 manager of the Beaumont, Texas, team in the Texas League, "may be the next manager" of the Buffalo Bisons in the International Baseball League.

The News says that Vincent has "behind him the approval and support of the Detroit Tigers, with whom the Bisons have been allied for the 1941 season."

Don Beach, secretary of the Buffalo Club, said Vincent is "only one of a dozen applicants" for the job vacated by Steve O'Neill, named Detroit coach.

Among others being considered, Beach added, are Hazen (Kiki) Cuyler, former Pittsburg outfielder, who managed Chattanooga, Tenn., in the Southern Association this season, and Bert Neihoff who managed Jersey City in the International League.

Stunning Slip Covers Made in Simple Steps

Pin and Fit Fabric to Chair

Now you see how you can make, yourself, the smart slip covers shown in decorators' shops—and so transfer your weariest chair into a raving beauty.

Your chair is your pattern. You just fit your fabric to each part, pinning and cutting as you go.

And what lovely colorful fabrics you can get these days. For a formal upholstery-style cover, choose a heavy cotton of a rich plum or beige patterned in damask effect. Charmingly informal is flowered linen or cretonne.

To start your cover, smooth fabric over inside-back and seat, making a 4-inch tuck-in between them to relieve strain.

Anchor fabric to upholstery with pins every three inches, then cut 1½ inches outside pins for seams. In the same way fit arms, sides, back, front and cushion.

Now carefully pin pieces together, remove from chair, baste and try to insure a really trim fit. Then the final stitching.

Send 15c in coins or stamps for your copy of HOW TO MAKE SLIP COVERS to The Examiner, Home Service, Peterborough. Be sure to write plainly your NAME, ADDRESS and the NAME of booklet.

COMBINING STRATAGEMS

PERHAPS the most interesting lead-throwing end-plays of all are those which combine some two, or all, of the three principal types. The most frequent combination is that which gives the defender, after he is put in the lead, an option between leading a suit which will furnish a ruff in one hand while getting a discard in the other, and leading another suit in which he must pitch up to a tenace. Sometimes the third style is involved—that in which the defender must lead to an established card or cards of a suit, in dummy or declarer's hand, for which the declarer has no entries of his own.

	♠ 10 9 ♥ None ♦ 7 4 ♣ 5
♠ J 8 ♥ 8 ♦ K J ♣ None	N. W. E. S.	♠ 7 4 ♥ J 5 ♦ 8 ♣ None
	♠ 5 ♥ None ♦ A Q ♣ J 10

Here is a situation in which South, the declarer at a club contract, is apparently able to take only three of the last five tricks, the lead being in the dummy. If he tries the elementary play of the diamond finesse, West can win it and then cash his spade J, thus taking two tricks. But the declarer can manage to get four of the last five tricks by leading a spade and thus putting West in the lead.

What can West do? He has a choice of three different suits to lead, but any one of the three will present a trick to the declarer. If he leads a spade, it is right into the high 9, which will enable the declarer to discard the diamond Q. If West leads his heart, the declarer can ruff in the dummy and discard his diamond Q on the trick. If poor West picks the third alternative, a diamond, he has to lead right into the tenace, making both of South's diamonds good.

This, of course, illustrates a combination of all three general styles of lead-throwing end-play combined in one deal, but it also shows how any two of them might be combined.

The more important factor, after learning such plays, is to make careful deductions from the bidding and the fall of the cards, to figure out therefrom the kind of finishing position which should be constructed, and then proceed with eliminating the hands of your own side and the defense down to that position, so that the play will work. Sometimes this can be done in a positive way, the declarer knowing the play will work, and sometimes he can only hope the outstanding cards lie correctly, as his only chance to win.

Farm Produce Prices Remain Steady

Prices of farm produce Saturday were fairly steady on the local market, with the headlining eggs of recent weeks a shade under their recent peaks. Turkeys were scarce, and not one was seen by the Examiner, indicating that the American Thanksgiving Day, next Thursday, does not reach into Peterborough flocks.

The spread in the price of eggs, according to size, was from 30 to 45 cents. Medium sizes sold at 38 to 40 cents and the top grade was quoted at 45 cents. The supply was just about the average for the last month, but seemed to be sufficient for the morning's demand.

Butter was 30 cents; chickens 20 to 23 cents; hens 18 cents; ducks 22 to 25 cents; and geese were decidedly scarce. R. Bradfield sold his supply of fresh pork at 13 and 15 cents a pound. One woman said she had sold 6½ pound ducks at 25 cents.

Potatoes were unchanged at $1 a bag for Katahdins and $1.20 for White Stars. Hilliard Strong's vegetable prices were: Spanish onions $1.35 a hamper, carrots and parsnips 75c a hamper; potatoes $1.

Arthur Stenson of North Monaghan sold turnips at 50c a bushel or three for 10 cents; carrots and parsnips 25c a peck or 75c a hamper; celery 5c a bunch; onions 30c a peck; cabbage 5 cents each.

Apples were plentiful. Fred Watt of Port Hope asked $1.40 and $1.50 for Bellflowers, $1.75 a hamper for winter St. Lawrence, $1.25 for Pippins and $1.40 for Russets. Ben Isaac of Norham quoted $1.50 for No. 2 McIntosh Reds, $1.50 for Snows and 30c a peck for Talmans. Leo Cann of Port Hope had McIntosh Reds at 45c a peck, and pears at 40 cents.

Corset, Garter Shortage In U.K.

LONDON, Nov. 18—Warning Britons that there will be further restrictions on purchases of luxuries and "near necesities," Board of Trade President Oliver Lyttleton last night said there is a shortage of corsets and garters in Britain.

"For example," he said, "supplies of corsets, garters and surgical goods available for six months beginning Dec. 1 will be only 50 per cent of the corresponding period last year, while mattresses, cameras, perfumes, jewelry and toys will be only 25 per cent."

He said it is going to be a much more uncomfortable war than it has been.

"I believe the people of the country understand we are fighting for our lives," he said. "We shall have to be pleased when the elbows come out of our evening suit."

War Adds Laughs To Shakespeare

LONDON, Nov. 18—(CU).—Lines which William Shakespeare penned 350 years ago never intending to get laughs from the audience have suddenly taken on new meaning as a result of the war.

Audiences laugh heartily now when the actor playing Richard III reached his grand speech, which used to fall on a hushed house—"Now is the winter of our discontent"

That has become a topical allusion.

The London public, which has been taking its Shakespeare straight for three centuries, is now defying bombs and going without hot lunch to see condensed versions of the plays.

They are just as calm when the page steps out and announced: "An air raid alarm has been sounded." He does it as nonchalantly as if he were saying: "Milord, the carriage awaits."

At yesterday's performance of Richard III the audience lunched on cakes and tea carried to their seats from a snack bar at the rear of the theatre. Midway through the performance sirens sounded another in the endless series of raids. The actors didn't miss a word. The audience never stirred. Several times actors had to raise their voices to be heard above the distant rumble of gunfire.

Canada At War.

A little over a year ago millions of people throughout the country heard Neville Chamberlain (a) that time Prime Minister of Britain, and now deceased) proclaim that England was at war against the enemy of Democracy, Germany. Although we in Canada had been expecting this step for some time, it was still breath-taking to know that our Motherland was faced with such an ordeal.

Being Canadians we knew that we must take our place with England immediately; what true Canadian heart failed to skip a beat when our Government Leader, Hon. Mackenzie King, proclaimed Canada at war beside Britain against a common enemy.

Over a year has passed since this statement was made and the changes in Canada have been many. We have seen many of the men of our country don the blue of the Air Force, the khaki of the Army, the navy blue of the Fleet, and our hearts have thrilled at the sound of martial music and the marching feet of the men as they train to serve the Empire.

Our women, too, have responded nobly to the call and are serving as nurses, ambulance drivers, and many other ways. Industry in Canada to-day has stepped up to provide munitions, airplanes, uniforms and food not only for our own troops, but for all the Empire forces. The roar of the airplanes overhead has become an ordinary sound.

We cannot walk down a city street without meeting soldiers, sailors or Air Force boys with smiles on their faces, but with grim, determined eyes that foretell disaster to the powers that are trying to smash their homes.

Upon these boys and men rest our whole future, they hold our lives in the palms of their hands, and we thank God that we have such men ready and willing to fight for us.

These days are very trying ones to England. She is being attacked with daily increasing force by swarms of Nazi bombing planes. These raids have been aimed against the people of England, not against military objectives. To-day every English man and woman is standing shoulder to shoulder quietly and with determination, facing the worst that Hitler's hordes can offer. Hitler is surely realizing that English morale cannot be broken. We in Canada, as well as the people in all parts of the British Empire, are extending to them our full support.

The British Empire has ample supplies of all kinds, the greatest Navy in the world, a superior Air Force, and an Army to be proud of. The greatest asset of all is the bulldog spirit of all British people that no enemy force can quell. Too, at the south of us, there is a great neighbor and friend doing her part to aid in this great cause.

Great men are at the head of our Government, men who are sacrificing time, love and home to pilot the ship of state through these troubled waters. Surely with a leader such as Winston Churchill and the loyal support of every part of the British Empire, we can sing with confidence that soul-stirring song, "There'll Always Be An England."

Fortune Hunters Declared Frauds

PHILADELPHIA, Nov. 18 — (AP) — Conspiracy by which a family group hoped to wrest a $20,000,000 fortune from 20,000 other claimants was crushed under a jury's verdict to-day—with six defendants facing possible sentences of 20 to 110 years.

Isaac Newton Sheaffer, Newark, Del., interior decorator, and five kinsfolk, were convicted yesterday of falsifying family-Bible records to support a contention that they were the rightful heirs of the late Mrs. Henrietta E. Garrett

Thus ended another sensational chapter in a world-wide fight for the millions her Quaker-husband, Walter, built with snuff at the turn of the century and left to her with the admonishment not to "let the scalawags get any of it."

But the widow, who spent her declining years alone with her pets and servants, failed to heed his advice. When she died childless 10 years ago, she had bequeathed only a paltry part of the ever-growing fortune.

Then began one of the greatest treasure hunts in modern history. Claims poured in from virtually every State in the United States and many foreign lands. Even the State of Pennsylvania seeks the estate—by escheat. Court hearings were begun two years ago.

Sheaffer based his claim on his contention that he was an illegitimate son of Mrs. Garrett—born before her marriage to the snuff manufacturer.

All six have been released in bail pending motion for a new trial.

It was decided that all classes would be held at Mrs. Ivey's home.

Stephen Foster, Song Writer In Hall Of Fame

NEW YORK, Nov. 18—(AP).—A song writer who died penniless, obscure and broken in spirit at the age of 38 has just been elected to the Hall of Fame.

A commemorative tablet and bust honoring his memory will be placed among those of 72 other great Americans next spring. The name on it will be "Stephen Collins Foster."

He's the first musician ever named one of the United States' immortals.

He wrote down-to-earth, folksy, easy-to-sing songs. He wrote them to pay the rent, to buy a few meals. And for most of them, he got only a few dollars each.

They were never-to-be-forgotten songs. Such as "Old Black Joe," "Old Folks At Home," "Jeannie With the Light Brown Hair," "My Old Kentucky Home," "O Susanna," and "Massa's in De Cold, Cold Ground."

At the age of 14, he wrote "Tioga Waltz." From then until his death in New York City Jan. 13, 1864, he turned out more than 300 songs, a dozen instrumental compositions and several musical arrangements.

He had to drive himself to compose as a rule. Even during 1860, when his career was at its peak with the publication of "Old Black Joe," he was on the verge of quitting several times.

HUNS OIL BULGAR ROAD

Police Shot at 90 m.p.h. Stops 17-Year Robber-Driver in Stolen Sedan

TWEED YOUTH AND NEW BRUNSWICK COMPANION ARE ACCUSED OF SLUGGING, ROBBING AND LEAVING TAXIM AN DAZED IN DITCH—POLICE OF 20 COMMUNITIES SPR EAD DRAG NET.

GUELPH, Ont., Nov. 19—(CP).—Traffic Officer E. A. Webb, driving at 90 miles an hour in pursuit of a stolen car early today, whipped out his revolver and fired a shot at the fleeing vehicle, bringing it to a halt on the northerly outskirts of Guelph. The bullet landed a few inches below the rear window on the driver's side of the car.

Webb then arrested the driver of the car, Robert Anderson, 17, of R.R. 1, Tweed, and his companion, Henry Gassner, 22, Minto, N.B.

The two men are alleged to have admitted to police in Guelph that they had held up an Owen Sound taxi driver, George Lake, and robbed him of a "small sum of money," and then stole his car, after throwing him out on a country road "a little way" from Owen Sound. The amount alleged to have been stolen was $3, police stated.

OWEN SOUND, Ont., Nov. 19—(CP).—Less than three hours after George Lake, 21, Owen Sound taxi driver, was slugged, robbed, and relieved of his car Monday night, Robert Anderson of Tweed, and Henry Gassner of New Brunswick were picked up on the highway near Guelph by authorities of that city and brought back to Owen Sound to face charges of robbery with violence.

Lake, with blood streaming from a badly cut head, staggered into the home of John Skinner near the long swamp on the Southampton road and asked to be taken to Springmount. From there

Italians Fight To Keep Escape Open

Greeks Slowly Press Legions From Key Koritza Area

ATHENS, Nov. 19 (AP)—Italian troops were reported being forced slowly out of the Koritza zone today—fighting desperately to keep open their road to retreat — after two weeks of increasing Greek battering against the fortified Albanian city.

(Reuters News Agency in a dispatch from Belgrade said the city of Koritza fell to Greek mountain troops at 1 a.m. today—7 p.m. EDT, Monday.)

Greek military sources, however, made no immediate claim of capturing the strategic crossroads city 10 miles inside Albania, but a government spokesman declared last night that Fascist defenders in the Koritza sector had given up counter attacks and called upon their dive bombers to cover their withdrawal to positions farther back.

Even this, it was reported, failed because of counter action by Greek and British aircraft in which, the Greek high command said today, nine Italian planes were shot down,

Astor Tells 'Em Off

London, Nov. 19 (CP Cable)

LADY ASTOR told 'em off again today in the House of Commons.

The occasion was a request by Sir William Davison for a more musical warning to replace air raid sirens, about which he said numerous women had complained because "they are more depressing than bombs."

"The women are showing more courage than the men," Lady Astor responded, "and I beg the honorable gentleman not to listen to a few nervous letters from a few nervous women."

The ministry of home security has held that the wailing raid sirens are the best type of warning devices.

50 Lumberjacks Comb Bush For Lost Miner

EAST LAKE, Que., Nov. 19—(CP)—Fifty lumberjacks and members of the Quebec Forestry Service today resumed their search for five members of the Royal Canadian Air Force who bailed out of a patrol plane over this thickly-forested area Saturday night.

While R.C.A.F. planes were hampered in their hunt from the sky by adverse weather conditions, authorities in Ottawa were working through Washington to arrange search parties for the missing airmen in the neighboring State of Maine.

The land search was slowed because only 50 men were available in the sparsely-populated district. They were working by daylight only and resting at night because no other men were on hand to relieve them.

Flying Officer U. J. H. LeBlanc who landed by parachute about one miles from this village directed the hunt. He said he leaped from the plane about 10 minutes after the others.

The plane, a Digby bomber of the Atlantic patrol, apparently ran out of gas while trying to make Montreal after being unable to land at

Greeks Plead For Aid To The World

Avoiding Finn Mistake, Success Shakey Unless Planes Come

ATHENS, Nov. 19.—(AP).—Greece appealed to the "free countries" of the world to-day to help her against Italy, with the declaration by Theo Nicoloudis, press minister, that they should not be misled by current Greek successes in the field.

He appealed especially to Britain and the United States, in a talk with foreign newspaper correspondents, to send the greatest number planes, and compared Greece's present situation with that of Finland in the struggle with Russia a year ago.

Nicoloudis spoke as Italian troops were reported moving out of Koritza after two weeks of Greek battering against the fortified Albanian city.

"We won't make the same mistake as heroic Finland which, content with her first successes, failed to ask for help from abroad," Nicoloudis said.

"Despite our epic victories, despite our unshakeable faith in our cause which is blessed by God, we appeal with all our force to public opinion of our Allies and of foreigners while there is still time so that aerial support given Greece may be extended without delay."

The Greeks, he continued, are fighting an enemy six times greater in war materials. In the Woritza area, he declared, the Italians are using 400 planes.

Asks for Supplies

WASHINGTON, Nov. 19—(AP).—The Greek Government has appealed directly to the United States Government for permission to purchase aviation and other military supplies.

This was made known to-day by Sumner Welles, Acting Secretary of State, who said the Greek Government had been assured that the appeal would receive a most sympathetic response.

Hungary Next On Axis Parley List

Ribbentrop And Ciano Head For Vienna; Rumania On Roundup

BERLIN, Nov. 19 — (AP).—Hungary is next on the list for Axis discussions, the German news agency said to-day, following Hitler's series of conferences this week with Italian, Spanish, and Bulgarian leaders.

The German and Italian Foreign Ministers, Ribbentrop and Ciano, the agency said, left Berchtesgaden to-day for Vienna, to which Germany has invited Hungarian Premier Teleky and Foreign Minister Csaky. The Hungarians are due here to-morrow.

Yesterday Ribbentrop and Ciano joined Hitler in a meeting with Serrano Suner, Spanish Foreign Minister, who was said to have left Salzburg this morning on his way back to Spain.

First of the Fuehrer's callers, it was said meanwhile, was King Boris of Bulgaria. As with yesterday's talks at the Fuehrer's Berchtesgaden retreat, there was no inkling of what was discussed.

Hertzog's Swing From Malan Will Aid Smuts

LONDON, Nov. 19—(CP Cable).—The sudden decision of Gen. J. B. M. Hertzog to withdraw his support from Dr. D. F. Malan and the extreme Republicans who preach independence was described in South African circles here today as bound to assist Prime Minister Jan Smuts in directing the country's war effort.

Dispatches from South Africa report speculation whether the former Prime Minister, whose policy of non-belligerency was rejected by Parliament at the outbreak of the war, will attempt to form a new party. Such a step would strengthen the government's hand by splitting the opposition.

Like the late Neville Chamberlain, Gen. Hertzog hoped for peace in Europe. His immediate reaction to the outbreak of hostilities was to seek means of keeping the country from the storm. He offered neutrality, but South Africans followed the internationally minded Gen. Smuts.

Frustrated, Gen. Hertzog forsook Gen. Smuts and joined Dr. Malan, in whom he believed he recognized himself when young. However, a brief period of co-operation with Malan disillusioned him, especially as he saw the Axis armies violating frontier after frontier and threatening the northern territories of

TNT Rocks Countryside For 20 Miles At Munition Plant

NOBEL, Ont., Nov. 19 (CP)—A three-way investigation by federal, provincial and plant officials was pressed today into an explosion in the TNT division of the Defence Industries Limited munition plant which killed three men, injured 10 and razed two of the plant's buildings.

Identification of the dead who were taken to Parry Sound, several miles from here, was established today as:—

Gerald Hammel, 39, of Nobel; James Pickles of London, Ont., married, 7 children, and Edouard Legere, whose address was not known immediately. Two of the injured were Arthur and George Totman of Parry Sound, suffering from burns and cuts.

Louis Gourdier of Toronto died in a company bunkhouse just about the time of the explosion from a heart attack. It was not known whether the attack was brought on by natural causes or by the blast a mile away from where Gourdier was at the time.

Blames Natural Causes

A. M. Campbell, plant manager, said the explosion resulted from "natural causes." He added: "There definitely is no question of sabotage."

Campbell said there had been only one explosion.

Houses 20 miles from the scene of the blast were rocked by its force.

According to those who have visited the Nobel plant, the buildings are so designed that an explosion in one of them need not set off successive blasts in the others. Each building is sand-bagged on three sides with the fourth side unprotected. This last side faces away

Boris, Hitler Stage Secret Talk

Pro-Nazi Regime Looms To Let Nazis By In Blow At Greece

SOFIA, Bulgaria, Nov. 19 (AP)—King Boris, back in his palace after a secret meeting with Hitler, conferred with his Prime Minister and Foreign Minister today, presumably over Bulgaria's role in the Rome-Berlin "new order" for Europe.

Resignation of the present government, headed by Prime Minister Bogdan Philoff, following new concessions to Germany, and a Nazi request for passage of German troops through Bulgaria to Greece were among the possibilities discussed in political circles as an aftermath of the King's visit to Germany Sunday.

Political circles here shied away from the opinion widely expressed in other Balkan capitals that Bulgaria may be preparing demands on Greece for territory in Thrace which would give the Bulgars their long-desired outlet to the Aegean Sea.

Some observers said the public was so thoroughly opposed to war that an ultimatum to Greece might cause serious internal disorders. On the other hand, it was believed that Bulgaria, especially if a new government were formed, might accede to any German request for passage of troops.

Present Cabinet to Fall

It is believed the present Sofia government may resign after the passage today or tomorrow of a new anti-semitic bill, agitation for which has puzzled the tolerant Bulgarian public. The new government would be presumed to be flatly pro-Axis.

(In Bucharest, observers noted Berlin dispatches to the Rumanian press hinting at "a final reorganization of all southeast Europe" and "a great military offensive against Greece, Egypt and Africa by Germany and Italy.")

Mexico Surprised As Her Ships Stopped

MEXICO CITY, Nov. 19—(AP).—Crews of the Mexican tanker Cerro-Azul and the Honduran freighter Ceiba said today upon arrival in Tampico from New Orleans that United States destroyers eight miles off Tampico had ordered them to stand by for inspection of the ships' papers.

Official Mexican reports said the presence of the destroyers last Saturday caused one German merchant shipmaster to scuttle his vessel and three others to scurry back to Tampico for refuge, believing the warships were British.

The Cerro-Azul and Ceiba crews identified the destroyers as the Plunkett, one of the U.S. Navy's newest, and destroyers 210 and 233. (Jane's fighting ships lists the 233 as the Gilmer and the 210 as the Broome).

Mexico City newspapers expressed surprise at what they called the unusual vigilance shown by United States ships on neutrality patrol. Universal said the three destroyers inspected the papers of the two merchantmen "regardless of the fact that the Mexican warships Queretaro and G-25 and G-26 were at anchor at Tampico."

London, Nov. 19 (CP)

PRODUCTION at the Krupp Munition Works at Essen, Germany, has been cut down 50 per cent as the result of British bombing raids, the air ministry news service said today.

News reaching London indicates "the growing disruption of industry in cities of western Germany," the news service added.

The air ministry said the Krupp Works were having great difficulty in obtaining their regular supplies of raw materials "because of transport trouble caused by wrecked railway junctions."

"Three sections of the factory have been hit and put out of commission," the bulletin said. "One particularly heavy bomb penetrated to the underground workshop before exploding."

US Rushes Chain of Sea Bases

Newfoundland, Bermuda To Be Strongest In 60 Million Setup

WASHINGTON, Nov. 19.—(AP).—The United States Navy plans to rush construction, informed persons said to-day, on a $60,000,000 chain of bases for the sites traded with Britain for destroyers in the western hemisphere.

There also were indications that United States naval tenders might move into some of the newly-acquired anchorages immediately and provide temporary base facilities for American submarines and seaplanes guarding the Atlantic and Caribbean approaches to the vital Panama canal area.

The way to a general start of construction and partial occupancy of some bases appeared cleared by the navy's formal announcement last night that "all the British authorities concerned" had agreed upon sites to be leased by the United States government in Bermuda, the Bahamas, Jamaica, Antigua, St Lucia, British Guiana and Newfoundland.

Only at Trinidad, the southern "anchor" of the chain, were arrangements still incomplete. The navy said consultations were continuing on the exact facilities to be granted the United States on that British Island possession, off the north-east coast of South America.

The base rights in both Newfoundland and Bermuda were given to the United States by Great Britain without compensation. The other six sites, under a 99-year lease, were obtained in the historic international "swap" involving 50 American destroyers.

American surveying parties already are at work in Newfoundland, northern "anchor" of the new chain, where a major defence post is planned, including an air base and army training ground, a naval base with 1,250 feet of wharfage, and a site of approximately 160 acres for an army defensive force.

Italian Reverses Show High Command Fell Down

Many have said these reverses were due in the main to the poor fighting quality of the Italian soldier, but a lot of the responsibility in the long run must be placed on the shoulders of the Italian high command.

Italy appears to have gone into Albania which she conquered in a walkover last year with the intention of waging a mechanical war on Greece. The difficulty of the

Hun Stupidity Saves Convoy

Cripples Jervis Bay In 15 Mins.—Then Wastes 45 Sinking Her

SAINT JOHN, N.B., Nov. 19 — (CP). — A graphic description of the battle waged by the armed merchant cruiser Jervis Bay against a German surface raider, which attacked a convoy in mid-Atlantic on November 5, was given to-day by Paymaster-Lieut. J. G. Sargeant, who is in St. John visiting friends, revealed that the Jervis Bay, from her position in the convoy, sighted the enemy raider at a very great distance astern and immediately challenged the raider by signalling it. The raider retaliated by opening fire at extreme range, with the first salvo missing its mark.

"By this time," said Sargeant, "we were aware that this was an enemy warship of greatly superior armament, and we realized that, in engaging the ship, we had very little chance of surviving the action."

Sargeant said that the Jervis Bay disregarded this fact, however, because it was realized that the armed merchant cruiser was in such a position that by turning towards the enemy a good smoke screen could be given the convoy. Sargeant said that the Jervis Bay could, at the same time, join battle with the raider.

"We got up steam and sped ahead of the convoy. Then, turning to port, we made a full turn and headed, full speed, bows on towards the enemy with our guns blazing. By this manoeuvre we were given the opportunity of laying an effective smoke screen to shelter the convoy.

"By a pre-arranged signal, the ships of the convoy were scattering. Due to the fact that the H.M.S. Jervis Bay was rapidly closing the enemy, the sea raider was compelled to concentrate her fire on us. The convoy was given a valuable 60 minutes in which to get well clear of the enemy warship.

"Our guns were blazing continually but the greater gun power of the enemy was concentrated upon the bridge and fore-control of our

Among British Dead On Yugoslav Mountainside

WASHINGTON, Nov. 19—(AP).—The United States State Department was notified today that Ralp D. Barnes, correspondent for the New York Herald-Tribune, was among four persons killed in the crash of a British bombing plane on a mountain side in Yugoslavia yesterday.

The information came from Arthur B. Lane, Minister to Yugoslavia.

Barnes was an American citizen and had been abroad several years for the Herald-Tribune.

Lane said the plane was carrying a large number of bombs and the bodies of the four occupants were found over a radius of 300 metres from the wrecked plane.

Plan 6 Months Up Now Says Power; Woman MP Speaks Out

OTTAWA, Nov. 19.—(CP)—The British Commonwealth Air Training plan has now progressed sufficiently for Air Minister Power to predict "the ultimate success of the plan and the attainment of our common object."

Six months ahead of schedule, the Commonwealth plan will produce by the end of next year twice as many trained pilots and air crews as was originally anticipated for that time, Mr. Power says.

The Air Minister, as his part in the government's review of Canada's war program, reported for his branch of the service to the House of Commons yesterday. Today Navy Minister Macdonald reports for "the silent service," the rapidly growing navy.

In his review Air Minister Power declared against "too much of a professional class" in the army, navy or air force.

Police in 20 municipalities were asked to be on the lookout for the large sedan from which Lake had been dumped in the long swamp after his keys, money and registration card had been taken from him.

Highway Traffic Officer E. A. Webb of Guelph spied the wanted car on the Guelph-Elora road. The driver, however, defied his orders to stop, whereupon the officer drew his gun and sent a shot whistling after the speeding machine. The fugitive car came to a halt as his bullet plowed into the rear of the big sedan.

Lake received a call to a house on 4th Avenue West. Arriving there, he picked up two men who were standing at the gateway of the dwelling and moved off. He had driven only a few feet when some blunt instrument cracked against the back of his head and he dimly remembers the car swerving out of control as he slumped over the wheels. He lapsed into a daze from which he was only partially recovered when he was roughly pushed from the car into the long swamp, four miles from the city on the Southampton road.

Lake managed to make his way to the home of John Skinner, who brought him to Owen Sound, where he received medical attention.

Both men were remanded to jail for a week when they appeared in court today.

"Within 15 minutes of the commencement of the fight, the H.M.S. Jervis Bay was crippled when the engines were stopped by a direct hit. Thereafter, in an effort to sink the ship, the enemy concentrated 45 minutes of pounding heavy 11-inch shells into our vessel, before going in pursuit of the helpless convoy.

"The ship was smashed and blown to blazes. My own post, which was in the fire control (located approximately amidships), was struck shortly after the engagement started. I missed death by a second. I had just stepped out of my cabin when a shell struck the post."

When the ship was sinking he succeeded in getting on a raft, and after more than nine hours was picked up by the freighter that brought the survivors to an east coast Canadian port.

Lt. Sargeant paid tribute to the "brilliant and daring piece of work" by Captain Fogarty Fegen, who went down with the Jervis Bay.

Another disclosure made in last night's announcement was that military aircraft of both Britain and the United States would have joint use of airfields established by both governments on the Island of Jamaica. The statement said this use would be "within the limits of capacity" and that "the controlling authorities" would have the first call on the available accommodation.

The United States also was granted the right to develop resources and facilities for the Port Royal dockyard at Jamaica "under British control for the joint use of United States and British forces."

Navy spokesmen declined to elaborate on the arrangement for joint usage.

The navy's announcement indicated that the most powerful American bases were planned at Newfoundland and at Bermuda.

Sites agreed upon at Bermuda, it was said, included an area for a land plane base, a seaplane base, naval base and garrison area, and storage for explosives in small islands between St. Davis's Island and Hamilton Island along the eastern entrance to Castle Harbor.

In well-informed circles it was predicted that President Roosevelt would make available funds for construction immediately from the $200,000,000 emergency defence money placed at his disposal by Congress.

"All that can be said of Hertzog at the moment," said one South African authority, "is that he has been big enough to change his mind after giving the war problems a second thought."

Gen. Hertzog has advised his supporters to back the Smuts candidate in a by-election in Winburg, Orange Free State. However, it is not believed that this is a clear indication of full friendship with Gen. Smuts, with whom he governed jointly for six years after what he seemed an implacable enmity sustained for a quarter century.

The gap between them is regarded as only one of political subtleties—the fact was made clearer in a recent Smithfield speech when he warned Germany would not do more to safeguard South African independence than any other country. That seemingly shows that Gen. Hertzog has no illusions about a Hitler overlordship.

pectation of the backing of "friends."

A bare government announcement of Biris' trip was issued only after his return, and all it told was that he and Hitler talked together on Sunday.

It was believed, however, the German minister to Bulgaria accompanied the King. The minister had been absent since Thursday, when he saw Premier Bogdan Philoff, who, in turn, called on King Boris.

Drawing attention anew to Bulgaria's territorial aspirations, the press assured the public yesterday that the Aegean question soon would have a "peaceful, satisfactory" answer. But it did not tell how this might be achieved.

"If our friends advise us to wait longer, we will obey them because we are convinced no fruit should be picked until it is ripe," declared Deputy Sotir Yaneff in the newspaper Douma.

"But we must continue to think and work for the cause of a real just peace."

A Squeeze Play.

European observers, even before announcement of the Boris-Hitler conference, added up the clues of the newest line of Axis diplomacy to mean an impending "squeeze" on Britain through Greece and Gibraltar, the one possibly through Bulgaria and the other through Spain.

A meeting between Hitler and King Boris just ahead of the German's conference yesterday with the Italian and Spanish Foreign Ministers, Ciano and Serrano Suner, was seen as fitting into such a picture.

Almost as soon as Bulgaria recovered Southern Dobruja from Rumania with Axis support last fall, she voiced her hopes for a corridor to the Aegean at the expense of Greece.

Now, with Italy's armies suffering reverses in the Greek campaign, a corridor to the Aegean might be the inducement for Bulgaria to help or, at least, let German troops through to the aid of their allies.

Bulgaria long has been under Axis pressure through the efforts of Rome and Berlin to line up the Balkans. Her only coast now is on the Black Sea.

Suez The Goal?

Greece blocks an Axis route to the Eastern Mediterranean and, in the view of diplomatic sources in Switzerland, Hitler may be shaping an attempt to seize the "gates" of the Mediterranean with a powerful drive toward Suez coupled with a simultaneous attack through Spain against Gibraltar, Britain's rock at the western entrance.

Although neither the press nor official sources in Germany have offered even a guess on any possible new agreements reached by Germany, newspapers have been unanimous in predictions that this will be a "highly political week." One of them, the Hamburger Fremdenblatt, mentioned Rumania and Spain as markers of the battlefield of the fight against Britain in the Mediterranean.

Beyond Greece, the next obstacle to an Axis push in the East is Turkey. So far a non-belligerent ally of Britain and a moral supporter of Greece, Turkey has let it be known she will fight if "vitally threatened" and that any movement of Bulgaria against her "would be considered sufficient cause for war."

The advancing Greeks were said to have taken an unestimated number of additional prisoners and seized stores and war material including 10,000 blankets, quantities of grain, 10 field guns, 33 anti-tank guns and 15 mortars.

Large Italian stores were believed to be in Koritza, where Fascist forces were said to have stocked up for months for the frustrated push intended to cut Greece in two with a drive through Phlorina to Salonika.

The communique told of fierce fighting also in the central and seaward zones of the front, where the Greeks were reported to have taken prisoners and seized Italian supplies in raids into Albania at Ereeka and Borova.

The ministry of home security also told today of a Greek "motor launch" raid against one of Italy's Dodecanese islands, fortified Fascist naval bases in the eastern Mediterranean.

The ministry's communique gave this account of the raid:—

"Citizens of the Dodecanese Islands living and working in Greece sailed on the night of Nov. 17-18 with a group of Dodecanesians and others on a motor launch from a Greek anchorage and landed on a small island of the Dodecanese Islands.

"The group attacked the police post and captured the police head and three carabinieri (policemen) with their equipment. The group further attacked a naval guard and in the fight which followed three naval guards, including the petty officer in charge, were killed.

"The raiders returned with four prisoners and equipment to the anchorage from which they sailed."

For Wednesday, November 20.

Splendid opportunities for attaining high goals are presaged for this day, according to the lunar transits. It is an auspicious time for approaching employers, superiors, executives, all of those in power and prestige who may be disposed to assist in advancement, in capitalizing new propositions, or otherwise demonstrating signs of confidence, esteem, and preferment. If such projects are to be manipulated by group action be tactful and discreet, with, possibly, the intuitions safely accepted for guidance. Shun impetuosity, irritability and headstrong tactics. Placate rather than force issues.

Those whose birthday it is may be prepared to seek promotion, opportunity for reaching desired objectives, with the substantial cooperation of employers, superiors, and those in authority, whose financial support and personal confidence may be required. But approach these with amiability and poise rather than impetuosity, aggressive and vexatious methods. Shun strife, impatience and dictatorial behavior, especially where the aid of groups may be required. It would not be amiss to be guided by intuitions or subtle leadings.

A child born on this day should be energetic, imperious and masterful, given to turbulence and strife, rather than tact and subtlety which would serve better in contacts with its superiors, who may be friendly, disposed to promote and favor.

2 Quebec Ridings At Polls Today

QUEBEC, Nov. 19—(CP). — Premier Adelard Godbout today sought approval of the policies of his year-old Provincial Government in two by-elections to fill vacancies in the Quebec Legislature.

In the snow-covered Laurentian Mounty county of Terrebonne and in the industrial riding of Megantic south of the River St. Lawrence, the electorate went to the polls to choose between candidates supporting the Liberal Government of Premier Godbout and Union Nationale followers of Maurice Duplessis. In Terrebonne, a third candidate was running as an Independent.

Although the results could do little more than dent the overwhelming Liberal majority in the Legislature, the campaigns were carried on in the fiery style of a full-dress Quebec election and voting was expected to be heavy in both constituencies.

Throughout the campaign, Premier Godbout and Mr. Duplessis, whose government was overthrown in last year's general elections, supported their candidates at numerous public gatherings in both constituencies. Liberal Cabinet members and members of the old Union National Government also took part.

Although Mr. Duplessis concluded his campaign Sunday night, the Premier continued drumming for votes right into the eve of the election with three speeches in Terrebonne last night. He addressed audiences at St. Jerome, Ste. Therese and Ste. Agathe in favor of the newly-appointed Provincial Secretary, Hon. Hector Perrier.

SHADES OF EVENING

By ALICE ALDEN

PALE BLUE with touches of silver has been voted the favorite evening frock color scheme by both artists and the girls who dote on dressing for the bright lights. Ellen Drew is one who subscribes to this color scheme and uses it for an exquisite evening ensemble.

The gown is pale blue crepe and has a sweeping, full skirt with a high waistline and a softly molded bodice. Silver embroidery in a scalloped design outlines the upward waistline detail and also serves as shoulder straps. The jacket, cut on easy, casual lines, is in the same blue crepe and has silver embroidery. When worn with the frock, it creates a charming dinner ensemble. Blue suede gloves, silver bag and embroidered blue shoes in silver complete the costume.

Poldi Mildner Is Highlight Of Present Concert Series

A world famous virtuoso who looks like a debutante is Poldi Mildner, the Swedish pianist who so intrigued a Peterborough audience Monday night in the Collegiate Auditorium that they were reluctant to let her go even after several encores had been graciously given. To many the concert represented the highlight of the series, leaving the audience literally breathless with astonishment and admiration of an astounding pianist who has wrists like steel and fingers of quicksilver.

For eight or nine years Miss Mildner has been appearing annually in Toronto, and has been playing in public since she was eleven years old, at which age she made her debut in Vienna. A few weeks later she appeared as guest artist with the Vienna Symphony Orchestra and became an over-night sensation. In the next five years she gave hundreds of concerts in Austria, Holland, Germany, France, Switzerland and England and appeared with distinction with great symphony orchestras.

Just as charming off-stage is Miss Mildner, whose natural friendliness, quick smile and lovely speaking voice made those fortunate enough to meet her say inwardly "I do like you!" She speaks a number of languages, and comes to Peterborough straight from successes in New York. She was accompanied by Miss Trungard Westermann of Toronto.

The technique of the artist, brought to Peterborough by the Canadian Concert Association, is superlative, and she commands an infinite range of tone color, with masterly understanding of varied and elastic rhythms and sudden changes of mood.

The program opened with a dazzling performance of the Friedemann-Bach "Concerto in D Minor," followed by several of Beethoven's compositions that ranged from pure lyric poetry to turbulent drama. The Brahms variations on a theme by Paganini were musical pyrotechnics at their most spectacular, and Chopin's Impromptu, F Sharp Major; Barcarolle and two Etudes were interpreted with exquisite, graceful arabesques, ivory filigrees, pastel nuances of almost incredible delicacy.

A number of encores granted by the distinguished, fair-haired artist included Mozart's Pastorale Variee, and as a stimulating finale, Variations by de U. Gaubert de Courboon.

Dorothy McDowell Is Wed To Eric McKinstry

MILLBROOK, Nov. 19 (ENS)—Chrysanthemums in shades of bronze and gold were used to decorate the chancel of St. Andrew's United church, Millbrook, on Saturday, when the marriage of Dorothy Helen, eldest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. M. McDowell, to Eric Earl, son of Mrs. Elizabeth McKinstry, of Peterborough, took place, the Rev. A. L. Sisco, B.D., officiating. The wedding was the first to be solemnized in the church since its recent opening and dedication, following the complete remodelling of the auditorium.

The bride, who was given in marriage by her father, entered the church to the strains of Lohengrin's Wedding March, Miss E. L. Hetherington presiding at the organ, and looked charming in her wedding dress of white silk moire, floor length, made on princess lines, with self-covered buttons part way down the front, long sleeves with pointed cuff over the hands, sweetheart neckline, her long veil being of embroidered silk net, and her bouquet of Bettertime roses. A triple strand of matched pearls was worn, and white satin slippers completed the ensemble.

Miss Madeline McDowell was her sister's attendant, wearing a becoming dress of forget-me-not blue moire, with long waist and full skirt, short, shirred sleeves, and V-neck line; she carried a bouquet of pink Briarcliffe roses, with tiny matching buds in her hair, and wore slippers of silver brocade. Mr. Clifford McKinstry, of Ottawa, was groomsman for his brother, and the ushers were Teddy McDowell, brother of the bride, and Reginald McKnight, of Orillia.

During the signing of the register, the Misses Madeline and Beatrice McDowell, younger sisters of the bride, sang very beautifully, "O perfect love." Their dresses were of lavender and gold taffeta, with bolero jacket top, short sleeves, and full, floor-length skirts, each wearing a corsage of roses, and silver slippers.

Following the ceremony at the church, a reception was held at the home of the bride's parents, Main street south, attended by over forty guests. Mrs. McDowell, mother of the bride, wearing a dress of soldier blue crepe, with black velvet hat, and corsage of pink roses, and Mrs. McKinstry, the groom's mother, a dress of wine crepe, with matching hat, and corsage of Talisman roses.

The bride's table was attractive in a color scheme of pink and white, and assisting with the service of the guests, besides the bride's sisters, were Misses Barbara Sisco, Bryar Edmunds, and Edna Godfrey, of Peterborough.

Later Mr. and Mrs. McKinstry left by motor for their wedding trip to Ottawa and points east. The bride had chosen for travelling a becoming dress of black wool crepe, with white embroidered points turned back at the neckline, top coat of black, and matching hat and accessories. Upon their return they will reside at 41 Orpington road, Peterborough.

Chudleigh House Setting For Delightful Tea

Chudleigh House, Toronto, was the setting for a delightful Saturday afternoon tea from two until five, when Mrs. B. Rogow of Peterborough, entertained in honor of her daughter, Miss Esther Hannah Rogow, whose marriage to Mr. Philip Moscoe, son of Mr. and Mrs. S. Moscoe, Toronto, is to take place quietly on the 8th of December. About one hundred and twenty guests attended.

The hostess received in a graceful, floor-length gown of ariel blue crepe, with corsage of pink roses, and her daughter wore a model of draped white jersey with corsage of orchids.

Yellow chrysanthemums and tall matching tapers were used effectively to adorn the lace-covered tea table. Pouring were Mrs. Alex Rogow of Toronto, sister-in-law of the bride-elect, and Mrs. M. Levine, of Peterborough, a sister. Assisting to serve tea were Mrs. Alex Winter of Toronto, formerly of Peterborough; Miss Adele Gluklick of Peterborough, and the bride-elect's sisters, Miss Kay Rogow of Toronto and Miss Rose Rogow of Peterborough.

We Noticed . . .

. . . Can you imagine owning an unusual, very smart necklace that cost you the large sum of one cent, and made you the centre of office attention when you turned up with it on?

. . . Here's how it's done, according to one of our newspaper gals: You pop around to the grocers and buy macaroni for lunch—in the fluted, shell-like shapes some shops have on display. Then, as you drop them into the boiling water, save out a dozen shells or so.

. . . When sister comes home from school she's so delighted with the luncheon dish she lends you her box of water-colors — you tint the shells in pretty colors to match your frock, heat a knitting needle to make a hole, and thread them into a striking necklace. Easy recipe, eh —and sounds like an excellent and economical idea for Christmas gifts, too.

FASHIONS

A two-piece dress is the newest thing, and the most practical kind of a frock to have. Budget minded women who wear larger sizes will welcome this neatly tailored style with the low look. The blouse is fitted over the hips to eliminate bulk and the skirt has three inverted pleats in the front as dictated by fashion for this winter. Light weight wool or heavy rayon crepe will make a charming frock to see you through the whole season . . . to town . . . to club meeting . . . and many other occasions.

Style No. 2503 is designed for sizes 14, 16, 36, 38, 40, 42, 44, 46 and 48. Size 36 requires 3 yards of 54-inch fabric.

DOROTHY DIX

Monopoly of a Girl's or Boy's Time Is One of the Greatest Faults That Should Be Overcome By Young Folks.

Dear Dorothy Dix.— Will you please tell me how to get rid of a girl and make her think she dropped me? I have been dating one girl about three times a week for a year and a half and I am tired of her. Other than that I have no good reason for leaving her. I would like for her to do the quitting, as she is a swell person and I don't want to hurt her feelings. I would still like to date her possibly once a week, but I would like to break the monopoly and go with other girls. We haven't much in common, yet she seems to expect me around three times a week. I am 25. She is 30. JOHN.

ANSWER.— Well, John, the most difficult task that any man ever confronts is freeing himself from the woman of whom he has tired. If any man has ever found a painless way of doing it he has not revealed the discovery for the benefit of his suffering brothers who are in a like predicament. Many another man like you desires to sneak out the back door of a near-love affair by making the girl break off the relationship herself. He thinks that will save her face among her friends and that being able to boast about how she gave him the air will be a sort of consolation prize. So he picks quarrels with her about nothing. He stands her up on dates. He omits flowers and candy. He develops an allergy to the telephone. He shows her in a thousand little ways that he is weary of her and wants to be free.

But does she take the hint he hands her? Not at all. No woman so dumb as the one who will not understand that a man has come to regard her as an Old Woman of the Sea around his neck instead of a Lady Love. No woman so forgiving as the one who will not quarrel with her one and only date. It is virtually impossible to make her break with him.

Man on the Spot.

This puts the man on the spot, and the only resource left to him is to fade out of the picture as gracefully as he can. Don't answer letters and telephone calls asking if you are sick and what's the matter. Have buyers from Oshkosh that you must see on the old date nights. And maybe after a while she will sort of get the idea that you are pulling out.

Or else just tell the lady frankly that all bets are off, but this is a dangerous thing to do, for she will weep on your shoulder and tell you how much she loves you, and how she has given the best years of her life to you, and you will be sunk.

Anyway your dilemma calls attention again to the foll of "going steady" with a girl you do not care enough for to marry. The man thinks that when he gets tired of her he can kiss and ride away, but unless he is an utter cad it isn't so easy as that.

After he has monopolized her society and kept other men away and prevented her from establishing herself by marrying, he owes her something more than a "so long, Mary." He has done her a great wrong and gotten himself into a situation into which he either feels bound to marry a woman he doesn't love or desire, or else seem like a quitter.

The best way is for both men and women to keep in circulation until the time comes when they are ready to take on "a steady" for keeps.

WHEN AGING WOMAN SEES NEW LOVE.

Dear Dorothy Dix, — Just what does a woman in her thirties do when she meets a man in his twenties and falls crazily in love with him? This woman has been happily married for fourteen years. Her husband is a fine man who worships her and until now she has thought she loved him. She is morally a good woman, has a responsible position and has always conducted herself as a perfect lady. So far it isn't a case of infidelity or unfaithfulness with her, but it can very easily become that, and I would like to know of some way to put a stop to it before any damage is done to her or to her husband.

HER FRIEND.

ANSWER. — I doubt if anything that anyone could do or say would have any influence with this woman while she is under the spell of youth's fascination. For the time being she has lost sight of all moral values. She has thrown all thought of consequences to the wind, and you can no more reason with her than you can with an insane person.

She knows that she is going to break her husband's heart and wreck her home by what she is doing. She knows that she is losing the respect of all who know her, and how people jeer when a woman of her age acts like a lovesick school girl.

She knows that no boy in his twenties is really in love with a middle-aged woman and that he

Mr. Conant Tried It Out

About two years ago police raided and smashed their way in at the old Brown Derby, in Etobicoke township, York county. Since then the Combine Club has arisen from what was once the Brown Derby. The hour of 4.30 on Saturday afternoon was decided on as the time to operate, and in addition to the Combine Club ten gambling places in Toronto were raided. In all 500 people were given a ride to the police station.

This Combine Club is not in the city of Toronto, but rather out in the county, and yet none of the county police were aware that the raid was being made. Even the chief knew nothing of it. The whole business appears to have been engineered at the direction of Hon. Gordon Conant, Attorney-General.

The Combine Club had been built apparently for the purpose for which it was used. The front door was only a sham and behind it was nothing but a brick wall. There was a well-arranged parking field which would take care of 500 cars, and the police got in by attacking a tradesman's entrance and taking charge of the guard inside before he had time to give an alarm.

It is on record that a report was presented on April 19 by the chief of the York county force saying that no gambling existed in York county, but in this one raid Provincial Police, assisted by men from the Toronto force, found in one place 300 men in a building where there was every facility for gambling and betting and which existed for no other purpose.

Just what explanation can be offered for the claim that there was no gambling in York county is a puzzler at the moment. The chief has made the statement that he had not the equipment or the men for such a raid, but against that is the fact that the Provincial Police would come at any time to handle such a case.

Mr. Conant suggested some time ago that control of police in general should be centralized. He has said little about the idea since the first suggestion, but he may regard the outcome of the raid in the thickly populated section of the county as evidence that his suggestion was sound enough.

We admit candidly that we find considerable satisfaction in a case where those who go about their work deliberately to defeat the law meet with the defeat which they so richly deserve. In this case the Combine Club had been built to defeat the coming of police. The doors were not doors and the windows at the front were not windows. The tradesman's door was not that at all; there were other doors which would have to be smashed to gain admission unless one were a patron of the place. But when police under centralized authority got at it they went through, although the local police had reported there was no gambling in the community.

In this situation there is evidence that the Provincial controlled police who knew nothing or cared nothing of what had been taking place in the district were able to go in there and uncover something which had been overlooked or ignored by the police whose business it was to enforce law and see that gambling houses did not operate. There was no chance for a weak link in the chain to tip off any of the camp followers at the Combine Club. Local preferences or custom or friendship had no chance to operate, and right there was the reason why that raid was a success. The whole thing may prove much or not so much, but it seems to indicate at least that Mr. Conant "had something" when he suggested centralized control of the police service.

Urging On a Sick Man

People who are intimately acquainted with affairs in Spain are not impressed by the threat that Spain may enter the war on the side of the Axis powers. Ruth Steiger, writing in the Christian Science Monitor, tells of experiences when recently crossing the country on the way to Lisbon.

A street car conductor or motorman receives 300 pesetas a month (about $24), and a telephone operator gets half that amount. They cannot live on that as costs are high. People deliberately break the law so they may be sent to jail where they will be fed.

Products which the people of Spain need are not to be had because they have been exported to Germany. There is milk only for babies and expectant mothers. Bread is hard to get and is made largely of substitutes.

Those who are in possession of money can purchase supplies because they pay away above the regular price.

When Miss Steiger paid the driver of a cab she received change in postage stamps, and sometimes change is made in street car tickets as there are no coins in circulation.

The country is poor; the people in it are poor and desperately hungry; the roads are full of holes and the whole situation has in it nothing indicative of a nation ready to take its place in the battle line.

And yet Hitler and Mussolini have urged that sick and hungry people, with the open wounds of the last war not yet healed, to get into war again. Like pulling a sick man out of bed before he can walk. Those who know the situation in Spain today are aware that there is no strength in the land and Spain could make no contribution to Axis dreams and ambitions.

Not a Good Answer

Hon. J. G. Gardiner, Minister of War Services, has probably heard a good deal in his official capacity about manufacturers who want more men, and who claim that enlistments and training are making it difficult to maintain their working forces. There are enormous plant expansions under way in many centres, and there is going to be a call for more trained workers, otherwise production is not going to proceed at the speed demanded and expected by the Government.

Mr. Gardiner in speaking about this condition made it plain that operating the plants was pretty much the job of the manufacturer. We quote:

"Factory managers who contend they cannot produce to capacity without interfering with the training of men may have to be told by someone, just as they are being told in Britain, that they as factory managers are not good enough for wartime."

That may be one way of answering the question, but we do not believe it is good enough. It merely throws the entire responsibility on the manufacturer who is apparently expected to pull more workers out of a hat. Telling a manufacturer that he is not good enough for wartime may be one way of meeting the situation, but it is not a real way because it brings no finality of decision to a problem which has been worrying a good many manufacturers, who in turn are being urged repeatedly by Government officials to apply all speed to production or construction. Mr. Gardiner's answer may have been considered to have had what they call a punch in it, or even some sort of a threat, but it actually is not a good answer because it leaves so much unsaid.

The proper method would be to consider the entire problem and adopt a policy which would meet the situation. At the moment there is a consistent and entirely proper demand for increased output, and that demand is going to increase. It cannot be accomplished without more man-power, so why not get down to brass tacks without taking time out to tell manufacturers they are not good enough for war-time production?

A Pig And a Dog

A newspaper writer who spends most of his time out in the country looking for stories and pictures has found unusual animals tucked away in the farm lands.

There is the pig with two legs, both in front. Of hinds legs there are none. The rear part of the locomotion equipment was not supplied at birth, but the pig is now four months old and filling out nicely. Of course the average pig is a short-lived thing now and six months is about all the time granted to become acquainted with this troubled world.

This pig with two front feet has not yet missed a meal. There were times when some one had to give him a start, but he has since learned how to do that for himself. Tilts well to the front and then makes part of the distance; starts again and completes the trip.

The other oddity worthy of mention is a farm dog which lost both front legs at a threshing; got them caught in a belt and the farmer said he just bandaged him up as best he could because he didn't have the heart to kill him. Of course plenty of trick dogs can walk on their hind legs, but this farm dog does it of necessity and he learned the art himself; probably because he had to. Goes from the house to the barn and also attends to the business of all farm dogs—going out to the lane and barking when some person is coming. But the pig which gets around on its two front legs is considered the most unusual.

He Can Still Blow

Benito Mussolini has made a speech, and he said just about what might have been expected. He will seek revenge on the Greeks. He has 1,000,000 men under arms, and he can call up 8,000,000 more.

But why should he need 9,000,000 men to attend to the Greeks? His million should be several times the number required for the invasion of Greece. Something has gone wrong.

Mussolini may have 8,000,000 men but he will not call them up for the very good and sufficient reason that he could not equip them; he could not provide them with supplies, and he could not transport them for any distance outside of his own country.

Mussolini claimed there had been an exaggerated report of the damage which had been done in his naval vessels. The way to make the world believe he is speaking the truth is quite simple. He has only to send them out into the Mediterranean to do battle and then we can believe what he says. Vessels of war which stay well inside of protected harbors cannot be doing much service for their country.

It would be fitting that Benito should say something large and formidable, so he did it by claiming he was out to annihilate the United Kingdom and the British Empire.

That is a brave bit of overblown rhetoric for a man who sent his legions out to invade Northern Africa only to have the expedition bog down to the point that it has stopped dead still. He started out without warning to invade Greece and found that his crack troops were utterly defeated and forced to take the defensive in what was started as an invasion. With his own steam Benito could defeat nothing at all.

NOTE AND COMMENT

Add Coventry to the list of crimes for which the Nazis will have to pay.

That Toronto man who dropped poison in his beer was rather carrying coals to Newcastle.

Britain reports a shortage of corsets. The women of Britain will try to keep in shape without the foundation garments, however.

Now they talk about cutting down auto accidents by more consumption of Vitamin B. It is not claimed, however, that the diet will supply brains for drivers without adequate mental equipment.

Some Canadian soldiers are to be trained on skis and snowshoes, Col. Ralston announces. That particular lot, we would say, are not intended for service in Egypt.

New York Times says that the damage done in Coventry is a warning to the United States to send all the aid possible to Britain. It is also a warning to Canada to intensify her war effort.

Mr. Gardiner announces that Canadian farmers and especially those from Ontario will sell more food to Britain next year than in any of the past twenty years. So far there has been no protest from the agricultural belt.

The International Missionary Council has reason to feel concerned about Europe. Owing to war conditions the Overseas Missions of virtually all the continental countries of Europe are now cut off from all support from their home base and are left stranded. In all there would have been expended in this work in a normal year at least five million dollars. There were 4,000 missionaries engaged in the work and they had started numerous young churches in various countries. We read that these young churches are left to their own resources, and in many cases their membership has been scattered as the people fled from war. The missionaries themselves are for the most part stranded, and they are at the point where they call for aid of any sort.

THREE CARS

(By A.R.K.)

¶ As shiny cars came off the line, they faced a mighty trying time, although a splendid show; they hadn't started running yet, and it was safe enough to bet, they knew not where they'd go.

¶ Car Number One was moved out quick, the owner saw in it a kick, and all the fun he'd need; the car looked pretty good to him, he said when it was broken in, he craved a little speed.

¶ Inside two weeks why Number One, was called upon to step and hum, its speed was eighty-three; upon a road where all was clear, the driver acted rather queer, and wrapped around a tree.

¶ And then there came Car Number Two, a spotless thing and shiny new, its owner waited there; he was a gay and cheerful gent, who knew just what good driving meant, his intellect was rare.

¶ This driver was a goodly sport, delighting in a friendly snort, he trusted to his luck; within him was a shot of gin, and things ahead looked strange to him, he whacked a ten-ton truck.

¶ Car Number Three went on its way, belonged to some hard-working jay, it had a pleasant life; 'twas like a story in a book, for when he drove he always took—his children and his wife.

CAP and BELLS . .

By SAMUEL MARCHBANKS

THE Red Cross has been fortunate in enlisting the assistance of some of the most popular actors in the United States in its campaign to raise funds. During the month of October Miss Katharine Hepburn visited Toronto in order to play in Philip Barry's "Philadelphia Story" at the Royal Alexandra Theatre; for the week of the play Miss Hepburn, the author, and Robert B. Sinclair, the director, gave their financial interest in the production to the Red Cross. It is estimated that this contribution came to a little more than $10,000.

C & B

During the first week in November the Royal Alexandra was visited by the Theatre Guild production of Robert Sherwood's play, "There Shall Be No Night," and the profits and the stars' salaries of this, also, were donated to the Red Cross. Mr. Sherwood, who fought in the Canadian army in the last war wrote this play early in 1940, as a warning to the American people of the threat to their liberty which is inherent in Fascism. In effect Mr. Sherwood says: Do not imagine that a war in Finland is of no concern to the people of the United States, for when liberty is threatened anywhere, it is threatened here also.

C & B

Mr. Sherwood's warning was only one of several given to the American nation by their writers and artists; again and again the truth proves itself—it is the supposed dreamers, the impractical men, who really see what is happening, while the captains of industry and the statisticians are happy in their fool's paradise. Sherwood knew that the isolation of the United States was no longer a spiritual or physical possibility some time before that fact became apparent to its legislators. The breakdown of the concept of American isolation has been foreshadowed in many books of the past two or three years and is now the theme of Ernest Hemingway's powerful new novel, "For Whom the Bell Tolls." The book takes its title from a sentence in one of the sermons of John Donne, and the truth about isolation has never been more succinctly expressed. Here is the sentence: "No man is an Iland, intire of it selfe; every man is a peece of the Continent, a part of the maine; if a Clod bee washed away by the Sea, Europe is the lesse, as well as if a Promontorie were, as well as if a Manner of thy friend or of thine own were; any mans death diminishes me, because I am involved in Mankinde; And therefore never send to know for whom the bell tolls; It tolls for thee."

C & B

ROBERT SHERWOOD was fortunate in having his play acted by Lynn Fontanne and Alfred Lunt, undoubtedly the most gifted leading actors on the New York stage, and surpassed nowhere else for a peculiar kind of teamwork which is the result of years of acting together and a happy married life. The story of "There Shall Be No Night" is that of Dr. Kaarlo Valkonen, a Nobel Prize winner and a leading citizen of Helsinki, and Miranda, his American wife. They have a beautiful and cultivated home, they are happy in their marriage, and they are proud of their son, Erik. Then comes the Russian Aggression; Erik is killed in battle, his father is killed at Vilpuri, and Miranda and the aged Uncle Waldemar are last seen planning to burn their house and to die shooting at the advancing Russians. In spite of this grim story, the play is far from pessimistic in its tone; Dr. Valkonen is a healer of mental disease, and he has great faith in the power and strength of the human mind. In the battle for Finland he sees man fighting, for the first time in history, to preserve a way of life, and with a full consciousness of what he is doing.

C & B

To say that the play was presented by the Theatre Guild of New York is to say that it was done with taste and skill, but the acting in this case was better even than the Guild's usual fine achievement. The Lunts played with power and deep understanding; this was great acting in a modern play, a rare experience. The cast also included that fine old actor, Sydney Greenstreet, as Uncle Waldemar, a gloomy but resolute and noble old musician. The part of the German consul, Dr. Ziemssen, was played by Mr. Maurice Colbourne, who got himself into so much hot water last spring by attacking the Little Theatre Movement in Canada; on the first night of Sherwood's play in Toronto Mr. Colbourne's entrance was greeted with an exceptionally loud silence, but he acted so well that even the most rabid amateur actor must have forgiven him before the end of the evening.

C & B

During its five days in Toronto "There Shall Be No Night" played to capacity audiences; even the boxes (the worst seats in the theatre) were full. It is the practice of the Theatre Guild to send a certain number of its best plays on tour each year to cities which are able to raise a sufficient list of subscribers to make the venture financially successful, and an attempt is being made at the moment to add Toronto to this list. As it is the only city in Canada to support a winter season of professional plays it would be a sad day for Canada if her theatre were to disappear altogether.

Living Where Bombs Fall

London.

I am so grateful to say that the bombs which have fallen around here, fairly close to us, have caused no casualties. They have seemed to fall, as the Psalm says, at our right hand, but they have not come nigh our dwelling....

London under fire is still the same old London, and Londoners are just their old calm, steady selves. A tradesman comes with my groceries during an air raid. "No," he says, "if I took shelter I would never get around." He is stolid and unconcerned. For most part people want to go on working. They say they feel better so.

Everywhere there is the same cheerful spirit. You see, everybody seems to realize we are not fighting Germans, but fighting evil, and so we know that God is on our side....

We feel, most English people, how very strong American sympathy is for us. We do not know how this war will end, we do not try to predict it. We are living just one day at a time, sometimes one hour. Yet I, and many to whom I have spoken, would not be anywhere else than here, or living in any other time. We feel we shall see wonders. We are leaving it very much to God.

We all seem so much nearer together and to all our friends during this experience in the fiery furnace.

M. J.

Dawlish, South Devon.

....On Tuesdays I am opening my room as a recreation room for six soldiers at a time. They will have use of my wireless and writing desk; there will be illustrated papers, literature, cards....and refreshments in the middle of the evening....Next Tuesday I think I shall be there myself and get someone else to come and play whist with them.

After the last great air battle I heard the whole country from the Thames estuary to the coast was strewn with the wreckage of German planes. Poor things, poor boys; some mother somewhere is grieving for each of them....

SYBIL.

London.

....My flat being on the top floor it seems wise to sleep downstairs.... I have been able to get three comfortable upholstered cushions which, put in line, make the most perfect mattress. Many other people are sleeping in the passage in the most unconventional way, but everyone is so kind and gives one some friendly word or encouragement in passing. A naval officer left his door ajar while I was doing my evening reading and let me listen to his beautiful Chopin records, which took one right away from war beliefs, though there were bombs and guns whistling and roaring all around....

Two of our churches have taken in crowds of refugees. They are so grateful, and also helpful to us, in one case saving the building from fire through finding bombs on the roof.

THEA.

Connaught Barracks, Dover, Kent.

You can imagine how the whole nation is keyed up for this struggle. We seem to have reached a unity in these things and many of our old virtues are coming to the fore again. For so many years now we have talked of idealism and democracy without backing them up.

(My wife) has learned Red Cross work and preferred to stay in London where she could help. I know that wherever either of us had been, we should have both come back to help in this struggle for civilization. I feel that what I am England has given me the chance to be, and all I have I owe to the allied cause for decency and freedom. I am grateful to be permitted to help in this struggle and feel a strange sense of elation that destiny should have singled us out to save the world from relapsing to the blackest barbarism and brutality.

London.

On Saturday morning about 9 o'clock the sirens went, and as this flat is the air-raid shelter for the whole block, the people who were at home came flocking in. About 9:15 the doorbell rang. It was the milkman with the cream which he had forgotten to leave. I said, "Don't you know the sirens have gone?" He said, "Oh, 'Itler's 'aving 'is breakfast at the moment!"

We had booked seats for Wyndham's that evening, and John was crazy to go. I was a little dubious, but we went. Coming out in the pitch black at 11 o'clock I saw searchlights sweeping the sky. Mind you, a warm night and crowds strolling and laughing and talking all through Piccadilly. I made John hurry to the tube and we had just reached it and got in the train when off went the sirens. The train proceeded without lights, of course, and they wouldn't let us stay in the station.

We are about 500 yards from Madam Tussaud's. On Sunday night they got it. The cinema is razed to the ground, windows shattered all around (ours are untouched!). This building shook like an earthquake, but stood firm. There is a good air-raid shelter on the ground floor but John cant' sleep there—too much noise — so we stay in the flat and hope for the best. Funny—he sleeps all through guns and bombs, but people talking and walking about keep him awake....

Dear Uncle, Will has cabled me $25. I have bought a pair of sheepskin-lined ankle boots for wearing at night—a great extravagance, but so comfortable. I sleep in trousers and sweater—haven't properly undressed for a fortnight.

London.

So far we have escaped Adolf's attentions in this house and Pembridge Square, except for several time bombs several weeks ago. Occasionally when all is quiet there is a big bang and the remark is, "Oh, another time bomb, I suppose."....The depository where my furniture was stored was hit by a bomb and mine and others' furniture reduced to ashes. I don't expect I shall get much compensation....No. 35 Ashchurch Park was bombed. There is a crater in the garden forty feet wide and nearly deep enough to cover the house. The two Misses B—— and Peter the cat were sitting in a china cupboard when we went there. They fortunately escaped without a scratch.

MAGIC IN CANADA

English newspapers are printing letters from refugee children in Montreal and other Canadian centres, the tenor of the epistles being that this is a "grand country" and that the people are kind and friendly. One such letter in the London Daily Telegraph tells of the wonderful things here—"humming birds, frogs a foot long and others with brightly colored stripes down their backs, butterflies with spans of five inches and dragon flies three inches long." This youngster has "at least learned to live."—Montreal Gazette.

TRUTH WILL OUT

THERE are, at the moment, two reports about the Burma Road. The Japs said they closed the road by bombing as soon as the British reopened it, but exporters in New York say it is still open. Their shipments delivered at its tide-water terminal are moving ahead, which they would not be doing if it were closed. It is easier at any time to believe the exporters than a government communique, at this time more easy than usual because the exporters have no reason for trying to deceive the world.

NATURAL TARGET

THE Parliament Buildings are about the most conspicuous in London. They occupy a long sector of the Thames Embankment beside Westminster Bridge and there are two towers—the one in which the big clock and Big Ben are housed, and Victoria Tower, at the opposite end, where the Upper Chamber is. Bombs have already damaged the Victoria Tower and the Lord's area. The Thames forms a natural guide to raiders. They could not miss picking out the Parliament Buildings, even on a dark night.—St. Thomas Times-Journal.

Enough Supplies At Gibraltar For Year Seige

LONDON, Nov. 19 (AP)—British military circles, weighing persistent reports that the Axis powers plan an assault through Spain on Gibraltar, said yesterday that the Rock has been considerably strengthened since the war began. They added that they couldn't quite see how the Axis could take this fortress, which has been British since 1704.

They admitted that Britain might not be able to use her naval base at Gibraltar if the peninsula were attacked, but declared that the fortress itself could hold out for at least a year without needing supplies from the outside.

Any attack would mean slaughter for the attackers, these observers said, while the defenders in the "world's best deep air-raid shelter" would be comparatively safe.

Roof 200 Feet Thick

Axis forces would have to make a frontal assault to have a chance of capturing Gibraltar, and machine-gunners, protected by 200 feet of solid rock above them, would be there to meet attacking troops.

Any idea of an attack from the sea was ruled out, they said, "as long as the British Fleet is not on the bottom of the ocean."

These authorities said Gibraltar would not be taken by surprise in any new, swift move by the Axis. While it has not been tried in modern war, it remains a "good piece of rock," they said.

It could not be taken from the sea while the British Fleet was around, and it could not be taken from the air, for the defending forces in the honeycombed rock would not be worried about bombs exploding far above them, nor could it be battered into submission by far-off guns, they stated, for the Rock is too solid for such attrition.

Will Have to Storm It

If the Axis powers want Gibraltar, they will have to storm it by sending massed troops along a narrow strip of land covered by heavy British machine-gun fire. It is "most unlikely" that attacking troops could get through in formidable numbers, they contend.

These observers pointed out that at present the Axis neither has permission to use troops and guns from positions in Spain, nor has Spain been brought into the war, and added it is "by no means certain" that Spain wants to fight Britain.

The size and number of guns in Gibraltar, and the strength of the garrison, are among Britain's most closely guarded military secrets, but it is known that the authorities have poured great quantities of weapons particularly all types of anti-aircraft guns, into the fortress since 1938.

Since the war began more guns, stocks of ammunition and stores of food have gone to Gibraltar, while women and children have been evacuated to Britain for safety and to lessen the drain on supplies if the Rock should face the necessity of holding out for a long spell without assistance.

Bancroft Scene Of Two Crashes

BANCROFT, Nov. 19—(ENS). — An accident occurred on Sunday afternoon on the Monk Road, six miles west of Bancroft, when a truck driven by William Switzer, and a car driven by Oscar Card, became involved Switzer was proceeding towards town and was just negotiating a sharp bend in the road when the Card car appeared. Card apparently applied his brakes, which caused his car to skid and the rear of his vehicle crashed Switzer's truck, forcing the later over a four-foot hill, the truck landing on its cab with four wheels in the air. Switzer, his brother and Elvin Bruce were in the cab, but only suffered a few cuts and abrasions. The accident was investigated by County Constable G. P. Wells of Bancroft.

Friday's fall of snow in the village was the cause of another accident on Main Street, when a car driven by Leslie Sutherland of Monteagle, skidded on the slippery road at Kennedy's corner and shot diagonally across the street and sideswiped Jack Vance's truck being driven by Neil Martin. Both vehicles suffered minor damages.

Tribute Is Paid R.C. Braund At Army Temple

The life work in Peterborough of Sergeant-Major Ralph C. Braund as a soldier of the Salvation Army and also as a citizen was extolled Sunday afternoon at a tributary meeting in his honor and also in congratulation to him for the distinction of being the only Canadian to receive the Order of the Founder, bestowed on him by the commanding officer of the Army, General George L. Carpenter.

Not in the things of substance and possession, and in that respect Mr. Braund had accomplished, but as one of the young men in the ranks of the Salvation Army who had accepted a responsibility in the promotion of young people's work and had carried it on for many years, it was in that service, affecting the impressionable lives of many hundreds of children, that the large public meeting at the Temple Sunday afternoon recognized Mr. Braund's finest contribution to this community.

It was also realized that in giving himself so fully to this important department of the Army in Peterborough, Sergeant-Major Braund had won a high place in the appreciation of the staff of the Army, finally earning for him the Order of the Founder.

Colonel George Peacock who came down from Toronto for the occasion said it would be interesting it it were possible to reduce to financial terms the contribution Mr. Braund had made to the welfare of Peterborough in helping direct a stream of children into the right ways of life through his influence as head of the Sunday School.

Mayor Hamliton extended the community's congratulations to Mr. Braund and on the honor which had come to him from the head of the Army, and referred to the prominent place he had attained in the life of Peterborough, and the broad constructive influence he had been.

Alderman Gordon stressed the importance of Mr. Braund's faithful performance of duty as the leader of the Sunday School of the Army for many years, a work that called for some person to assume and give himself to it in an earnest spirit of self-denial and constancy. Mr. Gordon said it would be impossible to estimate the value of Sergt.-Major Braund's assistance to the succession of local officers of the Army, his interest in the junior department which had flourished under his supervision. However, it was obvious, Mr. Gordon said, that the highest officer in the Army, and staff officers, were well aware of Mr. Braund's work. The conferring of the Order of the Founder was an expression of that understanding and appreciation, and all Mr. Braund's friends in Peterborough were happy in the recognition which had come to him.

J. J. Cunningham spoke as treasurer of the Corps and an associate of Mr. Braund in its progress and development, and the meeting closed with Sergt.-Major Braund's thanks to the assembly and those who attended the meeting for their kind expressions to himself and their interest in the Army's work.

CONVICT'S DAUGHTER

By RUTH RAY KANE

READ THIS FIRST:

Summoned to state penitentiary, where her father lies near death, Lona Ackerman is dismayed when he fails to recognize her. He is serving a life sentence for a murder which occurred when he sought to avenge his daughter's honor. Finding a friend in Jim Claridge, Lona had just begun to take a new interest in life when the prison warden telegraphed her of her father's illness. Alone in the world, she had spent months finding jobs, then losing them when it became known she was a convict's daughter. Finally Jim had found her a new position, saw more and more of her, until they fell in love.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY.

CHAPTER FOURTEEN.

Hour after hour Lona sat there waiting outside her father's door in the prison hospital, waiting for the moment when he should know her. Around her went on the grim routine of the place. She heard the clanging of bells in the prison yard outside. Now and then there came to her ears the sound of dragging feet in the semblance of a march. There wetre bars at every window, bars that seemed to keep out the very sunshine that must, by now, be beating down with the full vigor of the summer day. Prison grey was on every figure she caught sight of; even the noonday meal she could scarcely choke down through her dry throat was brought to her by a shadowy figure in the eternal grey.

Twice during that interminable day they allowed her to tip-toe back into the box-like room where her father's wasted figure still labored on the narrow bed. He took no notice of her presence either time. His weak voice seemed ever weaker, and his rambling words were mumbled through the hardness of his breathing.

"The crisis will come to-night," the doctor told her, shaking his head. "We'll keep you on call."

"He's got to know me;" she told him desperately. "He cant die without knowing I'm here."

By nightfall she hated the place. Hated it with an unreasoning, hunted hatred that made her shudder as she thought of the thousands of men shut up like beasts behind these grey unyielding walls, barred for ever, some of them, from the sun and the rain and the stars. The very air seemed to stifle her, and the sight of the bars on the windows burned into her brain.

The lights had flashed on and the noises of the day had quieted into a semblance of peace when the warden came to her again, his kindly face pitying, and his eyes concerned.

"You must have a rest, miss," he ordered her in his courtly way. "A walk in the air. Mrs. Lewis sent me to bring you over to the house."

"But I can't leave. He might want me any time, now." She appealed to the nurse. "He might wake up and—know me.'

The nurse shook her head. "It'll be hours yet before he can possibly know you. I'd go if I were you."

"But what if he should—die?"

"He won't. We'll send for you at the first sign you're needed."

"Come, miss." The warden was helping her to her feet with a kindly hand beneath her elbow. "Warden's orders." He smiled, and she remembered he was accustomed to being obeyed.

"It would do me good to get some air," she conceded.

Outside, the grim walks stretched from grey stone building to grey stone building. Deserted now, they seemed more like the patiently landscaped paths of a spinster's garden than what they were. The toil of countless unwilling hands showed in every flower bed, every velvety stretch of lawn. Pride she found it difficult to understand was in the warden's voice as he pointed out his own private bed of flowering gladioli flanking the high windows of the home where he lived with his wife. Tall and straight, each slender, blossom-laden spire lifted its length regally toward the patch of sky hemmed in by the monotonous grey walls.

They brought a sob choking from Lona's throat, those gladioli. Daddy had loved them so, at home. In the centre of the bed, she saw them, a ring of deep blue, the sort he had especially cultivated in the old days, his own particular brand, and she turned to the warden with a question in her eyes.

He nodded, comprehending. "He was wizard with flowers." A huge sigh shook the man's shoulders. "We'll miss him. This bed was his pride. We sort of left the landscaping up to him," he offered, seeing that she was interested. "He puttered about with it at first, but these last two years he's been in full charge here. I think it made him more contented."

"I'm glad." The load that was dragging at her heart lifted a little as she looked over the beautiful grounds with eyes that saw them anew. At least he had had some pleasure these dreadful years. Next to her and his home, Daddy had loved his flowers. They hadn't taken everything away from him, then.

She left the warden's side and went impulsively across the green lawn to the gladiola bed. From the very heart of the blue centreplece she selected the most velvety bloom Its touch on her hand was like a caress, and she turned away that the warden might not see the tears in her eyes as she buried her face in its fragrant freshness.

"Daddy," she whispered, and for an instant she was back in the old garden at home, back in the old days, before she had even known there was such a place as this.

After the glory of the gladioli garden, the grey walls seemed bleaker than ever, as she went with the warden on up the stone pathway to his home. Over in the barred windows across the yard, lights flashed suddenly, simultaneously, and she knew that the prisoners were back in their cells for the night, supper over, nothing to do but wait....wait for morning and another meaningless day.

From the lighted windows countless eyes seemed to be watching, staring at her enviously, and she shivered. The sense that she was never alone had possessed her ever since the gate had clanged shut behind her this morning, and it seemed, now, to be intensified. She wondered, suddenly, what the warden's wife would be like. What would it do to a woman, living in this atmosphere, year in and year out, this world of barred windows, and stone walls?

Mrs. Lewis was not at the door to meet her husband, and he called to her with an anxiety that Lona thought must be habitual as he ushered the girl nnto the severely furnished hall.

"Emma." He frowned when there was no answer, and called again. "She must be busy," he told Lona, still frowning. "Odd, she sent me for you....Emma!"

A faint scraping sound like a mouse scurrying across a polished floor sounded through the door at the left, and the warden strode toward it grimly, his hand going to his hip pocket in a significant gesture that chilled Lona.

The door opened of its own accord when he reached it, and a sudden choked scream forced itself through Lona's lips. A man in grey was standing there, facing them, teeth bared, a gun in his hand.

"Get 'em up, warden," he ground out. "Quick."

Slowly the warden's hands left his pockets and went reluctantly upward, and the beginning of another scream rose from Lona's throat.

It was a scream she never uttered. A hand from behind her closed suddenly over her opened mouth, and her body was clamped back against another man who clutched her so hard she could feel his heavy breathing. Frantically she struggled, trying to break free.

"Shut up!" a growling voice ordered in her ear. "One peep and youre a goner." Something hard she knew was a gun was shoved into her back and she ceased her struggling.

"We want clothes!" the man guarding Warden Lewis ordered next. "A coupla your suits'll do, warden. Get 'em, Louie! I'll manage these two. While we're waitin' you kin order out your car, warden. Tell 'em t' send it to the door, you'll be drivin' it yourself. Come on, get goin'! There's the phone right beside you."

'You can't get away with this, Lefty." Warden Lewis voice was cold now. His whole face had

Havelock Trustee Boards Review Month

HAVELOCK, Nov. 19 — (ENS).—The Havelock Public and High School Boards asembled on Monday evening for their joint November session, with Chairman Bernard Smith presiding. Present were Trustees D. F. Miller and Mrs. G. Rigby of the High School body and Trustees H. W. Roche, G. Whitney, D. Anderson, and J. Covert of the Public School Board.

Correspondence included the annual grant from the Department of Education in the amount of $1,847.64; the resignation of Miss Mabel W. Stillwell from the High School teaching staff, effective in December; and from the Navy League, asking permission to canvass the local schools.

S. D. Rendell, High School inspector, also notified the Board that he would shortly pay the local High School a visit.

On the motion of Trustees Anderson and Rigby, it was decided to change the hour of meeting from 7.30 to 8 o'clock.

Principal A. M. Gay, in a written report, said that the total enrollment for the past month was 179 pupils, with an average attendance of 162.31. The classrooms were visited by parents on Tuesday and Friday afternoons last week, in conjunction with the Educational Week program. He reported that the staff had co-operated well in an effort to make a worthwhile display of their pupils' work.

Caretaker R. Buchanan reported that the scrap iron had been removed from the basement as ordered at the last meeting.

The following accounts were passed and ordered paid on motion of Trustees Rigby and Covert:

Teachers Offer Services Free

BELLEVILLE, Nov. 19—With the year's estimates practically exhausted, the Belleville Board of Education was faced with the possible closing of their night school classes conducted at the Belleville Collegiate and had gone as far as to recommend that such classes, as conducted after the end of this month, would have to be carried on at no cost to the board. However, through the generosity of the teachers and officials of the night school it was announced at Friday night's board meeting that the classes will be continued for the remainder of the semester, with the teachers signifying their willingness to carry on without remuneration during the months of December.

Robber Outruns Girl 10 Floors Then Meets Law

TORONTO, Nov. 19.—A wild chase from the tenth floor of an uptown hotel yesterday ended at the ground floor entrance in the arrest on a theft charge of John Haddow, 25, of Salem Avenue, whose appearance coincided neatly with the arrival of Detective Sergeant Peter Strohm.

Haddow was chased down the flights of stairs by Elsie Ahompaa, 546 Spadina Avenue, a maid employed in the hotel, who told police Haddow had stolen her purse containing $1.10, some keys and private papers.

The presence of the detective sergeant was not accidental. While Miss Ahompaa was chasing the suspect from the tenth floor, shouting, "stop thief" and "police," another girl employee telephoned police. A flash went out on the police radio and was picked up by Strohm, who was in a police radio car a short distance away from the hotel.

By the time Haddow and the girl negotiated the ten floors Strohm was at the scene awaiting developments. He did not have long to wait. He saw a man come dashing through the swing doors with a girl right behind him, and the officer grabbed him.

Miss Ahompaa had enough breath left to tell police about the matter. She had put her purse and street clothes in a cupboard on the tenth floor when she came to work. Later she saw a man carrying her purse and he started to run when she shouted at him.

Haddow was taken to Belmont Street Station and will appear in police court this morning.

Frisky Frisco Wins Dufferin Race

TORONTO, Nov. 19 — Only one of the four-harness races carded at Dufferin Park on Monday was completed. Long post delays in scoring and a late start delayed proceedings and only nine heats were completed when darkness intervened.

C. L. Martin's Frisky Frisco topped the first race, the only one in which all three heats were contested. The game gelding came back to win the second and third dashes after suffering interference in the opening event. He was driven by his owner, a Kalamazoo, Mich., horseman.

SPORTS — DAY BY DAY

By FRED D. CRAIG

The name of Joseph B. Hay probably means nothing to the army of bowlers in Peterborough. Yet Joe Hay who died suddenly in Toronto Saturday night was the man who revived the game in this city, 30 odd years ago. Formerly sports editor of the old Toronto News he came to Peterborough a few years before the war and opened a modern bowling alley in the Victoria Hall. The game soon became a popular fad here. A City League of twelve teams—The Examiner was represented by two—flourished for several seasons and scores of folk who had never trundled a mineralite ball down a polished alley were made ten-pin conscious. Some of the curling fraternity took to the game in a big way and became adepts in the alley pastime. Wm McIlroy, C.P.R. agent, the late George Cairns, Herb Martin, Billy Boyd, Clair Gutterson and many other citizens were regulars in the ten-pin activities of that day. The Walter Johnson of the period was a bank clerk named Hemstead who tossed the fastest ball on record, with all the speed of the Big Train but with little of his control.

* * * * * *

Joe Hay, was of course, well known in Peterborough before he came here to live. He was secretary of the Ontario Rugby Football Union during a period when Peterborough teams were prominent in the activities of that body and one of the sporting stories he liked to tell dealt with a famous playoff game between Toronto Victorias and the Petes at Lindsay. Peterborough ran a special train to the Scugog town filled with fans determined to avenge the assault upon Crowley. Joe Hay sold the tickets at the gate that day and he often said afterward that the Peterborough fans asked only two questions. The first was "How much are the tickets?" and the second "Is Lou Marsh here?" Incidentally, Lou wasn't; he had failed to make the trip.

Jimmy Wilson, veteran catcher of the Cincinnati Reds has been signeded as the new manager of the Chicago Cubs and the fans will wish him well in his new post, although with certain misgivings. The managership of the Cubs is almost as hot a seat as that of the Cleveland Indians' pilot and the popular Wilson, one of the heroes of the World Series starts out with one strike on him on that account. However, he has hooked the Cubs for a two-year contract and the figure is likely to be large enough to make the cagey old catcher overlook the rough spots on the trail. Fandom will look for improved work by Chicago pitchers next season and perhaps in that department Wilson will be able to make a showing that will clinch his job.

Juniors Will Rally Tonight

There will be a warm welcome on the mat for all junior hockey players looking for a place on this year's Peterborough junior B team at the meeting in the Chamber of Commerce tonight. Along that line this is as good a time as any to rise up and remark that there will be numerous berths open this season for aspiring youngsters as the Young Petes will have to do considerable rebuilding. Some of last year's team have been outsprinted by old Father Time, Jack Wade is with the Young Rangers in Toronto and the result is that many gaps will have to be filled. It is a wide-open affair. Nobody is earmarked for any position and ambitious youngsters are assured of a fair chance to make good this season. A good way of starting the campaign to earn a place with the Petes would be to attend tonight's meeting and meet the gang.

Once in a while we find ourselves in agreement with Andy Lytle, Toronto sports commentator. When he comes out with something like this we are with him all the way. "It surprises me," says Andy "that the C.A.H.A. insists on retaining the word amateur. But I suppose some C.H.A. leaders cling to it from sentiment while others, sharper on the coin bit, realize it has value in case the hockey-going public (C.H.A. brand) still prefers to be gulled a little." The truth of that comment surely is self-evident. When players are travelling around the so-called amateur loops with no questions asked no matter how many drift to the Maritimes or anywhere else what is to be gained by adhering to a word that means absolutely nothing—unless of course it is that some of the controlling powers believe that it is good business to try to fool at least a section of the public.

* * * * * *

Jack Adams, Detroit manager, once remarked that he could find a hundred defence men who could rush but had difficulty in finding a couple who could block. The comment of the Red Wing leader is called to the attention of some of those writers who have already nominated Wally Stanowski of the Leafs for the N.H.L. All-Star team. There is no doubt of his speed and rushing ability and he will pop in quite a mess of goals this season. But the real test of a defence man is not his attacking strength but his success in handling enemy attacks. Stanowksi's value as a defence man will depend upon the number of times enemy raids go around his side of the ice and how few times he makes the wrong moves. Go over the All-Star guards from year to year and you will fail to find one selected for his rushing ability.

* * * * * *

Time To Snap Out Of It

The two clubs in the N.H.L. that were expected to run one-two this season—and probably will in the long run—go into action again tonight and both of them had better snap out of the doldrums and get in there with a win. The Bruins who have yet to beat anybody this season in spite of Art Ross's declaration that this is the greatest team of all time will be at home to the Detroit Red Wings who are steaming along at top speed and would be tickled to death to add another two points to their total at the expense of the Boston gang. Lester Patrick's stream-lined Rangers who have only won one game out of three, although no club has beaten them have an easier task than the Bruins. They play their fellow townsmen, the Amerks and should be able to take the measure of Red Dutton's mixture of veterans and kids.

You would search through the pages of sport history in vain to find anything to equal the Dartmouth-Cornell episode. Saturday with seconds to go and Dartmouth about to pull one of the season's biggest upsets by trimming the unbeaten Cornell machine, the latter threw a touchdown pass, and won out 7 to 3. Dartmouth's captain protested that the Cornell team had been given an extra down but he was over-ruled. However, pictures of the game and press box statistics have since convinced Referee Friesell that he made a mistake and that the winning touchdown was scored on a fifth down, instead of on the fourth as he had thought. Now Cornell has conceded the win to Dartmouth 3 to 0, the only blemish on the team's record this season.

After four straight defeats the Oshawa G-Men have finally broken into the win column at the expense of Jerry Laflamme's Londoners who were beaten 5 to 2 at Oshawa last night. The Oshawa gang led by 1 to 0 going into the last frame but outscored the Cockneys 4 to 2 in a hectic last period in which there was plenty of action and more fighting in 20 minutes than the Italian navy has done since Italy entered the war. Roy Covert figured in two of the Oshawa goals. Toronto Marlboros climbed up into a tie for the senior leadership with Hamilton by nosing out Port Colborne last night 4 to 3.

Sporting Chili Con Carne: Lou Hayman says he has a hunch Argos will win Saturday. The Oarsmen, however, will need more than a hunch ....Ottawa and Argos dominate the All-Star Big Four team, getting nine out of the twelve spots. Noseworthy and Burton, Montreal and Doug Turner, Hamilton were the only outsiders to crash the team....George Allen of the Black Hawks has a big edge in goals scored. He has potted the rubber five times in five games which is shooting in any man's league....Arnold Jorgens who got $35,000 out of World Series baseball as a second-string catcher with the Yanks, although he hardly ever got into a ball game is quitting baseball. Perhaps he is ashamed to take the money any longer.

Wants To Cultivate Her Voice

Alice Marble who, among other accomplishments, reigned for quite some time as queen of the tennis world, has finally agreed to a professional career. Above all else Miss Marble wants to sing, and for that reason she chose to turn pro in order to earn enough money to cultivate her voice. Queen Alice has agreed to sign for $25,000, and is shown writing that figure on her mirror with a lipstick.

Year's Awards Presented Scholars At Havelock Amateur Night

HAVELOCK, Nov. 19—(ENS).—Attended by a capacity audience of parents and friends, the Havelock Home and School Association sponsored a most successful "amateur contest" on Friday evening in the Town Hall auditorium. The contest was open to all students of the local public and high schools, and the entries were divided into four groups, with first and second prizes awarded in each case. In addition special prizes were given to all of the smaller children who participated. Jean and Joan Quinn, nine-year-old twins, daintily attired in ankle-length yellow dresses, with matching caps, and carrying colored parasols, captured first prize in the class open to public school group numbers, with their pleasant vocal rendition of "We want to go to the zoo." A close second were Helen and John Anderson, who dressed as an old-fashioned couple, sang "Reuben, Reuben."

First prize for the best individual number by a public school pupil was won by Jacqueline Saunders, who tap-danced and sang the popular novelty tune, "Ferryboat Serenade." Jackie wore a becoming red and black dancing costume. Second place was taken by Wallace Young, who performed a clog-dance.

"Till the lights of London shine again" was the song which Jeryne Brown contributed to win first honors in the high school individual group. A piano solo by Betty Holdcroft took second prize.

Singing and acting "Romeo and Juliet," Allan and Ross Goheen, dressed in appropriate costumes, were best among the high school group contributions. A vocal duet, entitled "The navy's here," by Margaret Anderson and Marion Forsythe captured second place.

Awards Presented.

While the judges were reaching their final decisions at the conclusion of the contest, the presentation of the annual high school field day prizes was made, and also the Home and School proficiency awards to the outstanding entrance and matriculation students.

The A. Leeson and Son trophy, emblematic of the senior girls' championship, went to Helen McMullen, and the Hubbel Hardware Co. trophy for senior boys to George Rigby. Cups were given also to junior girls' champion, Jean Hubbel, and junior boys, Clifford Harnden and Walter Nobes (ties for first).

The field day awards were presented by D. C. Drinkwalter, member of the high school teaching staff.

High chool entrance awards were presented by Mrs. George Rigby, vice-chairman of the School Board, to Betty Holdcroft and Ross Goheen. Honors for the most proficient senior matriculation student went to James Watson, and to the best junior matriculant to Jean Rogers.

A particularly pleasing contribution to the program, but not entered in the competition, was an interesting novelty skit by Public School Principal Allan Gay, and his pupils of Grade VIII. Their amusing version of a radio musical program, as viewed within the studio walls, was widely applauded by the enthusiastic audience. The piano accompaniment was played by Principal Gay, for this skit, entitled the "Back Home Hour."

Mrs. Charles Taylor, president of the Home and School Association, ably took over the duties of chairman for the evening, in the absence of D. F. Miller, who was to have been the master-of-ceremonies. The program committee included the president and both past presidents of the organization, Mrs. Walter Nobes and Mrs. George Rigby. The judges, mostly rural school teachers, and all from outside the village, included Miss Shewchuk, Mr. Parkin, Mr. Booth, Mrs. Young, Mrs. H. Morgan, and Miss B. French. Homemade candy was sold during intermission, and the executive announced that the total receipts of evening amounted to about $50.

Among the items included on the program were: Recitation, "The Lamp-lighter," by Shirley Hart; dance, "Sailor's Hornpipe," by Helen Revoir; vocal solo, "Till the Lights of London Shine Again," by Buddy Peters; vocal solo and concertina accompaniment, "Holy Night," by Jacqueline Puffer; Dutch song and dance by Dorothy Ann Holdcroft; song, "Three Wee Froggies," by Jackie Southward; song, "Pony Trip," by Graham Rowat; song, "Our Country's Name is Canada," by Betty Jennings and Joan Paige; song, "Tra-la-la," by Joan Youmans, Dorothy Ann Holdcroft and Beulah Chase; song, "Down With Democracy," Jean Peters, Jackie Puffer and Colleen Nicholson; song, "Little Boy Blue," by Bobbie Hill and Grenville Young; song, "Billie Boy," by Teenie Hill, Pat Cummings, Muriel Cosgrove and Billy Cosgrove; vocal solo, "Fight for King and Country," by Ruth Peters; vocal duet, "Sing Me to Sleep," by Dora Ketchen and Margaret Anderson.

Sports Spice

By EDDIE BRIETZ

LOUISVILLE, Ky., Nov. 19—(AP)—Jimmy Wilson made the Cubs lay plenty on the line and don't let anybody kid you. He was getting ten grand for coaching the Reds—and no managerial worries....A formal announcement says Max Baer will open in New Haven in "Hiya Gentlemen" on Thanksgiving Day—but it neglects to say which Thanksgiving Day.

Just in case you're wondering, the conductor of this bureau of information is down here sitting in on the annual gabfest of managing editors of Associated Press newspapers. ...We recall this slick city with mingled grief and pain....It was here that we were bounced for the first time in our newspaper career. ....The old Evening Post (since deceased) gave us the heave-ho on a cold winter morning in December, 1917....But it's still Louisville, slick as ever, with just as many pretty dolls and just as many fast ponies—only sometimes they run the wrong way.

Sports Cocktail

Well, it seems Carl Snavely, leading exponent of football movies, was beaten by same Saturday....Three of Al Davis' bodyguards, who tried to slug a couple of sports writers after the Zivic fight, got the works from Johnny Broderick, two-fisted detective ace..."The Angel of Sweden," one of the many imitators of Maurice Tillett, is the local wrestling rave....And friends of Burper Dick Shikat, who feared he was in a Nazi concentration camp, will be interested to learn he is groaning and grunting in Buenos Aires, just like there wasn't a war on.

High Scores Rolled By C.G.E. Bowlers

At the rate "Bud" White of the C.G.E. is hitting the pins at Duffus Alleys this year it seems that he will be the man to beat for the season's high average score. Another 852 count was the mark he chalked up last night, which was only a continuation of the terrific pace he has set since the alleys opened a couple of months ago. Another three-star performance for yesterday was Ivan Pearson's 806 in the De Laval loop while Ed Hollingsworth of the C.G.E. started off the week's big singles with a 359 game.

Good scores were:

A.Y.P.A. League: H. MacKay 702 (340), R. Mason 608, Mrs. R. Pammett 585 (269), Miss E. Biddle 534 and Miss E. Abraham a 212 single.

That rich, ripe PICOBAC aroma!

• No man can resist the fragrance of Picobac — and when you smoke it, other men ask enviously, "What's that tobacco you're smoking?"

Then you'll be proud to tell them how little it costs you for so much enjoyment. For Picobac — the pick of Canada's Burley crop — is always a mild, cool, sweet smoke. If you offer your friend a pipeful, he's sure to agree that —

"It DOES taste good in a pipe!"

"The fragrance of Picobac is a promise," says Mr. Picobac, "a promise of pleasure that is always fulfilled."

SIX ROUGH RIDERS AND THREE ARGONAUTS ON ALL-STAR TEAM

First Baseman Turns On Glamor

From the softball diamond to the movie sound stages was the step taken by pretty Katherine Rohrer. She starred at first base and at bat, LEFT, on a Los Angeles softball team for two years until she won a screen test, and then a contract from a movie studio. The picture at RIGHT proves she has no trouble measuring up as a glamorous young actress.

Coulter, Tommy Top Votes For All Stars

TORONTO, Nov. 19 — (CP). — Bobby Coulter, the finest little football general of them all in 1936, still is good enough to call them for the experts in the Interprovincial Union after three seasons away from the football wars.

Coulter was the choice of 16 writers and coaches in the Big Four cities as quarterback for the Union's 1940 All-Star team, announced by The Canadian Press last night. The voters surrounded him with two teammates from Toronto Argonauts, two of Montreal's stars, Hamilton's great centre, and no less than six from the champion Ottawa Rough Riders.

But there was only one other player to receive the acclaim accorded rapid Robert, who won the quarterback berth on the CP's 1936 All-Eastern and went into retirement after that season. Coulter and the only man who has rivalled his running all season, Ottawa's Andy Tommy, each received 15 of the 16 votes.

How They Line Up

Here is the 1940 team:

Flying Wing—Andy Tommy, Ottawa.
Half—Gord Noseworthy, Montreal.
Half—Tony Golab, Ottawa.
Half (secondary defence)—Sam Sward, Ottawa.
Quarterback — Bobby Coulter, Argonauts.
Snap—Doug Turner, Hamilton.
Inside — Len Staughton, Argonauts.
Inside—George Fraser, Ottawa.
Middle—Bunny Wadsworth, Ottawa.
Middle—Dave Sprague, Ottawa.
Outside—Bernie Thornton, Argonauts.
Outside—Eddie Burton, Montreal.

A mite of a man who is all heart, Coulter is fitted ideally to lead this club which has an abundance of plunging and kicking power to make up for the absence of any outstanding forward passer. Coulter could take up the slack in that department, too, with big Noseworthy to back him up.

On the ground this mythical squad would be supreme. There are no better line crushers in the East than Golab and Sprague, a veteran who has been on every Big Four all-star team since 1936, and there are no swifter and shiftier runners than Coulter and Tommy.

Two Great Punters

Noseworthy and Sward are two of the best punters. Noseworthy, besides, is a good safety man and plunger and Sward is probably the best all-round footballer in the East. The fellow can run and plunge, he can kick and catch and he is a bear on the defence at pass snatching or tackling.

There was no nip-and-tuck vote battle for any position on the backfield or, for that matter, the line, where seven experienced veterans of the gridiron are assembled. Sward got nine votes, Golab and Noseworthy seven each. Only Bill Stukus, Argonauts; Bill Davies, Montreal, and Orville Burke, Ottawa, got more than two votes among the Union's other capable backs.

Twelve men chose Turner as the team's centre. He has had the best season of a career that was brilliant throughout his University of Toronto playing days. A big man, he is remarkably fast, a good tackler and can size up a play quicker than most men. Jack Taylor of Ottawa was the only other man to receive consideration for the job.

Sprague and Wadsworth received nine votes each, their only competition coming from Tommy Burns who got the eye of five selectors. Staughton had eight for one inside job and Fraser seven. At the ends, Thornton got all but three votes and Burton had seven to five for Len Wright of Hamilton.

Bruins' Terror Fades For Red Wings

(By the Canadian Press.)

Once upon a time teams in the National Hockey League used to quake at the thought of entering Boston for a game against the Bruins. Those days haven't passed completely as yet, but there is a suspicion that the Bruins aren't the terrors of old.

The new Bruins will be bidding for their first victory of the season tonight when they play host to Detroit Red Wings, who have done pretty well in their five contests. Where the Bruins have only one tie to show in three contests, the Wings have won two, tied two and lost only one so far.

The Bruins have always had the reputation of being among the better defensive teams in the league as well as being noted for high scoring, but they haven't done so well on either count so far this season.

Eleven goals have gone by Frankie Brimsek in the three Boston games, while the Bruins have been able to score only seven. Their opponents tonight have tallied only 11 goals in five games, but have been scored on only 10 times.

Only one other clash is on the schedule for tonight and it brings together the two New York clubs—Americans and Rangers — in their first scheduled meeting. In a pre-season series the teams wound up even after six games, with each club winning three.

Rangers are the only undefeated club in the league, with a record of one victory and two draws in three games played. Americans, although they have scored only five goals in four games, have a victory and a draw to make up a total of three points.

Peck Talks Things Over With His Bosses

Wilson Handed Position As Cub Pilot

CHICAGO, Nov. 19.—(AP)—Jimmy Wilson of Philadelphia, 40-year-old hero of the 1940 world series, agreed yesterday to sign a two-year contract as manager of Chicago Cubs of the National League.

The veteran catcher-coach of the world's championship Cincinnati Reds replaces Charles Leo (Gabby) Hartnett, who was ousted last Wednesday.

Signing of the contract, a mere formality, will be delayed until possibly tomorrow pending the arrival of Wilson's unconditional release from Cincinnati. Warren Giles, general manager of the Reds, has consented to give Wilson his release and to bring the papers to Chicago.

His salary—reported to be about $20,000 annually—was not revealed, but Wilson characterized his pay as "reasonable." He insisted on a two-year contract, according to James T. Gallagher, general manager of the club—a departure from the custom followed by Owner Philip K. Wrigley in giving one-year contracts.

Wilson said that he would not be a player-manager.

"I am through as a player," he said. "I knew I was through catching two years ago, but the emergency existed at Cincinnati and I simply had to go in. I'm tired sitting up until three a.m. in a Turkish bath trying to get the aches and pains out of my system so I could play the next day."

Wilson revealed that one of his coaches would be Dick Spalding, former outfielder and coach of Philadelphia Phillies during three of Wilson's five years as manager of that club.

He's the only coach I've decided upon," Wilson said. "He will be my 'close' man, doing a lot of the work and developing players. I'll coach at third base and the other coach, as yet unnamed, will be at first."

Thus the shakeup of the Cubs probably will remove coaches Johnny Corriden, who served four previous Cub managers, and George Uhle, added to the staff last season.

Wilson hinted that he would retain Jerome (Dizzy) Dean, the Cubs' famous $185,000 pitcher, who has been of little value due to an ailing arm.

"Dean is a big help to any ball club because of his color and spirit," Wilson said. "How are you going to get along without a guy like him? He's a big help."

Wilson faces a major problem in organizing a catching staff with Hartnett, who served the Cubs 19 years, no longer available.

No Popoff

Jimmy Wilson hadn't been manager of the Chicago Cubs more than 15 minutes before he let it be known that he is no popoff.

"Why should I start talking right away about what I am going to do?" he asked. "I'm no popoff. I want to look the situation over before making any recommendations."

Wilson, however, revealed immediately that he wouldn't back away from any attractive trades for material.

"While I saw plenty of the Cubs last season," he said, "I wasn't looking at them with the same slant I now must take as their manager. But there is one thing certain. I'll listen to all trade propositions. I won't hestiate to act if I can make a trade beenficial to the team. From what little I know at his time I figure the big need is pitching."

Cincinnati Reds Now Out Of Red

CINCINNATI, Nov. 19—(AP). — Cincinnati Reds' stockholders learned Monday that winning a world championship helped the club clear its indebtedness, put a net profit of $274,051 in the bank, and paid dividends totalling $84,770, or $12 a common share.

Warren C. Giles, vice-president and general manager, read the report of President Powel Crosley, Jr., who was unable to attend the annual stockholders' meeting.

Crosley's statements warned against "resting on the oars" for the team that jumped in four years from last place to its first world series triumph in twenty-one years.

The Reds played to 850,180 cash customers at home in 1940 and 656,884 on the road, against 981,443 and 770,016 respectively last year.

The company paid off $200,500 of indebtedness during the year, paying every note outstanding. A total of $195,559 was spent for the purchase of players' contracts and for operating the six farm clubs "over and above the amount received from the sale of players, contracts and income from the farm system."

The stockholders were also reminded that the gross take from the seven-game 1940 world series was $194,891, against $86,852 from the four-game 1939 affair.

Sailors Edged By Dukes 4-3, Oshawa Wins 5-2

TORONTO, Nov. 19 — (CP). — They're not as classy as the Toronto Goodyears of last season, but Toronto Marlboroughs are in the same position today as the Goodyears were all last winter—first place in the Ontario Hockey Association's Senior "A" division.

The Queen City Dukes edged out a lucky 4-3 victory at Port Colborne over the hometown Sailors last night to vault into a first-place tie with the idle Hamilton Tigers. In the only other game, London Streamliners and Oshawa went into a last-place deadlock with St. Catharines when Oshawa won its first game of the season, 5-2.

The tilts served as a notice that Marlboroughs, lacking the playing strength of the Goodyears whom they replaced in the circuit, and Oshawa, late in getting organized this season, are coming along fast. They'll be tough to beat from now on and that makes for one of the best-balanced Senior leagues in years.

The Dukes took victory on a goal awarded them in the last four minutes of play. Eddie King was credited with the counter after a shot from a scramble, although the goal judge did not flash his light. After the shot, however, Referee Charles Talbot blew his whistle and awarded the tally.

Rearguard Jimmy Drummond, fast finding his skating legs after a training spell with the Non-Permanent Active Militia, scored the first two Toronto tallies. Lanky Murray Ezeard scored the third after Finkbeiner gave the Ports their first goal in the second session. Art Thompson and Eddie Young evened the count in the final frame before the Toronto "victory scramble."

A 12-Penalty Tilt

London and Oshawa put on a rugged display at Oshawa in a game that saw 12 penalties issued, including a 10-minute misconduct awarded to Smack Allen of London for shooting the puck down the ice after a face-off had been called, and one to Charley Stapleford for arguing with Referee Ken Holmshaw.

Carr-Harris, a Kingston product who had a trial with Detroit Red Wings; Jimmy Thompson, Gar Peters, Jerry Cooper and Roy Covert were the Oshawa marksmen.

Ilio Marzo, an Acton native, scored the first London goal in the third period after Oshawa had counted four times. Dunc Galbraith snared the other Streamliner counter 11 seconds before the final whistle.

Results of the games showed Toronto and Hamilton in the league lead with eight points each; Niagara Falls and Port Colborne tied for second, two points back, and St. Catharines, Oshawa and London in the cellar position with two points each.

2 a Year Enough

WILKES-BARRE, Pa., Nov. 18.—(AP)—A new version of "like father, like son" cropped up in domestic court when a 21-year-old bride of four months charged her spouse with threats and non-support. "When I insisted he take a bath," she testified, "he told me that his father only took a bath every six months and what was good enough for his father was good enough for him."

College Bombed Students Study Outdoors

Some of the most striking word pictures to be heard in Peterborough for some time, were presented in George Street United church Monday night. The speaker was Dr. Robert McClure, of Honan, China. The occasion was the United Missionary rally of Peterborough Presbytery.

In introducing Dr. McClure, Rev. Dr. G. S. Easton, of Trinity church, pointed to his wide experience, and to his contacts in China. Dr. McClure has been in close touch with General Chiang Kai Scheck, and the contact was so intimate that he was commandeered as Field Director of the International Red Cross in China. In his capacity as a Medical Missionary, the guest has had much experience, and is more qualified to speak upon China, and Chinese.

Down the Burma Road

Beginning, Dr. McClure told of a journey down the Burma Road. It was noon hour, and the road was, as was usual at that time, deserted except for the convoy in which the speaker had been travelling. They had been making good time, because all other traffic had given the right of way to the air raids, and between 11.30 a.m. and 2.30 p.m. was the time for their expected visit. At the bottom of a hill, and around a corner, the convoy came across a group of Chinese who seemed not in the least disposed toward moving out of the way of the trucks.

Dr. McClure said that he advanced toward the members of the party with words in his mouth that wouldn't look well in print, when he found that it was a group of students in the middle of the road. They were studying modern history. Their university, one that would have compared with Oxford or Cambridge, had been bombed.

It was a better way to learn, they told Dr. McClure. When a person studies geography from a map, a river is nothing more than a wiggley line, but in this "Shoe sole geography," a river was a thing to be seen. In this case it was where two of the boys had lost their lives, both had drowned for the river was in flood. There would be no forgetting for that class where the river emptied, it was a thing never to be forgotten to them, and the mountains too. Two of the smaller girls had lost their lives in crossing the mountain, they wouldn't forget it soon.

Walked Many Miles

The members of the university had walked 850 miles since the buildings had fallen. They had walked another 732 miles after their second hideout, a limestone cave, had been discovered by the enemy. This was where they had been found on the road; after they had walked 1,582 miles.

The churches and the schools are the first to feel the heel of the enemy, the speaker said, because the churches and the schools are the sources of the morale of the people. The university had been destroyed when the buildings were considered to be the all, but in reality, the university was functioning more than it ever had before, he said. The essentials were there now, and they had been stripped of their trimmings. The only equipment was what the students called a "Tummy desk," a board of light plywood that could be hung around the neck of the student, and would fit into the stomach. They could write on it. These boards were fashioned to fit the original curve of the stomach, but after so much travel, and the lack of food, the boards no longer fitted, they were loose.

The war cannot hurt what is left of that college, the speaker said, the students have learned to judge what is essential, and here voiced an earnest hope that the students in this country would learn to judge the essentials without the suffering endured by Chinese.

Congregation Saved

The same conditions exist in the churches. Dr. McClure told of a Roman Catholic priest who had built a cathedral in 35 years, and had seen it blown to pieces in about four seconds. The priest said that the cathedral didn't matter, the congregation had been saved, and the church wasn't a building, it was more of an institution. A school isn't a building, and neither is a church. A school is a group of students who want to learn, and a teacher who want to teach them; a church is a group who want to worship, and a preacher who will lead them. These are the essentials. The speaker said of the priest, "He was a man whose mind was dated 1940."

In China people now go to church to worship, and not for other reasons mentioned by the speaker. Other nations should get down to the essentials. They should sift out what is effect and what is really needed.

The duty of the missionary today, is to direct in the search of what is essential. For years back, the churches of the world have prayed for an opening among the Chinese. Today such an opening exists, Dr. McClure said. The people are now impressionable as never before. They are impressionable in two different days; they may be inclined toward Christianity, or they may be inclined toward the material. The so-called Christian world is not fulfilling its duty in this direction; there are more than 35 per cent. fewer missionaries in China now than there were 15 years ago. The time to shape China is at hand, and all that could be done is going to a large degree, undone.

Think Differently

Business cannot go on as usual during wartime, the speaker said, people must think differently. The Christians in China are bearing up all right, but they wonder if there are still Christians in Canada and in other countries.

The missionaries go to China to help the Chinese, and they receive help from the Chinese themselves. An era of what might well be called equality, or even more than that has been arrived at. The Christians in the Occident need not stoop to reach the hands of those in China, there is more likelihood of their needing a stepladder to reach those hands, he said.

Dr. McClure brought a new vision to many who heard him. He vividly illustrated his arguments, and was breath-taking in his descriptions. The heroic qualities of the people among whom he has spent so many years, were told of, and of their finding the essentials of life. Throughout the address was a plea to Canada to think of things in the light of a true Christian spirit, and not to bother with the non-essentials.

From Labrador

In the afternoon, the meeting was addressed by Rev. Lester Burry of Labrador and Newfoundland. Mr. Burry said that Labrador had never before had an opportunity like the one yesterday, to be so represented at such a conference, told of many of the difficulties met by a missionary in Labrador, and of the hardships endured by some of them.

In the summer his work is done from a boat which was designed by himself, the "Glad Tidings II," and while his is called a marine mission, most of his work in done on dog sledge.

The inhabitants of Labrador are a fine type of people to work with, Mr. Burry said, and their honesty and high principles are almost beyond belief. Never has there been a case where one of the trappers stole an animal out of the trap of another, and when a stranger came into a trapping district and stole a silver fox, he was quickly found out, because he was the only one that could possibly have done such a thing, Mr. Burry said. The trappers had him up in front of them, and gave him a talking to that was so humiliating, that the speaker said it was doubtful if the man would ever think of doing such a thing again.

Ministering among the natives of Labrador is a man's sized job, Mr. Burry said, and it is a tremendous responsibility, the attempting to keep the code of morals as high as they are naturally. It is the sacrifice on the part of many that keeps the churches going, and they ask for help only when it is absolutely necessary. Some are paupers, and the need for education is strong.

Clothing is amongst the most needed of commodities, the speaker said, and the eastern provinces do much in this direction. Food is at times also scarce, especially butter and sugar. Much of his own supply goes to the old ladies and the children when he makes his calls.

The speaker expressed fear that the standards of the natives, the religious and moral standards, might be threatened when capital and industry from the outside world become factors in the social life of Labrador. It will be hard for the natives, who are, incidentally, white for the most part, to accept the different ideas of living. Mr. Burry's work includes the preparation for this event.

The health of the people of Labrador is often marvelled at by outsiders, the speaker said, there is plenty of sickness, but in the face of inadequate medical accommodation, the wonder is that there is not more of it.

A tribute was paid to the Grenfell Mission, and to its founder. A marvellous work is being done by the mission, the speaker said, but the material at its disposal is not sufficient for the needs of the country it is serving. The Mission of the United Church and the Grenfell Mission co-operate as much as possible, and one looks after the physical welfare of the people, while the other attends to the spiritual.

At the evening meeting, Mr. Burry further explained the position of the Labrador Mission, and illustrated his lecture with some splendid slides.

At 6.30 p.m. a dinner was served, and the number of people attending was a gratification to all concerned. Each of the speakers referred to the attendance which Dr. McClure said was probably the largest of its kind ever held. After the dinner the meeting was moved up into the church because the space in the dining-room had become crowded.

Rev. H. L. Roberts, the pastor of George Street Church, expressed his gratification at the attention given the meeting, and with the speakers thanked all who had put so much forward, that the meeting might be the success that it was.

Armored Car Protects Queen From Bomb Splinters

Because of the ever-present menace of bomb splinters and shrapnel from anti-aircraft shells, Queen Elizabeth now rides about bomb-torn London on her inspection tours in an armored car. Her Majesty is shown alighting from the splinter-proof juggernaut here during a visit to a bombed area. The car is proof against all but a direct hit. There was an air raid "alert" at the time this picture was taken.

and Clarence Gillis (CCF Cape Breton South), both of whom protested intensely what they claimed were unnecessary negations of practical democracy at home.

"It becomes increasingly evident that under the Defence of Canada regulations anyone may be accused of being subversive if he speaks or acts against the powers that be in this country," Mrs. Nielsen said.

In Germany, it was Jew-baiting; in Canada, Red-baiting, when the aim was to discredit someone. There was no provision in the regulations however, for the subversive activities of some financial institutions and business monopolies.

"We should not forget the fate of France," she warned. "There were those who were guilty of the downfall of that country, those who stole her democracy and relinquished it to the dictators...I think there is considerable need for the Canadian people to see a parallel of these conditions within our own boundaries.."

The Power Of Reaction

"All those who believe in democracy and are willing to defend democracy must attack the powers of reaction which are stealing the very bulwarks of our democracy. They must go after the democracy which has been taken from us. There must be freedom of speech, freedom of assembly, and the right to a just trial."

In allowing 1,500 persons in Canada to be interned without the laying of any charge or without any trial, Canadians were allowing one of the fundamentals of democracy itself to be nullified, Mrs. Nielsen contended.

The only woman member of the House of Commons said the first line of defence of Canadian democracy was "here and now." While some of the defence regulations were designed to protect Canada against enemy aliens, others were "more calculatd to defend from the just criticism of its own people a government which during the last session took to itself almost dictatorial powers."

Police On Her Trail

She said Provincial Police in Saskatchewan had been looking for a pamphlet she had published. The pamphlet consisted mainly of condemnations of her speeches in the commons. This police action was an example of the war the regulations could be mis-applied.

"If democracy is going to live in Canada, then you as members of the House of Commons have the right with me to ask why the voice of one member of the House should be stilled," Mrs. Nielsen said.

Mr. Gillis charged that "the machinery of the state and war regulations are being used to thwart labor organizations and to arrest trade union members." Under the Defence of Canada regulations "it would appear that everything possible is being done for the protection of those exploiting industry for profit."

He claimed "Hitler tactics" were being employed by the Chrysler plant in Windsor, Ont., and by the mining companies at Kirkland Lake, Ont., and that General Motors at Oshawa, Ont., were being given special protection under the defence regulations by order-in-council.

Merely to talk about the right of workers to organize, freedom of discussion and enforcement of social legislation, was "not good enough" if the masses of this country were expected to produce the sinews of war and fight this war, he asserted.

The bringing back from England of part of the Canadian officers and men trained now on active service there was advised by Alan Chambers (Lib., Nanaimo), as a means of giving troops in Canada the value of experience gained in Britain.

New Air Squadron Soon.

Air Minister Power told the House Canada would have a second fighter squadron in the United Kingdom shortly, as a result of the flow of trained men from the Royal Canadian Air Force and the commonwealth training plan. No. 112 Army Co-operation Squadron, now in the United Kingdom, would become a fighter squadron.

He told the House that Canada would have spent $95,000,000 on the commonwealth scheme by March 31 next, and expenditures during the next year would be much heavier; that the United Kingdom was spending $20,000,000 in Canada on training establishments of her own; that 103 of the projected 104 training schools under the commonwealth plan would be in operation June 30, 1941, six months ahead of schedule, and that adequate training planes would be available, unless something unforseen happens.

While it has long been known that the original financial set-up called for expenditure of $600,000,000 on the whole scheme, of which Canada's share was to be $350,00,000, the minister states that "both Canada's proportion and the aggregate amount will be greaty exceeded before we are through."

The people of Canada insufficiently realized the "enormous responsibility" Canada had to bear in this war. Eventual victory would follow air supremacy and in attaining this Canada was Britain's "mainstay and right arm."

When he declared the commonwealth training scheme would be "far more successful" than first anticipated, he assured the House he was not handing them any soothing syrup.

He described in some detail the training school set-up. Elementary flying and observer schools were operated by civilians. The Air Force was endeavoring to train all its own merchanics and this year recruited 1,500 from the youth training scheme, technical schools and the training school at St. Thomas, Ont. Next year 6,000 would be produced from the same sources without disturbing industry.

small."

Authoritative sources said a "small force" of R.A.F. bombers fought its way through the storm and attacked "an oil target in central Germany."

This morning a southwest wind had smoothed out the sea in the Strait of Dover, but a sea mist, heavy clouds and rain cut visibility to a minimum.

The night alarms kept Londoners in their shelters, even though no bomb explosions were heard. The high wind drowned the sound of the raiders' motors, and only occasional bursts of anti-aircraft fire were heard.

Raiders also were reported to have been over southwestern England, Wales and Northern Ireland.

Meanwhile, from the far fronts of the far, the air ministry and admiralty reported new blows at Britain's foes.

The admiralty said last night that light naval units, such as were said to have bombarded the Somaliland port of Mogadiscio over the weekend, shelled Dante, a second Somaliland port, damaging oil tanks and coastal and anti-aircraft batteries.

The air ministry said R.A.F. bombers raided Elbasani, an Italian base on the Albanian coast, hitting military supplies.

Hit Leuna Oil Works

LONDON, Nov. 19 (CP)—British bombers attacked the German synthetic oil works at Leuna, near Leipzig, last night, an air ministry communique said today.

Several large fires were started, particularly in the northern portion of the target area, the communique said. It described results as "good."

All British planes returned safely.

Counties Council

of Darlington Township was still ill and unable to be present. The Council took up the various communications and referred them to their corresponding committees to consider, after which the session adjourned until this afternoon at two o'clock.

A letter from the local Knights of Columbus commented on the fact that the Counties Council had appropriated funds for war services, and requested that the Knights of Columbus Canadian Army Huts work be kept in mind; referred to Finance Committee. Request of H. Fowlds & Son that the counties reimburse the company for American exchange on coal supplied as per tender to the House of Refuge, was referred to the Finance Committee The amount involved was $59.25.

A request from the Port Hope I.O.D.E. chapter for funds to assist in carrying on their activities in war work, was referred to the Finance committee. The report from the Oscar Hudson & Co., auditors, was also referred to the Finance committee, as was also a request for assistance from the Navy League of Canada. A list of grants for equipment for public schools in the counties was referred to the Schools committee. Letter from the Board of Stirling High School announcing that the school could take county pupils was turned over to the Schools committee. The contract for roofing the registry office at Port Hope was referred to the County Property committee. A resolution from Waterloo County Council which recommended that ten million pounds of bacon from the ba[illegible] surplus be sent to England as a gift from the farmers of Canada was referred to the Agricultural committee.

Resolutions

Resolution from Wentworth County Council requesting that the Federal government be asked to re-establish the regulations compensating farmers for loss on feeder cattle found to have T.B. was referred to the Agricultural committee; Hamilton Township council's request that Harwood be provided with a snow plow was turned over to the Roads and Bridges committee to deal with. Resolution from the counties of Lennox and Addington, that owners of deeded woodlands be not liable for fires started therein, was referred to the Legislative and Bylaws committee; Lincoln County Council's resolution advocating conscription of wealth during the war wa salso referred to the Legislative and By-laws committee. A letter from Percy Township Council pointed out that as they had been relieved of $75,000 by the Counties Council from the equalized assessment, the resolution for a new equalization of the assessment had accordingly been rescinded; received and filed.

Buy New Snow Plow

The roads and bridges committee took an important step towards meeting the snow problem in north Durham County roads by recommending purchase of snow plowing equipment amounting to $3,370 to be used with the counties oil-burning caterpillar tractor. It was pointed out that the truck being used up around Millbrook for snow plowing had given a great deal of trouble due to the strain imposed on it. The General Supply Co., of Toronto had tendered $2,015.00 for plowing equipment, not including wing plows. This could be used on the caterpillar and the truck could be used for cleaning up the sides.

Warden Morrow declared that the heavy snow in the counties was in the north part of Durham County and that the Ford truck being used to clear up the roads was too light for such a strenuous job. A representative of the snow plow firm was present at the meeting and informed the committee that the caterpillar would do five miles per hour in average snow, and against very heavy drifts would do 3.6 miles per hour in third gear. A caterpillar would make headway where a truck would not and last winter a caterpillar tractor had to go to the rescue of a big truck which had become stalled in a futile attempt to snow plow.

Reeve Charles Calver, chairman of the committee, stated that the committee had enough on hand in the estimates to pay for the $2,000.00 proposition and still had enough left over to cover 75 per cent of the road rebates even although the latter were not due until next April. The discussion swung to the $3,370 outfit and it was pointed out that the more complete equipment would have wings to clear the sides of the road, meaning a two-lane road as it went along and the Ford truck could be used elsewhere. Council was informed by the snow plow representative that a caterpillar equipped with plow and wings would operate more cheaply than a large truck and also it could be done by one man operating it whereas a truck entailed two operators.

"If you don't have this unit," observed Reeve Reid, "you will have nothing to use up there unless you buy a big truck and there is no provision for that now."

The comittee accordingly passed a resolution moved by Deputy-reeve C. G. Morris of Bowmanville and seconded by Reeve S. Gifford of Port Hope, that the $3,370 equipment be recommended for purchase. Reeve G. A. Edmonstone of Bowmanville topped off the matter by jocularly pointing out that the urban members of the council were out to help the rural members as evinced in the personnel of the mover and seconder of the foregoing motion.

Abundant Grain But Mill Feed Is Up In Price

Believe it or not: Canada has harvested something like 450,000,000 bushels of wheat this year, export business is in a slump, but the prices of mill feeds, by-products of the cereal trade have advanced sharply in price during the last month.

A Canadian Press story confirmed this morning local reports of the last ten days or so. "The Dominion Department of Agriculture to-day reported a sharp increase in the wholesale price of mill feed. Bran prices rose from $23 per ton to $26, middlings from $25 to $27 and shorts from $28 to $30. It was said that buyers were bidding as high as $29 for bran."

The explanation of this anomaly, according to E. H. Brown, manager of Co-operative Services, is that suspension of the milling of flour has in consequence halted the production of bran, short and middlings.

Canada's foreign trade in flour has been greatly reduced by the loss of European markets, and although shipments to South Africa, India and some other places has been continuing the total volume, together with the requirements of Great Britain and Canada's home consumption are not sufficient to keep the domestic mills busy.

Obviously if they are not making flour, they are also not turning out mill feeds While the flour business has become a war victim, the home demand for feeds has been steady, but with a decreasing supply of these ends of the cereal business their prices have mounted, and there is dismay and resentment among farmers.

Mill feeds are bought by farmers mostly for feeding cattle, but they are also used for horses and in hog feeds and poultry diet.

Mr. Brown said that bran has gone up from $23 to $27 a ton during the last month; middlings from $28 to $31 and shorts from $24 to $26.

That the country is embarassed with its grain crop and at the same time farmers have to face this higher feed market is a kind of economic contradiction which they find difficult to understand, although the explanation is simple enough.

Rural irritation is being kindled by this phase of their market, higher feed prices, while the new British contract price for hogs is lower than under last year's contract. The only compensation has been the price of cheese, but Ontario factories recently closed up for the winter.

P.C.I. Stamp Sale Is $380 For Week

Collegiate Institute students have increased their sale of War Savings Stamps to more than $4,000.

Sale of stamps for the last week, reported on Monday, amounted to $380, Henry Toole, head of the Commercial Department, informed the Examiner to-day.

The students have built up a sales organization that includes weekly "pep" talks, and all the business maintaining interest and enthusiasm for this local contribution to the nation's financing of the war.

One of the girls from the country has a group of stamp "customers" in her neighborhood. A boy who sells papers applies his selling experience to the cause in the conferances that are held every week. Some students have yet to sell their first stamp, and "others have done splendidly."

Canadian Women Likely Be Called To Help Harvest 1941 Crops

A forecast that the women of Canada might be called upon to assist in the harvesting of this country's crops next summer was voiced by the Hon. Iva Campbell Fallis, addressing the Women's Auxiliary of the War Service Council in Legion Hall on Monday evening.

Senator Fallis had been invited to the meeting by the president, Mrs. Ed. Wand, to speak a few words and she was introduced to the group by Mrs. Wand.

'I am interested in the activities of this organization," said the Senator in her first remarks, "and I wish to congratulate all of you on the splendid progress that is being made. As a wartime group of workers, you may find that the chief trouble that may arise is a lack of something definite to do. At the present we have reached a period of comparative quiet, in which work is not presenting itself.'

Ottawa Meeting.

Senator Fallis went on to tell the group of a meeting that had been held recently at Ottawa, in which the leaders of several women's organizations headed by Princess Alice discussed ways and means of attaining greater efficiency in war work across Canada. It was pointed out that at present there was considerable overlapping. Princess Alice advised that a central committee be set up to act as a clearing house and a bureau of information, the personnel working in conjunction with the Department of War Services. Finally at the Ottawa meeting the two women Senators and the president of the National Council of Women were appointed to go into the question further.

Senator Fallis expressed the opinion that a central committee would soon come into existence at Ottawa and would work in close conjunction with the Government Department.

People Who Can Do the Jobs.

"Our main thought to-day should be a desire to find people who can do the jobs that have to be done, that is, we must find the round pegs for the round holes."

People should not give up an essential job to train for something that may never be needed, just because there is the element of glamor attached to it. We must concentrate on doing the essential things.

To illustrate the point, Senator Fallis explained that anyone can readily conjure up a picture in their mind's eye of old England as she is to-day. In every picture one will see the King and Queen making their way among their devoted subjects, through the debris of bombed towns and cities comforting the people. "The King and Queen are doing the daily task that is most in need of doing and the one that is nearest at hand. We can learn a valuable lesson from them."

She went on to laud the spirit of the English people and hundreds of English women from all walks of life who belong to England's land army. This army helps on the land doing most of the jobs that men did previously.

"In Canada the demand might make it necessary for women to form a similar army and work on the farms during the harvest season next summer. This is work that has little glamor, but if it is necessary then we must do it."

Senator Fallis pointed out that construction of industrial plants at the present time was absorbing much labor and when the factories went on full production, hundreds more would be needed.

The most important lesson that we can learn from Britain to-day is simply this: "Let's do the job that's nearest at hand, the one that is essential, and the one that we can do well."

Obituary

MRS. WILLIAM McMULLEN.

TWEED, Nov. 19 — (ENS). — Mrs. William McMullen passed away at the family residence in the 2nd Concession of Sidney Township, early on Monday morning, November 18. She was in failing health for some time.

The late Mrs. McMullen, who was in her 68th year, was born in the Township of Rawdon. Prior to her marriage she was Miss Bertha E. Sharp, daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. John Sharp. The early part of her life was passed in Rawdon Township, and for the past twenty-eight years she made her home in Sidney Township, and in the community was highly esteemed. In religion she was a member of Aikens United Church.

Surviving are her husband, William McMullen, three daughters, Mrs. Clifford Halls, Sidney Township, Mrs. Samuel Marshall, Sidney Township, and Mrs. Earl Stickle, Sidney Township, two sons Cyril McMullen and Leon McMullen, both of Sidney Township.

Early Training In Health Rules

CAMPBELLFORD, Nov. 19 (ENS) —The importance of early training in the fundamental rules of health was emphasized in an address heard by members of the Seymour East branch of the Women's Institute which held its meeting this month at the home of Mrs. John J. Thompson. Speaker of the afternoon, Dr. H. B. Longmore, delivered a highly informative talk on the theme, "Health and Child Welfare." The importance of preventive medicine, vaccines and toxins was developed at considerable length by the speaker who expressed the opinion that vaccinations should be done in the child beginning from the time it is six months old.

Thirty-four members answered the roll call at the meeting, which was presided over by the president, Mrs. Jesse Lock. During the business period considerable time was alloted to the discussion of contributions to various charities, which form one of the prime objects of the Institute. Decision was reached to make a grant of $10.00 to the Red Cross Society and also a further contribution of $5.00 to the British War Victim's Fund. The Branch also passed a motion authorizing the secretary to request that the Federation grant of $3.00 from the Ontario Government be forwarded.

Next meeting will be at Mrs. Fred Todd's, when members will answer the roll by telling a joke and donating a towel for the Hospital. Miss Mae Stotts and Mrs. George Ayghirt will arrange the program at which Dr. M. E. R. Boudreau of Burn Brae church will give the topic.

Sucker Lake Party Gets Full Quota

One of the parties hunting deer at Sucker Lake has returned home glowing with deserved success. The members of the party were Wallace Nicholls, A. K. Nicholls, H. Telford, T. Davis and Stanley Pearson.

One of the best in recent years, was this year's hunt, as far as these men are concerned, for in less time than the allotted 14 days, they had secured their full quota. A. K. Nicholls started 13 deer in one day, which seems like an excellent indication of the number of the animals in the district.

The report is that other parties hunting in that part of the country did not fare so well, however, and some even left without game of any description.

Flood Of Illegal Pamphlets Starts Inquiry

TORONTO, Nov. 19 (CP)—Police across Canada are investigating today a flood of religious literature, entitled "End of Nazism" and described as similar in content to that formerly circulated by the Jehovah's Witnesses sect before it was declared an illegal organization under the Defence of Canada regulations.

The pamphlets were distributed early Sunday morning in dozens of Canadian cities and towns in a door-to-door canvass by scores of men and women. Because in many cases householders were disturbed about 4 a.m. in widely separated communities, police considered there had been a nation-wide plan to circulate homes at the same hour.

Although in many cases the pamphlets were left noiselessly and were not discovered until the next morning, with the result that no arrests were made, scores of individuals were taken into custody and some were charged under the Defence Regulations after they had been questioned and others were held on vagrancy charges.

Many of those arrested said they had found packages of the tracts on their doorsteps and they had been so interested with the contents they had felt the urge to go out and distribute them.

The pamphlets attacked the Roman Catholic church, saluting the flag and the American Legion. Police said they believed they had been printed in the United States.

In the Maritime provinces there were reports from Saint John, Moncton and Woodstock, N.B., and from Charlottetown that the pamphleteers had been busy.

In Ontario activity was reported from several communities. In Toronto 10 persons were taken into custody and eight of them were released after questioning. Two men were arrested in London, two at Stratford, two at Paris and another at Windsor.

Police were also investigating complaints in Garnia, Tillsonburg, Cobourg, Cochrane, Brantford and Simcoe.

Three men and a woman were arrested in Edmonton and charged with advocating the principles and distributing literature of an illegal organization.

Church Needs Determination

Men of St. Paul's Presbyterian Church met on Monday evening in the Sunday School hall and there enjoyed a banquet and address by the Rev. A. Raeburn Gibson of Millbrook. The meeting was a follow up on the "Men and Missions Sunday" when the laymen of the congregation played a prominent part in the church services.

Rev. Gibson took as his subject "Christianity in World Conflicted." Coming to Canada and starting with the C.P.R. in the Pacific division with such men as D. R. Coleman and S. J. Hungerford now president of the C.N.R., Mr. Gibson told of a desire to be a minister rather than a more lucrative living with a railroad. For years he was a missionary in Western Canada and in his address he told of the hardships of the pioneers and also of the missionaries.

He pleaded for that same spirit in the Christian church and its work as is now evident in the British people who in spite of bombings are carrying on and doing their utmost to win the war. "That same spirit is needed in the church today especially if it wishes to achieve what there will be for it to achieve when this conflict is over."

Solos were rendered by John Anderson and A. Stevenson.

Votes of thanks to the ladies, the speaker and the soloists were moved by William Hill and George Macdonald.

Duty Of Council To Fill Vacancy

The death of Roland Denne on Tuesday, November 5 was recorded in the minutes of the Utilities Commission, of which he was a member for five years, by a resolution moved by E. R. Shirley and seconded by G. S. Matthews on Monday afternoon.

The text of the resolution was as follows: "That this Commission express and place on record its profound sorrow on account of the sudden death of Roland Denne, who has been for five years a valued member of this Commission.

"Mr. Denne was a faithful and capable Commissioner, and his extensive experience in municipal affairs was of great value to the Commission. He was highly esteemed by the citizens, and his death is deeply regretted by the whole community."

The secretary, Howard Clegg, was instructed to send a copy of the resolution to Mrs. Denne.

In regard to the vacancy in the Commission, R. L. Dobbin, manager, said that according to the Public Utilities Act the City Council shall immediately appoint a successor to the office for the term for which the retiring or deceased Commissioner was elected.

Mr. Denne was appointed five years ago to complete the term of the late John Crane, who died toward the end of the month of December. The appointment was made by the incoming Council.

The Commisson yesterday commented that they had no information about the intentions of the Council. According to one report, apart from the Utilities meeting, it was believed that the Council might decline to make an appointment in December, deferring that duty until January. The term of the late Mr. Denne does not expire until the end of 1942.

Peterboro Fireman Tops Exam List

The four members of the Peterborough Fire Department, who joined the Royal Canadian Air Force, have made a showing in the recent examinations that will credit not only the department, but the city as well. They are Bob Armour, Bob McKenzie, Frank Shearer, and Bill Osborne. All of these men were successful, and two of them ranked with the best. Bob Armour headed the class of 24, while Bob McKenzie stood third.

Of the original number, five failed. All those in the class are paid firemen, and they are from all parts of the Dominion. Each now holds the rank of corporal, and has the title Fire Chief at the airport at which he is stationed.

Burns As He Rides

WICHITA, Kas., Nov. 19—(AP).—Noticing a steady glare in the rear vision mirror, Emmet Wawner, 40, drove his car to one side of the road expecting another to pass. No car passed. Wagner looked again and saw flames. He jumped out. His car virtually was destroyed by fire, probably caused by gasoline leaking on the exhaust pipe.

Appeal Planned For Aid For Bombing Victims

A city-wide appeal for funds to assist residents of Great Britain who have been made homeless by enemy bombings will be launched in the near future by the Women's Auxiliary of the Civic War Service Council.

The plan was given birth at the Legion Hall last night when at the suggestion of the president, Mrs. Ed. Wand, the organization voted $300 out of their own funds on motion of Mrs. J. Cridland and Mrs. Whalen. At this point Senator Fallis suggested that in her opinion many others in the city would like to contribute to this plan. She added that the question had been discussed in different quarters of the city and many people wished to contribute to a local appeal.

George Gimblett, president of the Canadian Legion, Branch 52, said many who wanted to help the British air raid victims would do so if an appeal was sponsored by a local organization authorized under the War Charities Act. This would give the Ladies' Auxiliary of the Legion the right to start an appeal.

Let Peterborough Get Credit.

"I would like to see any funds raised in this city sent direct to the Lord Mayor of London. If any eredit is forthcoming let a local organization get it, and besides we in Peterborough wish to do our share as a community. A Toronto paper is doing a good job along this line, but that is alright for Toronto. We can handle our own right here in Peterborough."

Chief Gimblett presented the Auxiliary with a cheque for $29.22, the net proceeds from a social evening held at the Legion Hall last Saturday evening.

Accept Donations.

It was the opinion of the meeting that donations should be accepted and tht $300 used as a starter for the campaign. Mrs. Wand appointed Mrs. Clare Collins, Mrs. George Benton, Mrs. Al Heckman and Mrs. T. F. McNeeley, a committee to work with Chief Gimblett in arranging the details of the campaign.

Mrs. McNeeley voiced the thanks of the organization to Chief Gimblett and the war veterans for their splendid contribution.

The treasurer's report revealed the organization to be in a healthy financial condition with more than $454.00 in the treasury, and the possibility of a substantial amount forthcoming from the sale of scrap metal. Miss Mabel Patterson reported the progress being made in the disposal of the scrap and tendered a cheque which had already been handed over for the more valuable metals.

Dr. A. T. Wallis Dies

ST. CATHARINES, Ont., Nov. 19 —(CP)—Dr. Arthur G. Wallis, former Liberal members of the Ontario Legislature for Algoma, died here last night. A native of Etobicoke, he practiced here for many years after coming from Norther Ontario.

Burial will take place at Paris Thursday afternoon.

Planning A Better Future

The world today offers a real challenge to ability. Work is being pushed forward by men and women who possess the energy, strength and ability to do things.

The unfortunate ones are those who lack the zest for action because of poor health and low vitality. These no doubt yearn to regain their bodily vigor and get back into the procession of progress.

A Most Effective Way to regain and maintain health is to keep the nervous system in normal tone. Spinal manipulative treatments help to do this because they relieve the nerves of constriction and aid in restoring that energy and stamina which makes work a pleasure.

will soon tire of her and throw her aside for some girl of his own age class, that she will be left deserted, shamed, her own life in ruins.

And, knowing these things, if she has not the courage and the principle to put this folly aside and do the thing she knows to be right, no one can make her do it. We have to reform ourselves. No one can furnish us with a substitute backbone.

Unfortunately, it is not an uncommon thing for women of your friend's age, who have been good, virtuous, respectable, sensible wives and mothers, to go suddenly batty over some kid young enough to be their son.

Maybe it is because after many years of humdrum domesticity they are seized with an irresistible craving for one more bite of romance. Mabe it is because they realize that they are getting old and their looks are going, that they feel that they must have one more fling at girlhood.

But, whatever the reason, their little orgy always ends in disaster.

Not long ago an old actress who had earned many fortunes in her day died in poverty. Before her death a friend asked her what she had one with all the money she had made, and she replied: "Young lovers come high." They always do.

WHAT TO DO ABOUT TELL-TALE LIPSTICK.

Dear Miss D'x,—What is the sensible thing for a wife to do when her husband comes home with lipstick on his clothing? Should she mention the lipstick?

RUTH.

ANSWER. — Well, she would be a museum specimen of a wife if she didn't say a few appropriate things to him about the lipstick, but probably the sensible thing to do would be just to send his clothes to the cleaner, because it is no part of a woman's duty to scrub off another woman's lipstick from her husband's bosom.

However, don't take the lipstick too seriously because for a man to return to his everloving wife all gaumed up with it shows that he is at least an amateur philanderer. The old ones are more careful.

Britain Betters Camouflage

NEW YORK, Nov. 19 (AP)—Great Britain has entered a new phase of camouflage, with a special kind of architecture which blends with the landscape. This fact is reported in Nature, Britain's official journal of science.

"Photographs (from the air) of one of the few buildings which has been designed from the outset in co-operation with camouflage experts make one realize what could be achieved," it stated.

The huge structure is part of the English landscape, complete with fields, woods, roads and hedges, and is as nearly indistinguishable as could be imagined."

Nature tells a great deal more about Great Britain's recent revision of its camouflage practices. Until the publication of this article, the scientific journal had been critical of the air disguise work as unscientific and sometimes actually making objects more conspicuous from the air.

The present story describes the work at headquarters of the Civil Defense Camouflage Organization, which is both designing camouflage and doing large - scale research on invisibility.

The staff includes artists, engineers, architects, chemists, physicists, photographers and a botanist. Sites and buildings to be concealed are first studied and photographed from the air. If they are of major importance, a model is made and camouflage applied.

This result is placed on a turntable in a room designed to give the perspective of an airplane view. Artificial lights imitate changing daylight and darkness. The turntable slowly revolves, giving all the angles from which a speeding plane would view the scene. A similar test is duplicated outdoors.

When the model is complete, a color photo of it is made. Then the camouflage is applied to the actual site. This, however, is not all. The camouflage site is viewed again and photographed from the air, this time in color. Final corrections are made.

Shout Then Shoot

PITTSBURG, N.H., Nov. 19—(AP)—Hunters hereabouts are requested to shout before they shoot—so that if they come across an escaped tame deer Simon Legree it will have a chance to walk up and "shake hands." Frank Baldwin, Simon's owner, made the request. He said the deer had been trained so that, upon hearing its name shouted, it would advance and extend its right forefoot in friendly greeting.

Don't Offend Friends by Bad Table Manners

Be Sure of the Well-Bred Thing

How cruelly she is betrayed by her lack of etiquette! Her companion won't forgive her for the embarrassment she causes him.

The girl who, in a smart restaurant, wipes her silverware before using it is much like the girl who spreads out a napkin to screen the removal of a seed from her mouth. Both have a touching belief that this extra "fussiness" shows they're used to well-bred ways.

They could so easily learn the rules of the truly well-bred. Those used to good restaurants never wipe the silver. If there is a speck you may ask the waiter for another piece. And when you get a seed in your mouth you just remove it with your cupped hand—without conspicuous napkin-waving.

Knowing your etiquette, you are so at ease everywhere you go. At a dinner party, when given your dessert plate with finger-bowl, doily and silver on it, you smoothly remove silver, set finger-bowl and doily on the table above the plate. If you are served artichokes, you eat a leaf at a time, using your fingers.

Do you know which cakes to eat with a fork, which salad with a spoon? Our 32-page booklet answers hundreds of table etiquette questions. Gives rules for buffet parties and teas; formal dining, meals in restaurants and clubs.

Send 15c in coins or stamps for your copy of GOOD TABLE MANNERS to Examiner, Home Service, Peterborough. Be sure to write plainly your NAME, ADDRESS, and the NAME of booklet.

BARCLAY ON BRIDGE

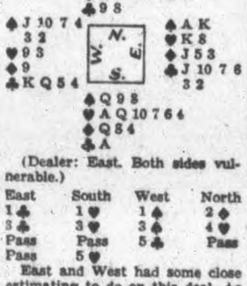
WRITTEN FOR THE EXAMINER

By SHEPARD BARCLAY

"The Authority on Authorities"

TRY TO FIGURE EXACTLY

WHEN AN opponent has made a palpable sacrifice bid against you, exactness in estimating the probabilities of the situation is at a premium. It is then you want to be as precise as possible in your deductions. For you first must appraise the likelihood of setting him, as well as the score to come from the number of tricks you will beat him, and you then figure out the chances of going ahead successfully with your side's own declaration, at a level higher than you had expected to bid. After weighing what score seems likely one way against the apparent result the other way, you make your choice.



(Dealer: East. Both sides vulnerable.)

East	South	West	North
1♣	1♥	1♠	2♦
3♣	3♥	3♠	4♥
Pass	Pass	5♣	Pass
Pass	5♥

East and West had some close estimating to do on this deal. As it turned out, they were exactly right in passing the 5-Hearts. Either overcall they could have made would have produced a set of 800 points, or three tricks doubled. If they tried 5-Spades, they would have lost five tricks, one in trumps, two in hearts and one in each minor. At 6-Clubs they would have lost four, two in hearts and one in each minor. They were correct also in not doubling, as it was plain from South's second bid, a force, that he thought his side could go somewhere.

South really had a harder decision than his opponents. He was Clem Read, veteran Knickerbocker Whist club player, striving for the Metropolitan pair championship with Joseph M. Rothchild, an able partner. He knew the opponents reckoned they were sacrificing at 5-Clubs, and had to decide whether to double them or not.

Mr. Read estimated the set at probably two tricks, not as much as his side's game would be worth. So his main problem was to figure whether he could make 5-Hearts. On the bidding, it seemed he could count on North for a spade honor, so that there would be probably one loser in that suit, and probably only one loser in hearts or diamonds. It turned out that North had two spade losers, but the compensating strength with his other cards, so that the winning trump finesse decided the result.

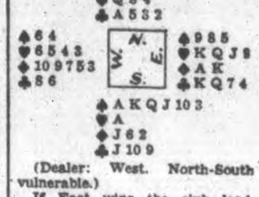
Tomorrow's Problem



(Dealer: West. North-South vulnerable.)

If East wins the club lead, dummy ducking, then two diamonds, and returns the heart K, can South make 4-Spades on this deal, and if so, how?

Quebec Leaders Keep Two Elections Afire

MONTREAL, Nov. 19 — (CP). — Final speeches in two Quebec provincial by-elections were scheduled for tonight, before ballots are cast in the Legislature Assembly battles in Terrebonne and Megantic ridings Tuesday.

It will be a three-cornered fight in Terrebonne, with Hon. Hector Perrier, newly-appointed to the Liberal Cabinet of Premier Godbout of Provincial Secretary, opposed by Leonard Blanchard, Union Nationale, and Henri Groulx, an Independent. Another candidate, Albert Duval, who was running as an Independent Liberal, has withdrawn in favor of Mr. Perrier.

In Megantic, it will be a straight party fight, with Alphonse Olivier representing the Liberals and Tancrede L'Abbe as Union Nationale standard-bearer.

Throughout the campaign in both ridings, Premier Godbout and Opposition Leader Maurice Duplessis, leader of the Union Nationale party which was defeated by the Liberals in the 1939 general election, have been the principal speakers.

Duplessis Critical.

Mr. Duplessis made three campaign speeches during the week-end, attacking the record of the Liberal Government and defending that of the Union Nationales during their term of office, 1936-39. He charged that proposed educational changes planning by the Government were an attack on the church, and that the Premier was holding Quebec up to scorn by saying it was backward in matters of education.

"We are not fighting a political party battle," he said. "We are fighting the battle of the people, of the workers and the farmers, of the mothers, of the youths," against Premier Godbout, "the slave of those who do not like the Province of Quebec."

In one of three week - end speeches, the Premier replied that "it is because we are Catholics and because we are French-Canadians, we cannot refuse to excel in all domains. It is a question of our life, our survival as a people. We know better than anyone what sacrifices the clergy consented to, since the very establishment of the colony until this day, to establish and develop education in our province."

Turning to conscription, another debating point during the campaign, the Premier said that "never was a more anti-imperialistic law ever passed in the country." Opponents of the Government made a "great error" when they attempted to call the mobilization law "conscription."

Refresher Courses At Home Are Planned For R.A.F. Volunteers

LOS ANGELES, Nov. 19.—Details of a proposed pan to administer "refresher courses" at United States air schools to American civilians who volunteer for service with the Royal Air Force were discussed here yesterday by Air Commodore G. C. Pirie, air attaehe to the British Embassy in Washington.

Commodore Pirie arrived here yesterday on a quick survey trip to inspect facilities of one of the schools under consideration and to visit local plants manufacturing planes for Great Britain.

In disclosing the plans for training American volunteers Commodore Pirie was emphatic in denying that Canada's Commonwealth Air Training Scheme facilities were to be transferred to the United States.

Four American flying schools will get contracts to give brush-up courses to volunteers, Commodore Pirie said. The Cal-Aero Academy in suburban Glendale is the Far Western designate for this program, the British officer said. Other schools are under consideration at Tulsa, Dallas and Chicago.

The Cal-Aero Academy is currently conducting preliminary training for United States Army Air Corps fliers under a contract with the Government.

Volunteers for service are being accepted in the Southern California area through the Hollywood committee for volunteering under the managership of E. L. Benway, pilot in the first World War. Volunteers qualifying for service will receive instructions in night flying, ferrying and the like. Benway said 280 flyers already have sought "actual combat jobs."

Men accepted will undergo refresher courses only and will be trained for non-combatant duty. Later, it was indicated, the program may be broadened to cover tactical flight practice and may even include the training of detachments of British subjects from Canada.

Britain's Desert Armies Reinforced By Empire and Allies

Reinforced by detachments from many parts of the Empire and from countries whose sovereign territory has been overrun by Germany, the British armies in the Near East are ready and waiting for any Axis drive at the Suez or the oilfields of Palestine and Iraq. These pictures show some of the desert fighters. At TOP LEFT is a French pilot attached to the Middle East command of the R.A.F. ready to take off in his Morane Saulnier fighter, a machine which he flew to join the British forces when his country's resistance collapsed. At RIGHT a detachment of Polish motorcycle troops are shown in Palestine. The trim, sturdy soldiers shown BELOW are part of a Gold Coast unit now stationed in Kenya colony. They are sturdy and dependable fighters, particularly at home in desert warfare.

Plastic Planes Made Of Waste Coast Proposal

VANCOUVER, Nov. 19 — (CP). — Expected to be completed by Dec. 15, the first plastic warplane of a fleet of them, visualized by two men in Vancouver, will be powered by a standard aircraft engine for test purposes.

The scheme provides for the eventual powering of the plastic fighting craft by a new inexpensive engine of radical design, to give a speed of 500 miles an hour. The promoters plan to make the plane available to the Canadian and British governments.

The men behind the new warplane are Harry Atwood, veteran flier and scientist of Greenfield, N.H., and Alex Johnson of Vancouver. They are progressing with plans to turn out the planes and motors.

Atwood, who is 55, made newspaper headlines 29 years ago when he flew from St. Louis to New York, blazing the skyways for present commercial flights. He says he "wants only to see a British victory," and is sure that his plane can aid in achieving it. He has been experimenting on plastic planes for 20 years.

According to the inventor, the planes can be built out of waste products of British Columbia wood and plastics industries without necessity of expensive manufacturing equipment.

Two Vancouver aircraft companies are ready to build the planes for government inspection at their own cost and are awaiting issuance of licenses by the inventor to proceed with construction. Meanwhile the test plane is being built by the inventor himself.

"No one will get an exclusive license. If Canada wants plastic planes built and sent to England by Christmas, she can have them," says Atwood. "They are truly made from the 'garbage can' of the wood and plastic industries, yet they are as fine as the most expensive types of airplanes. You have everything right here in B.C. for their manufacture."

Hold Like Concrete.

According to Atwood the process of construction is similar to concrete construction work by the use of molds. Forms are constructed to conform to the outer design of the plane's parts. Against this, on the inside, is bent a "skin" of thin basket-woven wood, of special material which can be molded when heated. It hardens into a hard, fireproof, strong, unshatterable, smooth material. Between the layers of outer skin is blown a thermo plastic material which becomes a rigid but extremely light filling.

The power plant for the new planes would be supplied by his associate here, Johnson, who holds the Empire rights to a new engine he claims to be superior to present motors. Construction of the engine will begin here soon, according to Johnson.

On the basis of small test models, he estimates that a 1,250 horsepower engine built to his designs would weigh only 1,000 pounds. Instead of cast metal, the new engine would be built of stamped steel of one-eighth inch thickness. Cylinders and crankshafts are constructed from tubular steel under the plans for the engine.

"All materials used in construction of this engine are obtainable in Canada," h says. He claims that the engine, liquid cooled, can be perfecty streamlined into the wings or fuselage of a plane. No bolts or rivets are used, construction being entirely by fusion. Production, he says, is unlimited.

Special Omemee Services Enjoyed

OMEMEE, Nov. 19—(ENS).—The anniversary services of Trinity United church were held on Sunday with large congregations attending both morning and evening. The minister, Rev. R. M. Patterson, conducted the morning service and gave a very appropriate message. He also informed the congregation that the Women's Association had become responsible for the entire renovation of inside of the church, while the Trustee Board held themselves responsible for the removal of steeple, the painting and all other work done on exterior of the church recently.

Rev. W. J. H. Smith of Port Perry was guest speaker at the evening service and expressed his pleasure at the opportunity of once more occupying the pulpit in his old home church.

Demand 75 p.c. Of Bacon Wiltshire Sides

OTTAWA, Nov. 19 — C.P.). — The total value of bacon shipments to the United Kingdom will be $89,300,000 during the next year. The amount exported will be 425,000,000 pounds, an increase of 95,000,000 pounds over the 330,000,000 pound exported during the year ended Oct. 31.

The British prices for other export cuts including hams, gammons, fores, middles and backs correspond to the price for Wiltshire sides. Under the agreement, however, 75 per cent of the 8,176,000 pounds Canada will deliver weekly for export must be Wiltshire sides.

Under the new price agreement, the Canadian Bacon Board will pay almost as much to Canadian farmers as it receives from the British Food Ministry for bacon, but bacon officials say a surplus now on hand will pay the Board's operating costs.

Officials point to the policy in placing a higher price on Grade A No. 1 as providing a premium for those who product products of top quality.

"Farmers and packers will be called on to make every effort to produce the best quality possible," said a statement issued by the Dominion Department of Agriculture. "With all continental supplies of bacon cut off because of the war, British consumers are eating Canadian bacon and, according to recent reports, are liking it. Consequently Government officials in charge of bacon supplies are making every effort to maintain that favorable situation."

Mail Route Changes

ROSENEATH, Nov. 18—(ENS).—The Roseneath-Dartford rural mail route has changed hands. The route established nineteen years ago has been well and faithfully served by Mrs. Lily Turner and family all during this period. Following Mrs. Turner's removal to Peterborough over one year ago, it was necessary to hire a driver on the route, although Mrs. Turner still held the contract. Now it has changed hands and W. J. E. Mason of the village serves the route.

"It Was The Only Thing That Helped Me," Says Local Lady

Was Worried About Her Health as Rheumatic Condition Followed Stomach Misery. Could Hardly Get Up and Down Stairs.

Also Praises Syntona For First Relief From Itching, Burning Eczema as General Health Improved.

MRS. JEAN COMPTON

Almost every day you can read in the papers about how local folks have been relieved of ailments of the stomach, liver, kidneys and bowels and the long train of distressing symptoms of faulty assimilation and elimination, by taking a treatment of Syntona Herbal Tonic. Here, for example, is the interesting experience of Mrs. Jean Compton:

"I was feeling rundown and miserable in so many ways that I was greatly worried about my health. My stomach started to give me trouble some years ago and then pains set into my limbs and back and my joints got so stiff and sore I could hardly get up and down stairs. My skin would itch and burn with eczema and it became very discouraging trying one remedy after another with little or no results.

"I don't know why I started taking Syntona when I did because I was disappointed so many times, but I guess it was because I had read in the paper about how it had helped so many people right here whom I knew. Anyhow, I am surely glad I took Syntona, for it just seemed to go to the very root of my troubles. Now I have no trouble at all with stomach gas or indigestion. The rheumatic pains have left me and that terrible skin trouble has all cleared up. It has been such a wonderful relief to me that I feel I can't praise Syntona highly enough."

You, who suffer like Mrs. Compton did, are cordially invited to call at Elliott Drug Store, Peterborough, and find out for yourselves about Syntona. You, too, may receive these priceless benefits.—(Adv.)

HUNGARY JOINS THE AXIS

British Night Bombers Dump Ruin on Great Skoda Works in Bohemia

MUNITION STORES, RAIL JUNCTIONS AT BERLIN BLASTED, FIRES, EXPLOSIONS SET ALONG KIEL, BREMERHAVEN DOCKS—BRITONS FIGHTING WITH GREEKS BAG 9 PLANES.

LONDON, Nov. 20—(CP). — British bombers raided the great Skoda armaments works at Pilsen, Bohemia, last night, the Air Ministry announced today.

It was the second time British bombers have been over Pilsen, in old Czechoslovakia.

Munitions stores and other objectives in Berlin also were bombed. Other aircraft attacked shipyards and docks at Kiel, Hamburg and Bremerhaven, causing fires and explosions.

"Among industrial targets attacked with good results were the Synethetic oil plants at Gelsenkirchen and Hamburg and an important electric power station at Hambourn," the announcement said.

Railway yards and junctions at Bremen, Berlin and Aurich, the inland port of Duisberg - Ruhrort, the naval base at Lorient and the harbor of Barfleur were other targets.

Three R.A.F. craft were lost.

It was also announced that R.A.F. fighter planes in Greece shot down nine Italian planes yesterday without any British losses.

British forces operating in the Egyptian western desert clashed with Italian troops yesterday, capturing guns and prisoners, headquarters in Cairo announced.

A communique said full details of the action are not yet available.

The Government said that 52 persons were killed and 79 wounded Monday night in a raid by five successive waves of Italian

Fuehrer Sees Signing In Vienna

Act Lets Hun Hordes Another 250 Miles Closer Greece, Turkey

VIENNA, Nov. 20.—(AP).—Hungary became a full-fledged partner of the totalitarian axis to-day by signing up with the German-Italian-Japanese alliance.

Thus Germany strengthened a potential military avenue 250 miles further into Southeast Europe—toward Greece, Turkey and the Suez canal.

The original alliance, signed last September 27 at Berlin, is a 10-year military and economic treaty which binds its signers to a one-for-all and all-for-one pledge of aid against any new entrant into either the European or Asiatic wars.

Hitler himself came to this one-time capital of Nazi-annexed Austria for the ceremony.

A protocol admitting Hungary to alliance membership was signed by Hungary's foreign minister Csaky and for the original signers, by German Foreign Minister Ribbentorp, Italian Foreign Minister Ciano and Saburuo Kurusu, Japanese ambassador to Germany.

Quick Step To Balkans.

There was no intimation from any sources how soon any military operations might follow these Nazi diplomatic strides toward the Balkans, but scarcely any observer doubted such a step would be taken.

In the original agreement, Germany, Italy and Japan bound themselves "to assist one another with all political, economic and military means when one of the three contracting powers is attacked by a power not at present involved in the European war or in the Chinese-Japanese conflict."

(Since then, Italy has invaded Greece, contending the Greeks had sided actively with Britain by permitting her use of bases on Greek soil.)

The brief protocal merely admitted Hungary to partnership and stipulated she would be called in for conferences on questions touching her interests.

It was the second time that Hungary had linked herself recently with a Rome-Berlin-Tokyo agreement. The first was when she joined the anti-Comintern pact on February 24, 1939.

Rome's Opinion

ROME (AP) — Italian political circles interpreted Hungary's entry into the German-Italian-Japanese alliance today as a start towards aligning all pro-axis countries in Europe in the axis war plans. While virtually an axis ally, they said, Hungary had no obligation until today to join in the war in case Turkey, for instance should go to the aid of Greece or block some new moves by Germany in the Balkans.

Canada Plans 100 Ships More In Navy

Will Build Destroyers Says Minister, Perhaps Cruisers

OTTAWA, Nov. 20 (CP)—A Canadian naval establishment sufficient to meet Canada's obligations as a member of the British Commonwealth of Nations and as a "friend and ally" of the United States is planned by the government.

Such a navy, of Canadian-built ships manned by Canadian-trained personnel, was pictured to the House of Commons yesterday by Navy Minister Macdonald as a prospect of the near future.

As the major steps toward that end, Mr. Macdonald announced:—

Addition of 100 ships to the present 155 ships in Canada's navy and addition of 10,000 personnel to the present 13,000 men, by the spring of 1942.

Early re-establishment of a Canadian Naval College, similar to the one discontinued in 1922.

Development of Canada's shipbuilding industry for the building of destroyers for the first time in Canada "and perhaps cruisers as well." The assistance of skilled men from Admiralty dockyards for this purpose already has been asked.

Mr. Macdonald's report to the House on the progress of Canada's naval forces was his first speech since he was elected by acclamation in a Kingston city by-election last August, and he was greeted by an ovation as he rose. The report itself drew another ovation at its end for its comprehensiveness, brevity and polish

Today, Munitions Minister Howe will describe the activities of his department when he continues the Throne Speech debate. Mr. Howe is expected to announce the setting up of a priority committee to supervise Canada's industrial war effort.

Pinch Everything

London, Nov. 20 (CP)

GERMAN troops "have pinched as much as they can" of material supplied to Rumania by Great Britain, the House of Commons was informed today by Richard Butler, Under-Secretary for Foreign Affairs.

The British minister, Sir Reginald Hoare, will remain in Bucharest "to protect certain British interests," Mr. Butler said.

His statement concerning the German troops, who entered Rumania ostensibly to protect her oil fields and frontiers, was made in response to a question by Geoffrey Mander, Liberal.

U.S. Sends Envoy Back To Vichy; Petain Stiffens

WASHINGTON, Nov. 20—(AP)—Relations between the United States and France entered an apparently new phase to-day, coincident with the increasing reports that Marshal Petain was showing a disposition to go slow in collaborating with the Axis powers.

First tangible sign of a possible change ws the fact that Robert D. Murphy, a veteran of 10 years' diplomatic service in France before and during the war, was ordered back to Vichy to take up the duties of Charge d'Affaires. Murphy, formerly counsellor at the Paris Embassy, has been in this country for several months.

In sending Murphy back to Vichy at this time, it was indicated that the United States Government felt it desirable to normalize relations o a greater extent. The Charge d'Affaires was expected to carry detailed instructions for explaining to the Petain regime the attitude of the United States on numerous outstanding questions.

The impression, meanwhile, appeared to be growing here in government quarters that Petain personally was offering strong resistance to Axis pressure on some points of vital concern to the United States, particularly the use of French naval bases in Africa and

Rescue Crew Goes Out; U.S. Sends Over 9 Bombers To Aid

OTTAWA, Nov. 20—(CP).—One of five airmen, missing after they abandoned their Royal Canadian Air Force bomber by parachute near East Lake, Que., last Saturday night, has been located, the Air Ministry announced today.

The Air Force statement said only that the air man had been located from the air in the vicinity of East Lake, roughly 100 miles northeast of Quebec City, and half a mile north of the border.

The man was not identified but emergency rations were dropped to him A ground party had been sent to bring him out.

Previously the Air Ministry had listed the following as missing from the Atlantic coastal patrol bomber that presumably was abandoned when its gas supply was exhausted:

Flt.-Lt. G. F. Clay, New Westminster, B.C.; Fo. J. G. Richardson, Saskatoon; Lac. H. E. Howard, Aylesford, N.S.; Lac. E. J. Benoit, Ottawa, and Ac. Elmer Johnson, Winnipeg.

ST. HUBERT, Que., Nov. 20 — (CP). — Nine United States army bombers landed at nearby St. Hubert Airport to-day to take part in the search for the five Royal Canadian Air Force fliers missing in the remote district of East Lake, Que.

The bombers, manned by crews of four or five each, were tied down soon after they reached the airfield and an official said this indicated they would not take off to-day to join in the search. The ceiling was low in this district and a steady drizzle of rain was falling.

The East Lake district is about 220 flying miles north-east of Montreal.

Land and air forces have been searching since Sunday for the fliers missing since they bailed out of an R.C.A.F. patrol plane on Saturday

A SOURCE close to General Charles de Gaulle said today that 80 per cent of the French soldiers in Indo-China are sympathetic toward the Free French movement and that if supplies were forthcoming from Britain and the United States it was highly possible some French officer might prevent Japanese from using the colony as a land or naval base.

Turkish Press Hints Move Into New Order

TURIN, Italy, Nov. 20—(AP). — The newspaper La Stampa printed a dispatch datelined Ankara today purporting to quote the Turkish News Agency as saying "Turkey would adhere to the new European order." The dispatch, said to have been received yesterday, said "this news created a certain sensation in political circles" because the agency "being official, would not publish it without authorization from the Turkish Foreign Minister."

(Views given today by sources close to the Turkish Government on possible passage of German troops through Bulgaria gave no support to the statement made by La Stampa. These sources said at Ankara that Turkey would regard as harmful to her interest any such passage of troops.

Mass Bayonet Charges Test Legions

Greeks Gain Slowly Around Koritza As Italians Stiffen

ATHENS, Nov. 20—(AP).— Mass bayonet charges and fierce hand-to-hand fighting have carried counter-attacking Greek troops deeper into Albania in the battle for important Koritza, the Greek High Command declared today.

Italian resistance apparently was stiffened by reinforcements and the machine-gunning and dive-bombing of Greek front line troops.

The Greek communique said that "among the Morava Heights" where Greek mountain troops are driving at the Italian invasion base at Koritza itself "our offensive action continued with success."

Other gains were disclosed for Greek forces battling for domination of the supply route beyond Koritza.

"Our army ejected the enemy at bayonet point from positions which they had defended fiercely," the communique said. It added that 11 of the large number of Italian planes which attacked Greek troops were shot down, with no Greek planes lost.

RumaniansHead For Berlin On Hitler's Call

BUCHAREST, Rumania, Nov. 20 (AP)—Premier Ion Antonescu and four members of the cabinet will leave tonight for Germany to confer with Hitler.

BUDAPEST, Hungary, Nov. 20 (AP)—Hungary by her admission to the German-Italian-Japanese alliance has been given a definite role in the axis program in which possible passage of German troops through this country is seen as an important factor in any campaign against Greece and Turkey, informed sources said today.

The joining by Hungary, long pledged to a policy friendly to the axis, was reported here to have marked the initial step in executing a program of the other partners to bind southeast Europe closer to their "new order" objective.

Some said they believed Spain, Rumania and possibly Bulgaria would be the next asked to join.

Yugoslavs on Spot

German sources already have indicated that arrangements have been prepared for a gigantic military operation—an attempt to cork both outlets of the Mediterranean at one time by blows in the east against Suez and in the west against Gibraltar.

The visit to Hitler earlier this week of the Spanish Foreign Minister, Ramon Serrano Suner, was followed by hints of agreement on Spain's part in German plans—whatever they may be.

Death Rained Nine Hours On 14 Towns

Showered 500 Tons On Birmingham Alone, Berlin Gloats

LONDON, Nov. 20 (CP)—Waves of Nazi planes roaring over one a minute rained bombs by the thousands on 14 towns in England's industrial Midlands last night and early today in a ruinous nine-hour raid likened at the hardest hit areas to last week's devastating attack on Coventry.

(The German High Command claimed that more than 1,000,000 pounds of bombs were dropped on Birmingham.)

Reports reaching London from one of the hardest hit of some half dozen raided industrial areas said that in the first hours there was no respite from the continuous fall of bombs and crash of anti-aircraft guns. Fires lit up the sky until it was almost as bright as day.

Considering the country as a whole, observers said the raid was likely to prove as heavy, if not heavier, than any attack yet made on Britain.

Casualties were expected to be comparatively heavy, particularly in two towns. Official descriptions of the damage were confined to statements that it was extensive.

Many raiding planes operated lower than usual. Some 250 concentrated their attack on half a dozen Midland areas. The rest operate in smaller groups or as lone raiders over other districts, apparently to distract the attention of the defenders.

All areas in a west Midlands town were severely attacked, but the main damage was done to residential and business property. A large group of buildings and another of shops were reported in ruins, with huge fires brought under control.

"The attack on the Midlands, which was on a very heavy scale, began soon after darkness and continued for about nine hours, the communique said. "Many incen-

Coventry Buries Dead As Raider Circles

COVENTRY, England, Nov. 20—(CP). — While anti-aircraft guns barked at a lone German raider over this bomb-devastated city, 172 of some 300 persons killed in last Thursday's night attack were buried to-day in a common grave in the red clay of Coventry Cemetery.

Two Spitfires finally chased the raider from the vicinity of the burial ground as hundreds of mourners for those killed by others of his kind in a single night of horror laid wreaths along the 200-foot long trench dug for the flag-decked coffins.

The coffins, bearing shipipng tags in lieu of the conventional name plates, were laid three deep in the trench. Some had been carried there last night.

One after the other the rest were lowered into the earth in a silence broken only by the weeping of women and men.

The Bishop of Coventry, Rt. Rev. Mervin Hay, spoke at the communal grave. He pleaded for a better understanding, a closer neighborliness and determination to go on.

The Bishop was pronouncing the benediction when the German raider appeared. The crowd looked up, in anger and defiance. The guns spoke, then the British fighters moved toward the Nazi, and he disappeared.

Near the grave is another trench where more of the dead will be buried to-morrow.

Last Minute News

LONDON—(CP Cable). — Hungary's formal wedding to the Rome-Berlin-Tokyo entente was viewed authoritatively today as merely putting in treaty form a situation existing for months. It was known here that Hungary felt unable to resist Axis pressure. Meantime the British attitude toward the newest Hitler satellite is not decided.

LONDON—(CP).—The Air Ministry and Ministry of Home Security issued the following communique Wednesday:

"There has been very little enemy activity over this country during daylight today. One enemy bomber which flew to the Midlands, apparently on reconnaissance, was chased and shot down into the sea. A few bombs have been dropped in Kent."

Back To A Broken Homeland

War Cripples Cry 'Vive la France As Huns Free 630 via Geneva

GENEVA, Nov. 20—(AP).—On the scuffed plush seats of second-class railway coaches, a melancholy caravan of France's war-wounded passed through Geneva today, bound from German prison hospitals to their conquered homeland.

There were 630 of them, the legless, the armless, the sightless and the sick, but they lifted a thin hail, "Vive la France!" and again, "Vive la Suisse!" as Swiss relief organizations fed and comforted them.

There were tears in many an eye and some of the men wrecked by war stretched in silent wretchedness on the coach seats.

It was the fifth trainload of wounded and sick French soldiers released by the Germans to be routed home through Switzerland in the care of the Red Cross and the Swiss army. Four thousand men now have returned to France but thousands more remain to be repatriated.

In the dimlit Geneva station, in the chill of pre-dawn, there were such tableaux as these:

A young soldier, hopping one-legged, to take a sandwich from a pretty Red Cross girl while he adjusted the beret marking him as of the Chausseurs Alpin, famed mountain unit.

A priest, still wearing the uniform of an army chaplain, standing at a train window, thumbing a well-worn prayerbook, his face half-smiling as his sightless eyes turned toward the blank wall of the station.

A poignant pause in the journey home. But, for all their sorrows they were glad to be getting home.

They did not talk politics. Neutral Switzerland frowns on such talk. They talked only of France as the home to which they were returning.

OTTAWA, Nov. 20—(CP).—It's so hard to find a place to live in wartime Ottawa that one newcomer who isn't sick is living in a hospital.

He is Andy Clarke, former Toronto newspaperman, now attached to the Department of Public Information. "They fixed up the hospital office to make a room and it's a pretty good room, too," he explained today.

The Y.M.C.A. gymnasium has been turned into a dormitory to help handle the big population increase caused by expansion of most government departments during the past year. "We've been full ever since the war started," an official said, "and every week-end we have

Bevin's Aim Social Security

Calls For Start Now On New Age That Dooms Labor Queues

LONDON, Nov. 20 (CP Cable) — Ernest Bevin, Minister of Labor, told a gathering of London Rotarians today that his aim is Social Security.

In the first public declaration by a cabinet minister on his aspect of war objectives, he asserted that at the end of the war, "and indeed during it," Social Security should be "the main motive of our natural life."

"Begin now," he urged. "That doesn't mean that all profit and surpluses must be wiped out, but it means that the whole economic life shall be devoted to give security, not to a small middle class but to the community as a whole."

Discussing social implications of the war, he said the greatest arising from this struggle "is the drive for an effort to get rid of that horrible queue outside the labor exchange."

The Socialist Labor minister said one of the biggest contributing factors to this war was the failure after the last one to erect an economic structure based on humanity.

He told a story of one unemployment exchange where the largest room was devoted to paying out the dole while the smallest one was for finding jobs. He said that must be stopped or the entire educational system would be halted because "It is better to leave the masses untaught than to give them double appetite, both of stomach and head, and then not satisfy either."

He feared that unless the community saw the importance of action at the end of this war the country would witness the same story of unemployment which followed the last and said a solution would not be found by merely adding a few shillings to the dole.

"A new foundation must be built," Mr. Bevin declared. "It is no use Britain speaking to millions in Europe and other parts of the world in terms of Gladstone liberty. They must be offered a new feeling of hope."

Swiss Farmers Kick Too

Can't Get Help—All Spare Men In Gov't Jobs

BERNE, Switzerland, Nov. 20 (AP)—Swiss peasants, overburdened with work because of compulsory military service and consequent shortage of farm hands, are grumbling at government work-creating projects for the unemployed.

They say that building tunnels and highways is too expensive.

"Send the workers to us," said peasant organizations, "we'll give them plenty to do."

Workers, however, prefer government projects and they have good reasons.

One such project is the building of a mountain road through the Easenthal valley in the Bernese Alps, for which mainly older men have

J. W. Boorman Passes Away Very Suddenly

John Wesley Boorman, manager of Boorman's Beverages and one of the city's well known business men died suddenly at his home on Queen street Tuesday evening. He was 55 years of age.

For the past seventeen years Mr. Boorman has operated and managed the soda water and soft drink business on Queen street along with his son, and prior to that he was engaged in the confectionery business. He was a quiet, friendly man, unassuming and industrious, and his strict attention to his business gave the firm a prominent place in the local picture. His sudden passing will be a distinct shock to his hundreds of close friends and business associates.

At Work on Tuesday

Mr. Boorman was at work on Tuesday but died within a few minutes of becoming ill last evening.

He was an accomplished bandsman and one of the veteran members of the Prince of Wales Rangers band. For some years he was a member of the Salvation Army band, and at one time organized a small group of his own. He often played with the George Street United church orchestra and with the Bethany Tabernacle orchestra. The cornet was his favorite instrument.

The late Mr. Boorman was born n Surrey, England, and came to Peterborough 38 years ago. He was a Noble Grand of the local Oddfellows Lodge and a member of L.O.L. No. 50. He attended Bethany Tabernacle.

Surviving is his wife, formerly Maude Frown, one son, Clarence, and three daughters, Nellie and Sylvia at home and Dorothy, a nurse-in-training at Toronto.

Three brothers and three sisters also survive. Wilfred Boorman and Victor Boorman of Peterborough and Bernard Boorman of Fort William; Mrs. D. Vincent, and Mrs. C. Cadd of Peterborough and Mrs. F. Watson of Toronto.

The funeral will be held on Friday, November 22nd, at 2.30 in the afternoon from the Funeral Home of A. Comstock and Sons, 306 Water street, to Little Lake cemetery for interment. The Rev. William McArthur of Bethany Tabernacle will conduct the service.

aircraft which smashed 17 houses at Alexandria.

Cairo had three air raid warnings early today, but the raiders were driven off by anti-aircraft fire before they could drop any bombs.

Berlin acknowledged officially today it was raided twice by British planes during the night, but the British air attacks were alleged to have been a failure.

"Each time, only one plane succeeded in flying over the city and dropping a number of incendiary and explosive bombs," the Government claimed. "Hospitals, clinics and several apartment houses were struck. The resulting roof fires were quickly quenched.

"One bomber was downed by anti-aircraft in each of the two raids."

Too Much for Petain?

Petain's protest over German expulsion of the French population from Lorraine was regarded here as a sign that the aged Chief of State was drawing a line on the extent of collaboration with the Axis.

One possibility advanced in certain diplomatic quarters here was that, if pressed too hard by the Axis, Petain might decide to fly to North Africa and set up a government of resistance there. This, however, was not regarded as an imminent likelihood.

More immediate diplomatic interest attached to the continued presence in North Africa of Gen. Maxime Weygand, former French Commander-in-Chief and commander of French forces in the Near East.

He is reported to have resisted efforts of some French officials to induce him to return to France.

France has large forces of professional soldiers still under arms in parts of Africa and Syria. If Axis pressure on the French should provoke forcible resistance again, these armies might prove a big stumbling block to Rome-Berlin plans for the Mediterranean area.

Work on this road has been in progress for two years and there's still a lot to be done. Absence of steamshovels is painfully noticeable. Gangs of men dig at huge mountain sides with pick and shovel and the road has many bridges and tunnels.

On government projects the day is only 10 hours long, six days a week, but working on the farm is a 13 to 14-hour job with plenty of chores on Sunday. The pay envelope on government projects is fatter than on the farm.

Young unemployed Swiss workers, aged 18 to 38, can join the government labor service for work in fields, mountains and forests, draining swamps, repairing mountain trails, reforesting and lumbering. They work eight hours a day, do not have to pay taxes, get free medical treatment, use of clothes and a wage of two francs a day. Swiss peasants would like to see these lads milking cows and feeding pigs, too.

Counties Refuse To Pay Solicitors' Fee

COBOURG, Nov. 20—(Special).—Another touchy point in connection with the strained relations existing between the Wooler Continuation School Board and the Counties Council of Northumberland and Durham was dealt with on Tuesday by the Schools Committee when the committee turned down the demand of the School Board for $237.54, representing legal fees in connection with the initial trial of the action brought by the Wooler School Board against the counties. Set down for hearing this month in the Supreme Court of Canada is the appeal of the counties against the decision of the Court of Appeal in connection with the action brought by thfe Wooler School Board to obtain certain sums for transportation of county pupils. The legal fees of $237.54 had been originally included in the requisition of the School Board and this item had been promptly turned down by the Schools Committee.

Council accordingly received a communication from the Wooler School Board's solicitor in which the claim was reiterated. The letter was referred to the Schools Committee and was received and filed, Reeve R. R. Mallory pointing out

Assaults Officer When Arrested

When Edward Reynolds, Ottawa, was arrested on George street early this morning after a complaint had been received that he had been causing a disturbance in a restaurant, police stated that the man kicked out of the police car at Sergt. John Thompson and inflicted a cut over that officer's right eye.

Reynolds pleaded guilty before Magistrate E. A. Gee in police court this morning to assaulting a police officer in the course of his duty.

"I had been drinking," he told the magistrate, "I have enlisted in the army and they are going to send me to Kingston."

At the request of the crown Reynolds was remanded until next Monday for sentence.

Newspaper advertisements aren't much help to the room or apartment-seeker, either. More advertisements are inserted by people looking for a home than by people with places to rent, and the demand is so great one advertiser specifeld he was looking for a "member of parliament or business executive" to rent the single room he offered.

Latest move to help solve the situation was made by the Ottawa Property Owners' Association. It asked owners of large private homes to take in paying guests, and more than 40 have expressed willingness to help.

Just the same, one of the city's biggest real estate operators is anything but hopeful.

"The situation is getting worse instead of better," he said. "More people keep coming to Ottawa and there hasn't been much building going on. Houses and apartments that are built are rented before they're even completed."

Mayor Stanley Lewis more or less agrees with him. "Everybody knows how hard it's been to get a place to live," he said, "and the prospects certainly aren't improving."

Rumanians Head

puts an Axis pressure spot now next to Yugoslavia, which Rome and Berlin have regarded as not warm toward the German-Italian design for a new Europe as other Balkan states.

With Greece at war with Italy, Germany is faced with the potentiality, at least, of what Hitler has sought to avoid—war on two fronts.

Some sources said it appeared obvious that Hungary's alignment with the Axis was designed to dissuade other Balkan nations from following the Greek example of resistance.

The only publicly - announced movement of Nazi troops southeastward was the establishment of some divisions in Rumania for the stated purpose of training Rumania's army, protecting her oil fields and frontiers.

(The German strength in Rumania has been estimated to be as high as 500,000 men).

Hungary was the first to be called to sign up with the Axis. Nazi sources sought to explain because she was the "chief victim of the Trianon and Versailles treaties."

Significantly, foreign correspondents from Rumania, Bulgaria and Yugoslavia were invited to go to Vienna for the ceremony along with Italian, German, Japanese and Hungarian newspaper men. Americans and other correspondents were not invited.

German foreign office sources were non-committal as to whether the Rumanian dictator, Gen. Ion Antonescu, would sign up when he visits Berlin in the near future.

Oven Incubator Baby Loses 5-Month Fight

VAN, Texas, Nov. 20 — (AP). — Five-months-old Vevia Marie Camper, who survived premature birth in a cook stove oven 'incubator,' is dead.

The news was received yesterday from the three-room, remote farm home of Mr. and Mrs. Tommie Camper, several days after pneumonia proved fatal.

Five months ago in the Camper farmhouse off a sandy road deep in E. Texas farmland, Vevia Marie, three months premature and weighing only 2½ pounds, was born one night.

Physicians despaired of keeping her alive.

Mrs. Vevia Swinney, 45, second cousin of Vevia Marie's mother and a neighbor, asked for the chance.

A fire was built in the old kitchen stove. Mrs. Swinney guessed at the correct temperatude from the old wood-burner, slipped the babe into the oven, cradled on a pillow. A milk pan full of steaming water was placed beside the infant to ensure moist air. The baby lived.

Two Fliers Hurt In Bomber Crash

ST. HUBERT, Que., Nov. 20 — (CP). — Two airmen were injured slightly to-day at nearby St. Hubert Airport in the crash of a bomber which caught fire as it was taking off.

An official described the bomber only as "a new aircraft which was awaiting delivery." He said that two of the crew — none of whose names were made public—suffered superficial injuries when the bomber hit the ground.

There were three men aboard the aircraft, which crashed beyond the airport. An ambulance was rushed from the air field to treat the injured men.

The flames were extinguished and the bomber was saved from destruction by fire.

Teacher Is Thanked For Use Of School; Burglars Drive Off In Reeve's Car

BANCROFT, Nov. 20.—(ENS). — "Dear teacher, thanks very much for the use of chairs and room and stove.—(Sgd.) H. R., and R.C."

This greeting written on the blackboard of the school at Gilmour greeted the teacher Tuesday morning in acknowledgment of the comfort of the place during the night to several persons who had forced up a window and made themselves at home.

The school is almost across the road at Gilmour from the home of Reeve James Sprackett of Tudor-Cashell whose car was stolen during the night. He had left it in front of his home about midnight, and in the morning when he was preparing to go about his business of the day he suddenly noticed that the sedan had disappeared in the night.

New System Of Accounting Worries Reeves

A new system of accounting of county road expenditures, imposed about a year ago by the Ontario Department of Municipal Affairs, is presumably serving its purpose, but members of the County Council today mildly objected that it does not accessibly set forth details of local costs in a simple manner easy of noting down and taking back home for the nomination meetings toward the end of December.

Facility in a standardized system of book-keeping may be all very well for the provincial government and its road grants, but county councillors like to face the ratepayers at the end of the year with all the available facts, showing where their money went and what it paid for.

"People still feel they belong to their township," Reeve W. A. Anderson remarked, in a comment that the county municipal unit was a development in outlook and awareness that had not yet been fully accepted.

"We'd like to know the costs on certain jobs," said Reeve M. H. Johnston, amplifying the traditionally local view that is mainly directed toward county affairs in their own immediate neighborhoods.

Miss Jennie Batten, clerk and treasurer, told the members that the new system of book-keeping presented difficulties in arriving at separate job costs, and that considerable time would be required to get the information some of the members sought.

Reeve James Gifford, Ennismore, introduced this subject with a request to Reeve Allan B. Mann, Smith, chairman of the county roads committee, for a statement of expenditures in that department up to the first of November.

Railway In Disuse

A transportation relic of the days of long ago of mining hopes along the Peterborough-Hastings boundary, the seven-mile C.N.R. railway stem from Marmora to Cordova is to be abandoned, according to a letter to the County Council from the Dominion Board of Transport.

"There hasn't been a train over that road for the last three years," Reeve Isaac Anderson of Belmont-Methuen told the council. "There used to be about two trains a year go into Cordova to take out pulpwood, but while Smelters were working the mine there, all their haulage was by truck from the C.P.R. at Havelock."

The council simply received the letter in a routine gesture that they saw no reason for opposing the application of the C.N.R. to the board.

The council took off in its morning session today with a pedestrian survey of secondary ideas which produced such comments as Reeve Martin Coughlin's to the effect that at the present decline in indigent demand for a home the House of Refuge could be closed up. Elderly persons receiving pensions were nowadays kept by friends or relatives who were willing to provide them with board and lodgings for the amount of the pensions.

That subject lead to mental cases, and the declaration that the County House of Refuge was no place for old people who should be at Whitby. And the discussion led on to old age pensions in general, and Reeve Gifford expressed the opinion that everybody should be given the pension on proof of age, thereby eliminating the cost of administration of this social service, and treating everybody with equality, those who had saved money during their lives and those who had spent it variously and without thought of the insurance warning that a pick is heavy at sixty-five.

Reeve M. Coughlin remarked that he knew some old people in Douro who were too proud to apply for the pension, and had struggled on for years past the seventy mark. Other members were inclined to agree with Reeve Gifford, and it was suggested that this proposal might be sent on to the government.

Reeve Gifford said he would think it over and perhaps bring in a resolution along the universal pension line before the sessions end.

On the other side of the personal attitude toward government assistance was the account of one man in the county who was getting $16.67 a month railway pension, his wife $20 a month old age pension, and he got $20 for himself by going over the head of the county board which had refused to endorse his claim.

Reeve W. A. Anderson said the Dominion Government intended that a person was entitled to $1 a day of income, $365 a year, with pensions fitting into that figure, but provincial government and local boards had cut it down in their endeavor to save money for the country.

Foley Estate

With a surplus of $700 in the funds of the Almira Grover Foley estate for financial assistance to widows residing in the county, Reeve E. Seeney, Havelock, chairman of the fund committee, proposed that this amount be distributed among the township on the basis of population. Other disbursements had been already made by the committee in the prescribed way. The council accepted Mr. Seeney's suggestion by a resolution moved by Reeve Gifford and seconded by Reeve Curtin of Galway.

Hastings Couple Given Shower

HASTINGS, Nov. 20.—(ENS). — An enjoyable event, attended by a large crowd from the surrounding district, took place in the Hastings town hall on Monday evening, when a miscellaneous shower was held in honor of Mr. and Mrs. Francis Parker, whose marriage took place on Saturday, November 9th. Mrs. Parker, the former Ruby Fleming, was a daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Fleming of the Cobourg Road.

The gifts received by the young couple were beautiful and numerous and included crystal, linen, silver and kitchenware. The bride's mother, Mrs. Fleming, and the groom's mother, Mrs. Parker, were assisted by Mrs. Max Scott in unwrapping and arranging the gifts upon the table on the stage.

Fife's orchestra furnished music for dancing.

Mother, Mix Your Own Cough Remedy. It's Fine.

Gives Quick Relief. Saves Money. Easily Mixed.

This well-known home-mixed medicine costs very little, but it gives delightful, swift-acting relief from coughs due to colds. It takes but a moment to prepare—it's so easy a child could do it. And it saves real money.

Make a syrup by stirring 2 cups of granulated sugar and one cup of water a few moments, until dissolved. No cooking is needed.

Then get 2½ ounces of Pinex from any druggist. Pour this into a 16 oz. bottle and add your syrup. Thus you make 16 ounces of really splendid cough remedy—and it gives you four times as much cough medicine for your money. It never spoils, lasts a family a long time, and children love its taste.

And for quick, satisfying relief, you'll say it's really splendid. It has a three-fold action. It loosens the phlegm, soothes the irritated membranes, and helps clear air passages. You'll be delighted by its prompt, pleasing results.

Pinex is a compound

Tribute Paid Memory Walter Stocker

A sincere tribute to the memory of the late Alderman Walter Stocker, for many years an ardent worker on the Board of the Children's Aid Society, was paid by Chairman James Dutton at the monthly meeting Tuesday afternoon. "I do not know the year the Children's Aid Society was formed in the city of Peterborough," he said, "but I have an idea that right from its conception Walter Stocker was identified with it. His work in this connection was outstanding. The interest he showed in everything pertaining to the welfare of the society was more than ordinary interest, and I think that sometimes it amounted almost to a passion."

While admitting that on many occasions there were sharp differences of opinion, Mr. Dutton declared that he always felt that in anything Walter Stocker had to say about the affairs of the society he was absolutely sincere. "He was animated only by the desire to see the affairs of the organization carried out in a business-like way," said Alderman Dutton, who feels that it must have been a great joy to the late Walter Stocker's heart to live to see the day when at last the society was functioning as he thought it ought. "That, of course, has been the result of the efforts of a great many people," he remarked. "In all these years there were many difficulties to be faced, but it was in the meeting of these difficulties that the late Mr. Stocker's greatest contribution was made."

Beautified Grounds

Referring to Walter Stocker's love of flowers, which led him to help in no small measure in beautifying the appearance of the grounds around the shelter, making the place a pleasure and a delight to many in the city who knew nothing about the C.A.S., Chairman Dutton stated that this alone was evidence of the love and patience of a man who "felt what he had to do, and did it." The Friday before he died, he had called the chairman of the Board to ask if the planting of trees around the property of the shelter would improve it, and had been told to go ahead. Mentioned also was the wealth of experience Alderman Stocker had brought to his work in connection with the Board, and the characteristic shrewdness which resulted, not only in good work being done, but in its being done in the most economical way. Reference was made to the work done in the Shelter basement, an excellent job completed at very little cost, and of Mr. Stocker's interest in the summer painting, always with the idea of advancing the work of the society. Brief reference to his good works were also made by Dr. P. J. Kelly and R. H. Parsons.

In respect to the memory of the late Board member, "a devoted servant, and a man who gave the best that was in him that he might see certain ideals carried out, and brought to fruition," members stood for a few moments in silence.

Selling Lots?

Consideration was given to disposal of certain lots on the Shelter property, the Board deciding to leave the matter in the hands of the committee appointed for the purpose, with instructions to dispose of the lots, and decide what restrictions should be placed so far as building is concerned. The committee will also consider the question of administration of the Shelter.

C. S. Cummer gave a report regarding the recent purchase of a 1940 Chevrolet car for the use of the office staff, and on the motion of Dr. Robt. Nott, a membership is to be taken in the Ontario Motor League. Mrs. J. S. Fanning was appointed convener of the Shelter Christmas party, as in former years.

The superintendent, Miss Rachael Young, reported 221 visits during the month of October; 106 office interviews; 151 telephone calls; 198 letters sent out. "Fourteen families, only three of whom were previously known to us, came to our attention during the month," she said. "The problems presented being desertion, incompatability, theft by children, poor housing, delay in receiving Soldiers' Separation Allowances, and five investigations for Soldiers' Dependent's Allowance. From time to time your society is questioned as to why the work involved in the investigations for Dependent's Allowance should be added to an already heavy load. Every attempt is being made in this present war to use existing organizations, and the Government has honored us by a recognition of the ability of the C.A.S. to do such a job. We might as well say 'Why have we a Red Cross; Why do we knit; why not let the government do all this work?' The answer is evident."

The administration of Soldier's Dependent's Allowances is a time consuming task, with the necessity for it in some instances becoming more and more evident, the superintendent explained. "Your society is finding considerable difficulty at times to get assistance for families, particularly clothing, where there is illness, inadequate income, etc. We are not minimizing the needs of our children across the sea, and it is our sincere hope that our children will not be subjected to the fears and uncertainties of those children. If, however, we are to intelligently plan for the post-war period, we must consider the needs of our children here," Miss Young emphasized. "We must see they are given the opportunity for education. It is a thrill to know that consideration is being given at Ottawa to some plan for co-ordination of Women's War Efforts, and we feel this might broaden itself out into a plan for co-ordination of all women's efforts."

The society ended the month of October with an interest in 149 families as compared to 106 in 1939.

King Inspects St. Michael's Cathedral

King George is shown with clergymen and Coventry residents as he inspected the ruins of St. Michael's Cathedral in Coventry. The cathedral, dating back to the 14th century, was blasted by German bombs in the raid that killed and wounded 1,000 persons in the city. The Queen, not shown in this photo, accompanied the King on a tour of the city, offering their sympathy to relatives and friends of the victims of the "revenge" raid.

Germans Feeling Sting Of R.A.F.

LONDON, Nov. 20 — (CP). — The Air Ministry said yesterday that four large buildings of the Union Chemical Factory on an island at the junction of the Oder and Moll Rivers at Stettin had been wrecked, the biggest oil refinery at Hanover destroyed, and the Deutsche Vacuum Oil Company at Bremen put out of production.

Damage to the power house of the Fokker airplane works at Amsterdam, Holland, stopped production there for several weeks.

Harvests in many parts of Germany are rotting ungathered in the fields, the bulletin said, and added: "The disorganization of transport is so acute that sufficient workers cannot be taken to the fields nor crops moved to storehouses."

Invasion Yet?

London, Nov. 20 (CP).

SIR EDWARD GRIGG, war office undersecretary, warned the House of Commons Tuesday, Germans might attempt to invade Britain "at any time," particularly since their triumphs are beginning to look a little tarnished."

A large part of the Nazi army, he declared, still "stands marshalled behind invasion ports."

Banned Tracts Strew Lindsay

LINDSAY, November 20 (ENS)—Jehovah's Witnesses were busy in Lindsay and district over the week-end. On Sunday morning residents of the town as well as villages in the district found pamphlets at their doors, which must have been distributed at a late hour at night. The tracts or pamphlets were entitled "End of Nazism." They consisted of thirty-two pages, and were similar to those distributed in the suburbs of Toronto early Sunday morning. The police are investigating.

A government plane flew over the northern part of Victoria County on the week-end and threw quite a scare into a farmer living near Raven Lake. He saw the machine swoop low as it neared a stretch of bush along the lake, and concluded that it had crashed into the water. He got in contact with the police at Lindsay and two officers went out to investigate. They came across another farmer who also saw the plane. He stated that it swooped low over the lake, then rose and disappeared.

Too Much Talk Before Dakar

HALIFAX, Nov. 20 (CP)—Failure of the "Free French" forces to take Dakar is attributed by Edouard Jonas—by his own assertion a leader in the movement headed by General Charles de Gaulle—to "either too quick or not quick enough action." If the move had been taken in July, there might have been success, he said.

M. Jonas, a member of the pre-war French Chamber of Deputies, was in Halifax last night en route to New York where he will confer with Eugene Houdry, chief of the Free French forces in America.

"We don't want any more mistakes like that in Dakar," he said in a determined voice. "That's one reason why I can't tell you much about why I'm in America. There was too much talk in advance before Dakar. Everyone in London knew about it beforehand."

According to the picture painted by M. Jonas, Dakar still looms big on the international scene. "We must get Dakar," he said, "and that's most important so far as you here in America are concerned."

STRESSES VALUE OF PICTURES

No small part of our enjoyment and understanding of people—places and incidents is conveyed to us through the Eye of Pictures—Newspapers—Magazines—Circulars—Paintings—Etchings—etc. Though pictures make us visualize persons—places, scenes, etc., in many instances never seen by us, and they thereby give us a comprehension it would be impossible otherwise to receive—is not the same experience true in our personal lives? We see pictures of our friends—our loved ones— at different ages—in different moods—under different surroundings—and they invariably bring back memories never to be forgotten. At one time picture taking was considered the work for Specialists—not so now, for with the wonderful developments in photographic equipment it is comparatively simple for the Amateur to take pictures—not only under ideal conditions, but in Black and White—in Colors—Out of doors—and Inside—all vivid—Clear and in True and Natural surroundings. Needless to say these lifelike recordings are invaluable not only to you, but also for your friends and dear ones. There is a great difference in pictures, and much of that difference depends on the person taking the picture, but better lenses—high-speed recording devices, variety of apertures and other improvements do much toward more perfect pictures, and while every Camera or Kodak is invaluable, still you may wish to know more about the different styles, their merits, etc., and as the staffs of the Tamblyn Drug Stores are well versed in such knowledge, we invite you to call in for any information you may wish, and may we remind you that while in the store, if you are so inclined, you may SAVE MONEY by acquiring Quality Fresh Merchandise from our list of Specials

Doing The Impossible

Sir Nevile Henderson, last British Ambassador to Berlin, but not now connected with the diplomatic service in any capacity, made an address at Ipswich, in which he said that in 1938 Germany could have dropped 2,000 bombs on London, "and we could have made no reply."

Official London has made no comment on the address, and perhaps there is nothing much which could be said. Sir Nevile had referred to the same matter long ago, when he said that on September 28, 1938, Britain did not possess one Spitfire. There were two experimental Hurricanes, and there were seven up-to-date anti-aircraft guns for the defence of London, while 400 was the minimum number for effective work.

The former Ambassador was bringing these facts to the front to show why the late Neville Chamberlain, then Prime Minister, went to Munich to bargain for peace or to try and delay war. He feared critics never did understand the situation; they did not know that Chamberlain held little in his hand apart from his umbrella.

Two years ago Britain was actually in possession of very few of the aircraft which have been found most effective today. That is why we read in the despatches that British workmen are toiling today as "never men worked before." They are bringing into existence their own salvation and that of their country.

The usual speed at which men work has been forgotten; it has been laid aside and nothing but the utmost in effort is now considered or tolerated. They are right on the front line of battle and it is borne in on them every hour of the day and night that it is a matter of life or death.

We may consider we are doing quite well in this country, but we have not yet learned the meaning of supreme effort. "Now" and "at once" are the industrial slogans in Britain today.

One of history's greatest achievements has been taking place in that snug little island home of the British people. They actually plunged into a war for which they were not prepared, and they went to war with a mighty nation which had been doing nothing else but preparing for eight long years.

When Sir Nevile Henderson speaks of the weak air defence of London in September of 1938 he is merely recitng something in 1940 which was openly paraded on the floor of the British House of Commons two years ago. The state of the defensive organization of London was deplorable.

Britain has been in the position of the nation which had to fight and get ready to fight at one and the same time. Never has she had reserves on which to draw, and it is only within recent weeks that official confirmation has been given to the news that reserves of aircraft are actually beginning to accumulate.

The complete story cannot be told today, and it will have to wait for the historian of the future to give it amplification and perspective. Britain has been doing what could not be done.

Another Farm Problem

The man living in an urban centre would probably not be much concerned because the price of bran, shorts and middlings increased. Within a month the price has gone up from $3 to $4 per ton, and that means real money to the farmer who has to buy the stuff.

These staples, bran, middlings and shorts, are by-products of the processing of wheat into flour. We have no end of wheat in the country; we possess so much of it that the business of finding more places to put it becomes embarrassing, but the market for flour has been closing in due to war conditions. There are still in existence some foreign outlets, but they do not compare favorably with those of other years.

That in turn means that the supply of by-products, which the farmer needs for feeding his stock, is decreasing, and the price is going up. He could probably stand that if he were able to get an increased price for his produce. Hogs, though, which were quoted a month ago at $11.40, are now bringing $10.10 per hundred, and at some of the packing house centres the price has fallen below the $10 mark.

No one can accuse the farmer of making money out of the war, because he isn't. It is a strange and almost unnatural position in which he finds himself today in a land where there is such a stock of wheat. Wheat in turn is the source of those three things he wants, bran, shorts and middlings, and yet they decrease in volume according to the decrease in the milling of flour, and the price goes up. It happens too often that the farmer is found at the receiving end when any new problem arises.

Calls It Plain Stupidity

There is not much to be said about the venture of the armed-merchantman, "Jervis Bay," beyond admitting it was magnificent. A German surface raider appeared in the distance, and the convoy was open to attack. The commander of the Jervis Bay saw there was but one thing to do, and that was for his vessel, with armament which was not in the same class as the German raider, to turn aside and open the attack. At the same time he could throw up a smoke screen of sufficient size to enable the craft in the convoy to escape by scattering. And that is what took place.

A crew member who escaped on a raft after the Jervis Bay was blown to pieces presents another angle. He claims that the commander of the German raider was positively stupid in spending so much time on the destruction of the Jervis Bay, the engines of which were put out of commission early in the fight, but whose guns, even if of ineffective size, kept blazing away.

Inside of 15 minutes the Jervis Bay was crippled, but the German vessel spent another 45 minutes pounding away at it, and that allowed one full hour for the defenceless ships in the convoy to pile on full steam and make their escape.

So there are two features to the story, (1) the magnificent daring and sacrifice of the Jervis Bay, and (2) the utter stupidity of the German command in spending so much time there while he might have overtaken several of the other vessels. Having made sure the Jervis Bay was crippled he could have gone off to bag the others. The rescued Canadian who witnessed and participated in the entire engagement called it plain stupidity, and he was probably not far from the truth.

Digging Out The Spies

United States is in a mood to listen to Martin Dies, the Texas Democrat who has been chief of the Congressional Committee investigating Un-American Affairs. Martin Dies has been going about his business for months, and there were long periods when no person seemed particularly interested in what he was doing. Even when he brought out sufficient evidence to send the head of the German-American Bund to jail it did not arouse public feeling. But he kept on going and today public feeling is with him.

Martin Dies has stated that his committee now has evidence "that Germany, Italy, Japan and Russia are working very closely in this country to prevent United States preparedness and to prevent aid to Great Britain."

There are hundreds of "foreign agents or persons of doubtful patriotism" in national defence industries. Manufacturers had been informed but they hesitated to make dismissals because they were fearful of running foul of regulations of the National Labor Board which forbids dismissals. Martin Dies wants a showdown and he will get it.

This investigation is not just a general review. Not a bit of it. For instance—Dies brought by special plane from Los Angeles a young man of 23 years, Heinrich Fassbender, who had been going under the name of Harry Smith. He is sick of working for the German secret police (Gestapo), and asks that measures be taken to see that he is not deported. He had in his possession photographs and drawings of United States industrial plants where war material is being made. He had been receiving money from Germany in amounts ranging from $100 to $200 at a time, and Martin Dies has complete records of all these payments. Fassbender had entered United States some time ago on a visa from Japan and came on a German freighter as a seaman. He had formerly worked for the Germans in Belgium and Spain in fifth column efforts.

There are the names of 300,000 persons on the Dies list and the chairman says they will all be called. Martin Dies is not dealing with rumors or gossip but he is bringing forth actual proof of the extent to which European powers of the dictator type have been worming their way into the vitals of United States. They would smash the efforts of that country to defend itself if they could, and they are there to prevent aid being sent to Britain. The free people of the world may yet have cause to remember with gratitude the name and work of Martin Dies.

Their Praises Unsung

The director of public information does well to call the attention of Canadians to the exploits of some of Canada's sons about which little or nothing is heard.

We know a lot of what Canadian military airmen are doing. It is a glorious record and rightly much is being said about it. But this other group, the men from overseas who are civil pilots in British airways are not so well known.

With their British colleagues these fliers are keeping the Empire's air lines going, despite the difficulties of civil flying in war time. The feats of these pilots do not often get the headlines and their praises are seldom sung. But they are doing plenty, as the director of public information points out, to earn places of honor with "the few to which so many owe so much."

Every week Captain Bruce Middleton, a Canadian from Vancouver, takes off from Britain in a giant American-made air liner and with passengers and important mail flies to and from one of Europe's leading capitals.

The Air Force bombers who gaily defy enemy fighters and "ack-ack" defences on their night raids over Germany at least are armed.

Middleton does it unarmed, uses no wireless and must rely on oxygen breathing for most of the journey.

Earlier in the war comrades of his flew the so-called stratosphere plane regularly from Britain to Norwood, Sweden and Finland. Others during the Norwegian campaign took the famous Atlantic air liners Cabot and Caribou on perilous secret missions from which they never returned.

These civil pilots share, too, the perilous job of flying in daylight from Britain to Lisbon, taking passengers and mail over the Bay of Biscay which the Nazis claim to control.

These daredevils of the civil air lines are serving on the great horseshoe Empire route from Durban to Sydney and generally helping to keep going the Empire air lines.

Today these air lines still serve twenty-four countries and five continents and cover 30,000 miles a week, only five per cent. less than in peace time.

In the midst of our applause for the airmen of the Air Force we can stop for a moment to cheer the gallant lads in the civil air service who are doing their part in beating Hitler.

NOTE AND COMMENT

Currency is more elastic, says one expert, but what we would like would be to have it slightly more adhesive.

Ottawa report says that revenue is showing a sharp upswing. It will all be needed.

If the Italian navy will not come out and be wrecked the British will just have to wreck it where it is.

Something seems to have gone haywire. The Greeks went out to defend their land from invasion, and not to start an invasion of Albania.

One U.S. resident celebrated being called to the army and found after he had registered in two places. Possibly that was safer than not having registered at all.

Police secured the names of several hundred alleged gamblers in Toronto by requesting production of registration cards. And that is one place where a man is likely to have stated his proper name and address.

Frank Knox, Secretary of the U.S. Navy, says plainly that United States is not appeasing any nation on earth. And the world being what it is at the moment, that kind of language is readily understood.

WHO WON?

(By A.R.K.)

¶ Out where I lived the people said, they had to travel far for bread, or for a piece of meat; if some one had a store out there, the business should be pretty fair, 'twould save them blistered feet.

¶ The thing looked rather good to me, a fair amount of trade I'd see, I really could not loose; I'd sell them prunes and fish and cheese, and after I got used to these, might add a line of shoes.

¶ And when I opened up my store, the people all began to roar, and words were rather rough; they said my stock was far too small, I couldn't fill their wants at all, I hadn't bought enough.

¶ And then I added on a wing, and sold the folk most everything, and trade was mighty good; the step I'd made would turn out right, for trade I didn't have to fight, the thing went like it should.

¶ Another chap two blocks away, he opened up a store one day, and cut his profits thin; so that my customers would stay, I had to slash then right away, and follow after him.

¶ Three months of that and I was through, I knew not just what next I'd do, my pocket book was lame; I closed my store and looked around, then at the other store I found—that he had done the same.

United States May Take Hand In Martinique

By CHARLES P. STEWART

WASHINGTON.—As I've had occasion to remark before, the navy department isn't telling what's the real purpose of the U. S. sea forces' manifest activity in the Caribbean. It's a matter of guesswork. However, the guessing in Washington has simmered down to a pretty confident guess that Uncle Sam is about to take charge of the French island of Martinique and maybe of the island of Guadeloupe also. Some guesses are that it will be done by December at the latest. If so, the proceedings will not be exclusively the United States'. It will be Pan-American. But the U.S. will do the actual occupying.

Chas. P. Stewart

The idea isn't to deprive France of its West Indian possessions permanently, but only to police them while the war lasts, and, even after that, to prevent their transfer by the French to German management in effect, though perhaps not nominal.

Guessing again, the Washington administration is said to have information that German aviators are being quite numerously smuggled onto the two islands, particularly Martinique, from the Mexican east coast, from Central America and from the northern South American mainland. The islands, to be sure, are blockaded by the British, now that France is under the Nazi thumb. Still, the patrol can't be maintained strictly enough to guard against landings, a few men at a time, if they have the nerve to ferry themselves over in small craft and put into out-of-the-way places on the insular fringes.

It isn't a method by which anything like an army can gain a foothold on either Martinique or Gaudeloupe.

GERMAN PILOTS?

WHAT'S said to worry the U.S. navy department is the report that the supposedly incoming Germans are skilled airmen. Now, at Fort-de-France, Martinique, are 100-odd American-made airplanes, which the Reynaud government bought in the United States before the French capitulated to Herr Hitler. Assembling them at Fort-de-France, the Reynaud outfit's plan was to get them across the Atlantic on the plane-carrier Bearn, to co-operate with the British. But before the Bearn could make its get-away from Martinique, the Reynaud government had folded up and the Petain government, subservient to Berlin, had succeeded it at Vichy. The British thereupon corked up the Fort-de-France harbor, the Bearn can't leave and the planes are stranded. Even if they could fly across the ocean, there's been nobody to man them.

Naturally, the Axis wants them, and the assumption is that the Petain government, willy-nilly, is acquiescent.

And it's Washington's theory, if its guessing is good, that the Germans are trying to get enough of their own fliers onto Martinique to do the flying. It also is suggested that they may not all fly to Europe—that some of them may take exploratory scoots over the Panama canal, possibly with a supply of bombs to spill on the big ditch. For obviously the Axis would feel safer if it could close that short cut for the American fleet out of the Pacific into the Atlantic.

The planes unquestionably are France's. The Reynaud government paid for them and the Petain government inherited them from the Reynaud government.

Nevertheless, it's understandable that Washington, not to mention Britain, greatly prefers to keep them stalled on Martinique. Accounts are that they're deteriorating rapidly, with no satisfactory accommodations to shelter or care for them, and that soon they'll be unflyable. "Fine! Let 'em go on deteriorating," is said to be the U.S. navy department's attitude.

NATIVES NEAR STARVATION

THE populations of Martinique and Guadeloupe are understood to be dead willing to have Pan-America take over control of their destinies. Blockaded as they are, they are near starvation. Sugar and rum are their principal products, but they can't live exclusively upon sugar and rum; they want foreign markets for 'em, in order to be able to buy a bit of other stuff. And, bottled up as they are, they can't get any exports out or imports in. The story is that their governor-general himself is disposed to invite Pan-American occupation.

Hard-boiled Admiral Robert, a Petainist, and his government's naval commander in the blockaded harbor of Fort-de-France, is balky, though. He may yet have to have a firecracker exploded under him.

UNDERWATER BEARDS

FROM what a submarine commander has told a correspondent, life under water, except when sudden developments occur, is quiet and is occupied during the waiting hours in conversation and the cultivation of the beard.

"We all grow beards," he said, "because it is an experiment with a lot of us. Once when I got into harbor I was very proud of my beard—secretly, of course,— and I was unexpectedly asked to go on the quarter-deck. It was then that I found that the engine-room artificers had decided to award me the prize for the best home-grown beard in the flotilla. The award took the form of a razor about a yard long, a huge piece of soap, and a brush with which you could have lathered Neptune. It cost me about £5 in drinks; and then they insisted on shaving me. I have the prize at home now — it is a great treasure."—Manchester Guardian.

Gestapo Covers the World

THE GESTAPO is no mere secret intelligence service without executive powers and subject to the laws of the land. The German secret police enjoys absolute immunity for its acts and a measure of control over the administrative departments which approaches supremacy. It is independent of judicial control; it operates by the weight of numbers and ubiquity, aided by an unknown army of informers. Lastly, the members of this force are imbued with the spirit of the National-Socialist Party as well as that of its elite the 'S. S.' These men are regarded as the bodyguard of the German State. They are not policemen working for maintenance of law and order, but admittedly fanatic soldiers of National-Socialist politics, fighters for militant National-Socialism at home and all over the world."

Thus does O. C. Giles sum up the result of his investigations into the workings of the hated German secret service under Heinrich Himmler, the enormously powerful politico-military body without which Hitler's war machine could never have been organized, or achieved its success. In a new title in the Oxford Pamphlets series "The Gestapo."

He continues: "The German name, Geheime Staatspolizie (of which Gestapo is an abbreviation) expresses the nature of the work of this secret police. It watches and punishes its victims secretly thus surrounding itself with an atmosphere of terror. It is answerable to an authority which cannot itself be called to account."

Perhaps the most important single item in the history of this iniquitous group was the appointment of Heinrich Himmler as chief in April, 1934. He was then 33 years of age and backed by some experience in police work. He is a Bavarian from Munich and was one of Hitler's earliest friends, one of his most trusted collaborators. He had taken a leading part in the establishment of the old "S.S." Of Himmler himself, Mr. Giles writes: "Some informants describe him as a pleasant person, others as a sadist.

"He may easily be both. He is unhampered by considerations of humanity and has understood how to instill into his followers and subordinates the 'S.S.' spirit of ruthlessness for the sake of the State. Possibly we can get a truer picture of Himmler by reading his slogan for his Gestapo members: 'We are an order of National-Socialist soldiers and bear the Nordic stamp; we are a sworn community of clans. We march onward into the distant future, imbued with faith and hope, not only that we may put up a better fight than our forefathers, but may ourselves be the forefathers of generations to come, generations which are necessary for the eternal life of the Teutonic German nation.'"

NUMBER 260,000

OF the extraordinary growth of this body of special gangsters Mr. Giles says: "When Hitler took over the Government, Himmler's men number 52,000. By 1939 this force had grown five-fold." And so we come to the men who do the work. They are nearly all men from middle-class German families. They receive courses of military, political, economic and police training and their job is well defined in the statute of 1936 as follows:

"It is the duty of the Secret State Police to expose and to oppose all collective forces which are dangerous to the State, to collect and evaluate the results of these findings, to inform the Government and to keep all authorities informed of all evidence. The Chief of the Secret State Police, in agreement with the Minister of the Interior, decides which individual matters are to be given to the Secret State Police."

In practice the Gestapo keeps a keen eye on all forms of journalism, speeches, telephone communications, on all types of religious and fraternal organizations, on lodges and political parties. Every criticism in a beer tavern, on the street, even by children at school, is noted and set down in the record. The list of their pryings in private life is endless. They check on sabotage, on breaches of the food rationing laws. They arrest any whom they suspect and in many cases persons who are not suspected but may have information the Gestapo wishes to have. They interfere in the ordinary courses of law and if a case before a court is not moving satisfactorily (to the Gestapo) they take whatever steps may be necessary to secure a conviction.

They have complete authority to search any premises without other authority than their own, to expel persons from a district, revoke licenses, and issue all manner of orders. They also have power to inflict the supreme penalty—death.

The Gestapo has three forms of action, warning, protective custody, concentration camp. The author does not go into the horrors of these camps, but refers the reader to the British Government White Paper On Treatment of German Nationals in Germany. These camps are the scene of every imaginable cruelty, lust and brutality, and rumor has it that many of the most atrocious cruelties are the creation of Himmler himself. There is no trial, simply arrest and imprisonment. Neither is there any appeal. Once inside a concentration camp, the inmate must accept whatever the guards (Gestapo) care to do to him. Often it is better if he or she dies quickly.

FREE RIDES

Editor Examiner:

Sir,—Is there nothing that can be done toward getting free transportation for our soldier boys. Why is it that those boys must thumb their way from all over Canada in order to get home for a day or two to see their loved ones. I am told that our Government officials travel free. Surely our soldiers are entitled to as much. If not, why not?

If the Government can't afford to give those brave lads who have given up home and family to fight for their country, free transportation then let them take a dollar a month out of our allowance money and give those lads a break and not take a chance of having them killed on the highway trying to thumb a ride, and now that the weather is getting cold could not something like this be done to give our boys free transportation. Mothers, what do you think?

THIS TOTAL WAR

IT IS TIME for that great fighting quality which has placed Canadian arms among the finest in the world and is maintaining that tradition today, it is time for that fighting quality to become dominant in every Canadian, to animate their daily lives, their work, their support of the war effort. There can be no halfway measures in this war, it must be fought with the utmost endeavor of everyone, civilian as well as soldier, and with determination to fight it through to the ultimate conclusion of absolute victory and the crushing conclusion of absolute victory and the crushing of Hitler, his theory of life and his way of living.—Saskatoon Star-Phoenix.

A Bible Message For Today . . . .

Finally, my brethren, rejoice in the Lord. To write the same things to you, to me indeed is not grievous, but for you it is safe....For we are the circumcision, which worship God in the spirit, and rejoice in Christ Jesus, and have no confidence in the flesh. Though I might also have confidence in the flesh. If any other man thinketh that he hath whereof he might trust in the flesh, I more....

But what things were gain to me, those I counted lost for Christ. Yea, doubtless, and I count all things but loss for the excellency of the knowledge of Christ Jesus my Lord. — Phil. 3.

A Bit of Nonsense

Matter of Time

The restaurant advertised rapid service, but did not give it. A patron gave an order, waited patiently, and fell asleep. He awoke to hear the waitress's voice.

"Did you order this sundae?" she asked.

"Good Heavens!" exclaimed the customer in dismay. "I came in here last Monday!"

AS ORDERED

A NOBLEMAN once commissioned Hogarth to paint on his staircase a representation of Pharoah's host in the Red Sea. Finding him unwilling to pay more than half the price asked, Hogarth threatened to refuse the order, but finally agreed to the terms. When the nobleman came to examine the finished picture he found the space covered with red.

"What have we here? I ordered a scene of the Red Sea," he cried furiously.

"Well, you have the Red Sea," Hogarth replied.

'But where are the Israelites?"

"They are all gone over."

'And where are the Egyptians?"

"They are all drowned." — Our Young People.

Drafting Of Assistant Turnkey Not Approved By County Council

"Farmers are getting restless. While others have been doing better since the war started, the farmer has to get along the best he can in the same old way."

That incidental comment by Reeve W. A. Anderson of Otonabee possibly reflects the temper of the county council as it began its final sessions of the year Tuesday afternoon. And Reeve M. H. Johnston of North Monaghan probably indicated the present distraction of farmers in a suggestion that there should be something said about bacon prices before the week ends.

One of the letters in a light file of correspondence was a request from the Navy League for a grant, which was referred to the finance committee.

Appointment of Wilfred Wood by Acting Sheriff F. J. A. Hall to the position of assistant turnkey in the absence of S. G. Johnston who was selected by military authorities for duty at an internment camp involves an increased expenditure of $500 which is shared by the government, the city and the county.

"We don't want the public to think that this council made the appointment," Reeve W. A. Anderson said.

Miss J. A. Batten, county clerk and treasurer, explained that jail appointments had been for years a responsibility of the sheriff. Then it was assumed by the government and when that plan did not work out satisfactorily the authority reverted to the sheriff.

When S. G. Johnston filled out his registration card he mentioned his duty as turnkey and his experience in alloting jail rations, and that information immediately attracted the attention of government officials.

It was said that Mr. Johnston was virtually drafted for rations detail at an internment camp and as a returned soldier he accepted the call within a few days, receiving private's pay with the usual allowance for his wife. In the meantime Mrs. Johnston has continued to reside in the family quarters at the court house acting as matron of the jail, and Sheriff Hall appointed Mr. Wood, an ex-service man of the last war, at $25 a week. The salary was to include the equivalent of an allowance for residence.

Mr. Johnston's salary was $700 a year with the use of an apartment at the court house and light and water.

"It doesn't seem fair to Mr. Johnston and to the county," Reeve W. A. Anderson commented, "and it seems to be a result of two departments of the government not co-operating."

Anonymous Letter.

"That sounds like an inside job; somebody who knows a lot more than the average ratepayer about the arrangements for the court house staff," Miss Batten remarked to the council in regard to an anonymous letter which had been received by Reeve W. A. Anderson. He in turn passed it on to Reeve Isaac Anderson, chairman of the property committee, and although the council at first was inclined not to have it read, the members finally decided to hear what the unknown writer had written about the affair.

Reeve W. A. Anderson suggested that the military authorities might consider substituting Mr. Wood for S. G. Johnston at the internment camp, "and Mr. Johnston could come back here."

Miss Batten's comment on the source of the anonymous letter, when the council asked her if she had any opinion about it, was: "It sounds as if it came from this building."

Reeve J. R. Thompson, Norwood, moved, seconded by Deputy-Reeve Gilbert McIlmoyle of Smith, that the Warden appoint a committee to interview Sheriff Hall about the appointment of the new turnkey.

"What good will that do?" Reeve W. A. Anderson enquired. "We'd have to go to the military authorities."

"We could make an argument, if nothing more," Warden John McColl saaid.

Warden McColl named Reeve W. A. Anderson, M. H. Johnston, A. B. Mann and J. R. Thompson as the committee.

In the discussion of this question there was no reflection whatever on Mr. Wood, and it was said that he was a good official.

About Mr. Johnston's action in responding to the internment camp call, Miss Batten said: "He's a returned soldier, and just that kind of man that if the government said they wanted him for that work he would go, and that is what he did."

The council felt that Mr. Johnston was not in as good a financial position at the camp as when he was engaged at the jail.

First Division Gives Spitfire

Somewhere in England, Nov. 20 (CP Cable)—The Canadian 1st Division's Spitfire fund went over the top today and the £5,000 ($22,250) raised by voluntary contributions by officers and men will be presented shortly to Lord Beaverbrook, Minister of Aircraft Production.

The division is believed to be the first military formation to raise funds for the purchase of an airplane for the Royal Air Force. Maj.-Gen. G. R. Fearkes, general officer commanding the division, said: "Every unit made a most generous contribution. A great many men gave a day's pay or more."

A huge bottle labelled "A blitz against Fritz" stood in the lobby of divisional headquarters. Passers-by tossed in small change.

Summoned to the state penitentiary where her father lies near death, Lona Ackerman is dismayed when he fails to recognize her. He is serving a life sentence for a murder which occurred when he sought to avenge his daughter's honor. Finding a friend in Jim Claridge, Lona had just begun to take a new interest in life when the prison warden telegraphed her of her father's illness. Alone in the world, she had spent months, finding jobs, then losing them when it became known she was a convict's daughter. Finally Jim had found her a new position, saw more and more of her, until they fell in love. The prison warden takes Lona to his home. As they enter, two convicts confront them with guns.

(NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY)

CHAPTER FIFTEEN.

THIS COULDN'T be real, Lona caught herself thinking again and again throughout the harrowing scenes of the next few minutes. This couldn't be happening to her. It was some other girl, some story-book character who was here in the warden's house, hands uplifted before the menacing guns of two desperate, escaping prisoners.

She watched, dazed, while Warden Lewis was forced by the sneering Lefty to order out his car, and dismiss the chauffeur who came to the door to report to him when it was drawn up and waiting in the drive outside the house.

With the warden's clothes covering their tell-tale gray uniforms, the two convicts herded Lewis and Lona into the car. The warden driving, they trunkled out through the darkened drives to the heavy gates.

"No!" Lona heard herself protesting as the gate swung open in the gathering mist, and the road stretched before them unguarded. "I can't leave Daddy! You can't take me—"

"Shut up, you!" A harsh voice silenced her, and the gun in Louie's hand pressed closer to her ribs.

Away from the towering walls, the one called Lefty ordered the warden to turn into a side street and come to a stop. While the wheels were still spinning, Louie leaned from the back seat, and before Lona knew what was happening, he had brought his gun down with a crack over the warden's head. Lewis slumped, soundlessly, and Lona stifled a scream.

"You've killed him!" The words almost refused to come. "You've killed him—"

"Aw, fer God's sake, shut up, will you!" ordered Lefty, and a stinking bunch of rags was thrust into her mouth and tied with a handkerchief behind her neck.

The warden's body was limp and his head lolled from side to side as they lumped him out and dragged

Fall Breaks Leg Of Bonarlaw Man

BONARLAW, Nov. 20 — (ENS).—Reinard Quackenbush of Bonarlaw suffered a painful accident on Saturday evening. While walking up the 12th Line between his home and M. R. Neal's, he slipped on the icy road and broke his leg near the hip.

He was picked up a few minutes later by Lindsay Mumby, who with the help of some nearby road men placed the injured man in Mr. Mumby's car and took him home.

Dr. Taft of Marmora was summoned and found it necessary to have him taken to Belleville General Hospital.

CANADA'S RUGBY CHAMPIONS PREPARE TO MEET EASTERN TEAM

Bombers Start Training For Trip East

WINNIPEG, Nov. 20.—(CP). — Winnipeg's power-laden Blue Bombers to-day continued practising for a football game which may never materialize.

Aided by almost perfect rugby weather—cloudy skies and temperatures ranging around 40 degrees above zero—Bombers resumed drills this week, whipping the kinks out of stiff joints as they drove ghost formations across Osborne stadium gridiron under the watchful eye of Coach Reg Threlfall.

Champions of Canada in 1939 and winners of the Western Interprovincial Football Union crown again this fall, the blue and gold warriors are brushing up on Canadian Rugby Union rules. All practices are being held under C.R.U. regulations because if the East-West game sponsored by the Sport Service League of Ontario takes place in Toronto Dec. 7 it will be played under rules of the parent body.

All W.I.F.U. League games were played this fall under a combination of American-Canadian rules—contrary to a C.R.U. ruling. This cost Bombers a chance to participate in an official All-Canadian final for the Grey Cup they won at Ottawa a year ago.

All Players in Good Shape.

Manager Joe Ryan of the Bombers reports that all his players are in good shape, free from injury. In spite of the uncertainty of the East-West picture—Ryan said today he still had received no word from Eastern Canada that the game is definitely "on"—all Bomber regulars are turning out for the scrimmages under the C.R.U. code.

The Bomber manager said no arrangements had been made for an exhibition game here to keep the Winnipeg team on edge. He added, however, that if the squad goes East they will welcome a warm-up contest with an eastern club prior to the battle with the eastern champions.

In any event, Bombers would travel a week ahead of the East-West unofficial date because colder weather might interfere with outdoor practices here.

Last fall Threlfall and Ryan scouted the eastern final between Sarnia Imperials and Ottawa Roughriders but the manager said that so far there had been no talk as yet in the Bomber camp that such a scouting trip would be taken this fall.

NEW MARKET TREND

LONDON—(CP). — A new word was coined on the Stock Exchange during a slight rally recently. Traders described the tone, which was still not up to normal, as a "boomlet."

On The Wrong End

OTTAWA, Ill., Nov. 20—(AP).—The Ottawa High School band started to form the word "Hello," for the benefit of the visitors at a recent football game. But the boys making up the letter "O" went astray and found themselves on the wrong end of the word. From the stands, it read: "Ohell."

Kawartha Trent Badminton League Shaped

HAVELOCK, Nov. 20 (ENS)—The Kawartha-Trent Badminton League came into being last Tuesday evening, when representatives from clubs in Campbellford, Lakefield, Hastings, Deloro and Havelock assembled at the local court to discuss the possibilities of forming an organized group, with a regular playing schedule. The plan met with the enthusiastic approval of all present and they immediately named an executive and outlined a schedule.

D. F. Miller of Havelock was elected president of the new league, with George Ralph of Campbellford as 1st vice-president; Jack Ryan, of Lakefield 2nd vice-president; and Earl Hahn of Hastings 3rd vice-president. Mrs. C. R. Whittemore of Deloro was appointed secretary-treasurer.

A single schedule will be adopted, making four games at home and four away for each club. It is expected that Deloro will combine with the Marmora club to enter the league, with the probability that their games will be played on the latter's court. Entry fee was set at $2 per club, with the provision that the home club supply the birds in each case.

Teams are to be composed of twelve players, six men and six women. They will play a total of twelve games, six mixed doubles, three women's doubles and three men's. The regulation 15 point games will be played, under the supervision of a referee and two linesmen.

The team captains are to notify the secretary of the result of each tournament. A win will score 5 points, a loss 3 points, and a draw 4 points apiece for each team.

Games are scheduled to start at 8.30 p.m. E.D.T., and in case of postponement, the home club is to be notified by noon on the day of the games, if at all possible.

A copy of the minutes of this meeting, and also of the schedule when it has been completed, is to be sent to the secretary of each club. The schedule will commence in January.

A lively round-robin session was enjoyed by the visiting club members, before and after the meeting.

SPORTS – DAY BY DAY

By FRED D. CRAIG

A good start was made last night toward what is hoped will be a flourishing season for junior hockey when players and members of the executive of the Peterborough Hockey Club met in the Chamber of Commerce to discuss plans for the season. The most important item of business was the appointment of Archie Weir, last year's coach to again handle the drilling of the 1940-41 edition of the junior Petes. Weir, a player of considerable experience, and himself a member at one time of a champion junior squad, made a good job of coaching the team last season and it was felt that he was the man for the post this season. The meeting also decided to invite Jimmy Lehane of lacrosse fame to act as manager of the juniors. He has lots of energy and enthusiasm and if he will take the job will undoubtedly supply the necessary leadership.

* * * * * *

The outlook for a good junior team this season, in spite of the fact that a number of the 1939-40 squad granduate this winter, is bright. Enough players are left over from last season to form a nucleus for this year's squad and there are reinforcements on the horizon. A number of likely junior players from around the district are now working in Peterborough and will be available for the team. Among them is Morrison, a good goalie from Lakefield. In addition there is a former Ottawa junior player on the staff of the military training camp and another youngster who played senior hockey last season although still in the teen age class. Out of all this material it is hoped to build up a fast squad of kids who will give a good account of themselves.

* * * * * *

Good news comes from the intermediate camp as well. Word has been received from Don Crowe and Drake Jopling that the two boys will be glad to play with the Petes again this season if the necessary arrangements can be made. Both have signed with the People's team in the Varsity League but that will not interfere with their playing with the Petes; in fact it will help to keep them in shape. Don Crowe in writing to say that he and Jopling want to play here again this season jokingly remarked that he understood that it was Goalie Ray Harding who sent out the S.O.S. call for the defence pair. Red Creighton has decided to remain in town this winter and the Petes have already applied to the Owen Sound club for his transfer. Another possibility is Eddie Lalonde who played hockey in Montreal and Cornwall is now working in Peterborough.

Barring Porter From Finals

Football fans may not be generally aware of the fact that if the Balmy Beach outfit win the O.R.F.U. honors as they undoubtedly will they will be unable to play their star backfielder Bobby Porter in the series against the Big Four winners. Porter, of course, is a professional baseball player and as such is banned by the Canadian Rugby Union. He is participating in the Ontario loop only with special permission of the O.R.F.U. and it is understood that the Canadian Union regards him as a tainted individual liable to contaminate the simon-pure amateurs in the Big Four group. Consequently it is thumbs down for the Balmy Beach star so far as the playoffs are concerned and the football moguls reach a new low in hypocrisy by taking the stand that because a man plays baseball for money in the gummer time he cannot play in the fall against men who play football for money—as some of the stars undoubtedly do.

* * * * * *

A lot of players have felt the urge to go to Ottawa in the last season or two. Surely it was not love of the scenery around the capital that inspired their move. They went to Ottawa because it was worth their while going there and it does not need a blueprint to show most people just what the reason is that good football players moved from Toronto, Sarnia and elsewhere to the seat of government. Nobody is worrying very much about that of course. It is an accepted feature of amateur sport that the boys who bring in the money at the box office are at least entitled to cut in on the purse. But when a governing body under whose jurisdiction the true principles of amateurism have been slaughtered rises up and says that a professional ball player cannot be allowed to play amateur football the whole setup has a sour smell. It is possible for a man to accept an honest salary in professional baseball and still be a better amateur in football than a lot of the birds playing the latter sport today. That is why the C.R.U. ruling is so objectionable—at least to that section of the public which hates sham.

* * * * * *

The failure of the Boston Bruins to get going still remains the feature of the N.H.L. race up to this stage. Art Ross's powerful club have played four times this season and have yet to win one. Last night they battled into a two-goal lead over the Detroit Red Wings, only to blow that margin in the final period and split the points with Jack Adams' apparently greatly improved squad. The Boston defensive system, up to this season a feature of the Bruins' play, is apparently suffering from the heebiejeebies. Fifteen goals have been rattled past Brimsek in four games which doesn't sound very much like the Boston of old. It may be that the veterans on the Bruin lineup have not yet played themselves into shape. It is too early to read the N.H.L. champions out of the party. They are likely to bound back with a vengeance before long and knock all and sundry for a loop.

Can't Get Going

Meanwhile the New York Rangers remain the only team in the circuit which has not been beaten this season. Going into last night's game with their fellow New Yorkers, the Amerks, with a record of a win and two ties, the classy club of Mister Lester Patrick succeeded in staving off a hectic third period rally by Red Dutton's men and winning the decision by 3 to 2. The Rangers showed their old speed and finesse in picking up three goals in the first two periods but they weakened on end and just managed to last out. At that, of course Rangers just now are miles ahead of their standing at this stage a year ago when they had all kinds of trouble getting their machine started on its winning way. The New Yorkers will not be helped in the next few games by a shoulder injury that has put Art Coulter, star defense player on the shelf. Coulter was slammed into the boards and as a result needs hospital treatment.

* * * * * *

Big Jack Portland, well known here because of his appearance on the softball diamond with Dit Clapper, Bobby Bauer, Milt Schmidt and other pro hockey stars has been bought by the Montreal Canadiens from Chicago, the Montrealers paying $12,500 for a player who broke into the cash and carry loop in 1933-34 as a member of their club. Portland was a big green kid then. The Canadiens lost little time in using him in a trade with the Boston Bruins. He developed into a good defense man under Art Ross and there is no doubt that his presence on the defense of the club which introduced him into the big show should help the Canadien rookies immensely. They don't step in there wide open and carefree when Portland is bowling them over back of the blue line.

Sporting Chili Con Carne: Looks like Sydney Millionaires should have imported a few more Kirkland Lakers. Kowcinak and McCreedy scored four goals for them last night but the Millionaires were beaten 6 to 5 just the same....Toronto fans will have to wait until next month to know whether they will have a ball club next summer....Things are moving in the baseball world. Following Jimmy Wilson's appointment as Cub manager, Jewel Ens was named by the Reds as coach. Ens' job as manager at Indianapolis has been taken by Wade Killifer....At least a score of Peterborough fans will travel to Toronto Saturday to see the Argos-Ottawa game....Syd Howe is going great guns. He scored two goals for Detroit last night and is leading the scoring parade with nine points.

Davis' License Cancelled; Is Fined $2,500

NEW YORK, Nov. 20— (AP). — The heaviest penalty ever imposed on a fighter by the New York State Athletic Commission was pinned on Al (Bummy) Davis on Tuesday for the tactics which caused his disqualification in the second round of his tilt with Fritzie Zivic last Friday night.

The Commission revoked his licence and penalized him $2,500 on his $11,340 share of the gate from the fiasco in Madison Square Garden. Referee Billy Cavanagh stopped the fight after Davis had struck the welterweight champion in foul territory eight or ten times in the second round. After the bout was halted, Davis started fighting again and finally had to be restrained by police.

In addition, Commissioner Bill Brown declared that while the Commission does not have the power to revoke a licence for life, there will "have to be a new commission here" before Al gets another permit to fight in New York State.

The fistic fathers of both Pennsylvania and New Jersey immediately agreed with the New York action. Abe Greene, Jersey Commissioner, sent a letter stating he would concur with whatever the New York body does. Leon Rains, Pennsylvania chairman paying a visit at the New York Commission offices, pointed out that "Davis does not have a licence in Pennsylvania, but he certainly couldn't get one now."

In explaining at the Commission's closed session to-day, Davis was quoted by Chairman John J. Phelan as saying that Zivic was guilty of thumbing, holding, and punching and hitting on the break in the first round; that Al was in such a condition after the first heat he "didn't really know what happened," and that if he (Davis) did any fouling "it was not intentional."

Davis, who arrived at the session wearing dark glasses, presented a certificate from a physician which said: "Davis is still under my care, has extensive lacerations under the right eyelid, and has blurred vision of the right eye."

To counter this, the Commission had its physician, Dr. William Walker, and three other physicians on its staff examine Davis during the meeting.

"We discovered no evidence of an inflammatory condition around the eye itself that could be attributed to an injury," Dr. Walker said.

The only other penalty anywhere near as severe as this punishment was imposed by the Commission three years ago on Jim Braddock for failure to defend his heavyweight championship against Max Schmeling. At that time, the Commission fined Jim and his manager, Joe Gould, $1,000 each and ordered their $2,500 appearance money forfeited to Schmeling.

Ski Club Commences Training For Winter Season

E. Fritz Loosli, who is chief ski instructor at the Chateau Frontenac, Quebec City, and who also for the past two years has been designing skis for the Peterborough Canoe Company, is giving dry ski instructions each Thursday night at 8.00 p.m. in the J. J. Duffus Company showrooms. The instructions are free of charge, and anyone, whether or not he belongs to the Peterborough Ski Club is welcome.

Parallel skiing is a new method of ski instruction introduced for the first time on the American continent by Loosli at the Ski Hawk School in Quebec City. This method departs entirely from the orthodox system or more so known as the snow plow and stem school. The parallel bases its principles on balance and instinct rather than a definite mechanical position given by the snow plow to gain stability. This new method of instruction has proven very successful with skiers spending most of their time skiing where there is a ski tow, such as may be found at Bethany.

Emile Allais, twice world downhill and slalom runner champion, was the first to advocate that the parallel system was the most logical method of teaching a beginner to ski, and only a short month after being introduced in Canada by the head of the Ski Hawk School, American papers such as The New York Times, New York Sun, and many other leading newspapers from Boston and Philadelphia give many enthusiastic comments on the new method which will greatly affect skiing instruction in the future.

Quoting from The New York Sun: "There is no question that parallel skiing is the most radical departure in skiing instruction to appear since the inception of the first ski school. And there is every likelihood that it will have, in the next few winters, a marked effect on every other method in existence."

The result? "Days, weeks and in some cases whole winters spent on mastering the snow plow are completely eliminated, and the pupil has learned to ski gracefully always under control with parallel turns, effortless side slipping and with perfect assurance."

Expert skiers have been skiing parallel for the last three or four years, and the difficulty which arises with every skier wishing to ski parallel, is to unlearn the preliminaries of the snow plow in order to become a proficient high speed skier. The parallel system of instruction is teaching a pupil to learn a method which will be helpful for advanced skiing and not something which should be discarded later on, as is the case in the old school.

RANGERS STOP AMERICANS WHILE BOSTON AND DETROIT PLAY TIE

Detroit Rallies To Force Play Into Overtime

By ROBERT CLARKE
(Canadian Press Staff Writer.)

Vague but persistent rumors are making the rounds that several secret weapons are under consideration by the enemies of New York Rangers as a means of stopping the National Hockey League drive of Lester Patrick's machine.

One report has been heard that Art Ross, the Boston Bruins' inventive genius, intends to start work shortly on a puck that becomes invisible when it touches a Boston hockey stick. Ross is said to be planning to turn his hand towards this idea once he has taken a few more bounces out of his non-bounceable puck.

Another of the reports, all of which are unconfirmed, is that Manager Mervin (Red) Dutton of New York Americans is seeking patents on a plan whereby the Americans' goal net jumps behind the goal judge's cage every time the Rangers start down the ice.

The different N.H.L. leaders are reported to be turning their thoughts to such novel ideas because of the apparent difficulty in derailing the Rangers by ordinary means. The customary measures have failed to bring a defeat to the Rangers in their four games so far this season.

Ordinarily, a four-game undefeated streak wouldn't cause much concern to the other teams in the league. However, all six other clubs remember only too well the time last season that the Rangers set up a record by going 19 games unbeaten. And after all, there has to be a start to such streaks.

Another Victory.

The Rangers made it two victories and two draws for the season last night by defeating their city rivals, the Americans, 3-2, before 8,673 fans. The victory gave the Rangers a game lead in play for the McBeth trophy, which is emblematic of the New York city championship. They won the trophy last season, with five victories, and a tie in seven contests. Boston Bruins and Detroit Red Wings drew 4-4 in the only other game.

The Rangers, in remaining the only undefeated team in the league, ran up a 3-0 lead on goals by Alex Shibicky, Bryan Hextall and Alf Pike before Dutton's men found the range. In the third period Wilf Field scored twice for the Americans, who were pressing hard for the tying score as the game closed.

The game was fast, wide open and produced plenty of hard hitting. Art Coulter, a Ranger defenceman, and Pete Slobodian, an American rearguard, suffered injuries in the contest that may keep them out of action for a couple of games.

Coulter injured his shoulder in the first period when slammed into the boards by Slobodian and may have suffered a bone separation in his shoulder. Slobodian is believed to have fractured a bone in his left cheek in a collision with Phil Watson, Ranger centre, whose stick struck the defenceman as they fell.

Four Of 13 Pass Brimsek.

At Boston, the Wings made their shots count in gaining a draw with the Bruins. They only had 13 drives at Goalie Frank Brimsek but four of them found the inside of the net. At one time the Bruins held a 4-2 lead and seemed headed for their first victory of the season but the Wings pulled even due mostly to the fine work of Defenceman Alex Motter and Forward Syd Howe.

Motter made the score 4-3 early in the third period by caging a 30-footer and on his next turn up the ice he fed Howe a perfect pass to allow Howe the chance to rifle home a blazing 50-footer for the tying score. All the Boston goals came in the second period, going to Mel Hill, Roy Conacher, Art Jackson and Herbie Cain.

Howe opened the scoring with a goal in the middle of the first period while the other Detroit score went to Syd Abel. Howe's two goals gave him a record of three goals and six assists in six games and his nine points makes him the leading point scorer in the league.

Fifty-Yard Pass Nets Fordham Touchdown Against Purdue

The Rambunctious Rams of Fordham banged the Purdue Boilermakers at the Polo Grounds in New York in a gridiron thriller, winning over the Boilermen by 17 to 7 score. First blood for the Rams came on the long touchdown pass which is shown you here by the magic eye. This pass scored in the second period. Play starts with Filipowicz taking the flip from centre... a bit of deception goes with the play; Blumenstock (51) steps around Filipowicz, who fakes a pass to him, but keeps the ball himself and rapidly fades back. To add semblance to the faked end run, Eshmont (2) and Pieculewicz (59), Fordham backfield men, start out around their own end as though running interference. Guard Bennett (11) pulls out of the line and joins them. All this activity frees Left End Dennery for his all important assignment. Blumenstock stops to stand guard over the passer. Filipowicz keeps fading back—fading from the Purdue 36-yard marker almost to midfield. When next we see our hero, his defender, Blumenstock, is out of the picture and a horde of Purduers, led by Guard Miller (50) charges the thrower. But now Filipowicz has his target in his sights. Ignoring the rushing Purdue men, he draws back his arm, aims and fires. Now we move to the action at the Purdue goal line; there we see "Target" Dennery just snagging the ball out of the air—almost on the Purdue goal line.

Hockey's Big Seven

(By The Canadian Press)

Syd Howe, of Detroit Red Wings broke a three-way tie for top place among National Hockey League point-scorers last night, driving in two goals as the Wings played a 4-4 overtime tie with Boston Bruins. Howe now has nine points to the seven compiled by George Allen and Mush March, of Chicago Black Hawks, who were idle. A newcomer to the Big Seven was Defenceman Alex Motter of the Wings, who scored a goal and assisted in another to gain a tie with Bryan Hextall of the Rangers and Bill Carse of the Hawks for the last position.

Falls, Dofascos Battle To 3-All Draw

HAMILTON, Ont., Nov. 20 — (CP). — Two star-studded entries in the Senior A division of the Ontario Hockey Association—Hamilton Dofascos and Niagara Falls Brights—have yet to prove which is the better team. The one that furnishes that proof is a good bet for the league title.

The two clashed here last night in their first meeting of the season and failed to settle anything—even a fight. They played to a 3-3 overtime draw and Hamilton's Doug Fritz and Brights' Hal Cooper swung a few punches at no decision.

The single point, however, raised Hamilton to undisputed possession of first place, one notch up on the idle Toronto Marlboros. Niagara Falls are third, anther point back.

Down 2-1 at the end of the first period, the Falls came back with a rush to score the only goal of the second session and went into the lead early in the third on a tally by Art Stuart. Polly Miocinovich sent the teams into their scoreless overtime session after 13 minutes of the final frame on a pass from Woody Woodward.

Barlow Starts It.

Johnny Barlow opened the scoring for Hamilton less than two minutes after the start of the game. Blink Bellinger got that one back on an assist from Bobby Walton. The crack Hamilton line of Fritz, Clarence Shillington, and Dillon Brady, accounted for the second home score.

The Falls marksman in the middle session was Joe Catlin on a solo effort.

Midway through the second period, the bespectacled Fritz, who took punishment from Falls' defenders all through the game, struck Cooper on the face. After a flurry of fists, the pair were sent to the penalty box where they started to battle again. Players from both teams and hundreds of spectators milled about the scene and several blows were struck.

After order was restored, Fritz was given a match penalty and Cooper took a major.

Canadiens Buy Jack Portland

MONTREAL, Nov. 20 — (CP). — Big Jack Portland, veteran Chicago Black Hawks defenceman, was purchased by Montreal Canadiens for a reported $12,500 Tuesday in an effort to lend the correct dash of experience to the youthful National Hockey League Club.

An official of Canadiens confirmed the announcement in Chicago by President William J. Tobin of the Hawks that Portland was traded in a straight cash transaction. He added that the defenceman will report to Canadiens in Detroit Wednesday, playing in Thursday night's game there against the Red Wings.

Acquisition of Portland brings the number of Canadiens' defencemen to six—Veterans Cliff Coupille and Doug Young and Rookies Ken Reardon, Alex Singbush and Tony Graboski. There has been no indication who will be dropped to make way for him.

The 220-pound defenceman, born in Waubaushene, Ont., played his first N.H.L. game with the Canadiens, breaking into professional ranks with them in the 1933-34 season. He went to Boston in 1934-35 and was traded to Chicago last season. Twenty-eight years old, he is six feet four inches tall.

The transaction was arranged by Coach Dick Irvin and Business Manager Frank Patrick last Sunday in Chicago, where the Canadiens tied the Black Hawks for their second point of the campaign. Chicago is expected to replace him by Dave Mackay, recalled yesterday from their Providence team in the American League.

Moffatt Family Stage Jolly Reunion Party

MARMORA, Nov. 20—(ENS). — The homecoming of a son and his wife to visit his aged mother over the week-end created a pleasing invasion of a Cordova home on Sunday. The grand old lady thus honored was Mrs. James Moffatt, who attained to her 89th birthday in March of this year.

The son was Peter O. Moffatt, who had not been home for fifteen years, five of which were spent in Florida and the latter period in Eureka, California.

The scene of the welcome in which many relatives and some friends joined was the home of Mr. and Mrs. William Hamilton in Cordova. To add to the joyousness of the occasion and to partake of dinner and tea at the Hamilton home assembled seven of Mrs. Moffatt's children, two daughters-in-law and three sons-in-law, ten married grandchildren with their spouses four unmarried grandchildren, and nineteen great-grandchildren.

The family tree was checked over and it was noted that the absentee list included twenty grandchildren and sixty great-grandchildren of Mrs. Moffatt, besides two daughters Mrs. J. Mark and Mrs. William Fletcher of McCreary, Man.

Friends joining in this happy gathering were Mr. and Mrs. H. Hamilton, Cordova, and Mr. and Mrs. E. Post, Malone.

that the requisition figures had been checked over three times and both he and the Warden were sure that the correct total, which was minus the $237.54, had been arrived at by the committee. The committee firmly indicated in the comments of its members that the claim of Wooler School Board would not be entertained.

Road Rebates.

Reeve Mallory, reporting for the Special Rebates Committee, stated that the by-law regarding the road rebates had been taken to the Department for approval, by which the road rebates would be resumed for 1940, on or before April 1, 1941. A clause was removed with the result that no rebates would be allowed the municipalities for the years 1929 to 1939 inclusive.

Resolution of Bruce County in which it was recommended that judges, magistrates, and sheriffs and other officials be denied mileage costs and which also recommended that judges pay into their own pension fund the same as civil the Legislative and By-laws Committee yesterday. Resolution from Prince Edward County Council recommending that relief recipients be disfranchised during the year in which they were receiving relief, was received and filed. The committee endorsed the resolution of Lennox and Addington in which it had been recommended that owners of forest land should not be liable for fires caused by negligence of others and that fire-fighting costs should be charged up to the Ontario Government and the properties treated as Crown land in that regard. Lincoln County Council's resolution calling for conscription of wealth in wartime was received and filed.

No action was taken on the resolution of Bruce County in which it was recommended that the government either act on the recommendations of Royal Commisions, or abandon such methods of investigation.

The Schools Committee approved of the statement of grants and equipment for public schools in A. A. Martin's inspectorate but referred back the reports for inspectorates No. 1 and 2 with the notice that they should be made-out to the township and not the school board in each case. Grants for equipment in Mr. Martin's inspectorate amounted to $118.92 for Alnwick; $362.79 for Brighton; $384.07 for Cramahe; $705.83 for Murray township; $569.13 and Seymour, $576.66.

Patriotic Grants

At the meeting of the Finance Committee, Warden Morrow, Deputy-Reeve C. Morris of Bowmanville; Reeve W. J. Troop, Colborne, were appointed a committee to look into the matter of grants for patriotic purposes.

The Finance Committee gave its O.K. to the following items: Administration of justice, $7,669.26; maintenance of indigents, $7,346.45; county roads, total, $43,563.20, covering $9,261.74 for July, $8,354.91 for August, $7,894.03 for September, $11,876.63 for October and $6,175.89 for November; miscellaneous, $44.80; debentures, $12,950.46; law costs, $260; interest on loans, $1,563.29; Board of Compensation, $2,840 (1940 assessment); registry office, $573.81; printing, postage and stationery, $594.04; counties home, $7,101.44; counties jail, $2,534.54; counties homes, special account, $104.84; counties home, income account, $1,536; municipal government, $8,515.51.

Education costs since the last session included Bowmanville High School, $7,176.31; Brighton High School, $3,181.08; Campbellford, $8,794.65; Cobourg, $7,961.63; Colborne, $3,738.42; Newcastle, $1,612.42; Port Hope, $8,246.61; Blackstock Continuation School, $4,203.62; Castleton Con., $2,285.95; Millbrook Con., $3,573.83; Orono Con., $3,841.81; Warkworth Con., $2,892.89; Wooler Con., $853.14; Norwood High School, $534.38; Brooklin Con., $68.43. The Finance Committee recommended payment of $59.25 to Fowler & Sons, coal dealers, being the amount paid out in American exchange by the coal firm on coal supplied to the Counties Home.

County Road Report

Following is the report given by A. S. Miller, county road superintendent:

"The Department of Highways approved of an expenditure of $90,900.00 and they will pay 50 per cent of the expenditures up to this amount on items which are entitled to subsidy. Principal items of maintenance expenditures are approximately: brushing and weed cutting, $2,300; snow plowing and sanding, $9,500; patching pavements, $2,300; cutting off shoulders of roads, $1,500; resurfacing, $1,300; calcium chloride stabilizing and dust laying on 80 miles of road, $13,500.

"Principal items of construction expenditures are approximately—steel culverts, $6,000; concrete culvert, $1,050; 46,750 feet of snow fence and the necessary posts, $3,300; pavement surface course, $6,800; gravel road surface treatment, $3,300; new machinery, $1,000; road construction, $3,000.

"Expenditures on which we get no subsidy are as follows: Office rent, road commission expenses; road insurance and bank interest, amouting to a total of $6,000.

"It is expected that a snow plow will be purchased for our Diesel tractor. A new bookeeping system has been put into force by the Dept. of Highways and henceforth the keeping of expenditures will be under the classification of work and not under the townships or road numbers. Also the use of power driven equipment is to be charged to the work at a rate per hour of use which will take care of the actual operation costs as well as the cost or repairs and also depreciation," stated Mr. Miller's report.

The road superintendent urged the members of the council to advise the townships that those who wanted snow plows to let the road office know by December 10th so that the mileage could be alloted. He pointed out that under the new regulations, a rate per hour for use of the plowing equipment must be set to take care of operating costs and depreciation of the equipment.

wing of the battlefront, said last night that casualties had been heavy on both sides in the relentless battle for the strategic city as Italians clung to their positions under steady onslaught.

600 Men Lost

(Six hundred Greek prisoner were reported taken, including 100 Albanians fighting alongside the Greeks in the belief their exiled King Zog would lead a rising against Italian absorption of his country.

(A member of King Zog's staff in London commented: "The King naturally is following every move in the Greek fighting, but he hasn't made a decision—yet.)

The Greek Ministry of Home Security poked fun today at an Italian announcement that Fascist "land, sea and air forces chased off the enemy" in an attack on the Dodecanese Islands.

The ministry said the raid was the one it reported yesterday—a "private affair" foray by 15 persons who live in the islands and work in Greece. The ministry said they hired a motor launch, "raided" one small island, shot three naval guards and came back to Greece with four policemen as prisoners.

diary and high explosive bombs were dropped, and extensive damage was done in several areas."

Besides the blows at communities of the great industrial belt across middle England, the big port of Liverpool was raided three times after dusk; bombs were dropped on another city in northwestern England, and raids were reported on sections of the southeast, northeast, Scotland aud Wales.

Other than the Midlands, the communique said, damage and casualties were expected to be small.

The industrial towns were hit soon after nightfall by the first waves of the Nazi assault which swept across England from the east, 80 to 100 planes at a time, through a cold southwest wind which increased by dawn to almost half gale force.

Some of the attacking planes hit at London, but most of them streaked for the Midlands.

Use Coventry System.

They dived to the attack, one after another, hour after hour, through the most thunderous anti-aircraft barrage yet fired over most of the Midlands towns.

Observers said the pattern of the assault was the same the Nazis followed at ancient Coventry — first flares, then incendiary bombs to start fires and light the way for a shower of explosives.

The communique disclosed damage to "dwelling houses and other buildings" was severe.

At least five of the raiding bombers were shot down.

Fires were under control by dawn.

An Associated Press correspondent telephoned from one of the Midlands towns that "material damage is extensive and includes a huge block of buildings and another block of stores."

Two large fires there were under control by dawn.

In the other of the two worst-damaged towns, informed sources in London said, the danger of spreading flames was great for a time, but the fires were under control by midmorning.

At this town the raiders attacked in successive waves of many planes.

Jervis Bay Survivors In Canadian Hospital

Three of the survivors of the heroic British merchant cruiser Jervis Bay who were wounded during the engagement their ship fought with a German raider attempting to attack a British convoy are shown in a hospital at an eastern Canada port. The Jervis Bay enabled 34 ships in the convoy to escape.

No Great Surprise.

That Hungary, indebted to Germany for getting Northern Transylvania back from Rumania, became a treaty partner was no great surprise since she long had been considered in harmony with the German Nazi rule.

Her purpose, she claimed, is to help promote peace.

"Germany, Italy and Japan," said a Hungarian government declaration issued here, "concluded the alliance to call a halt to further expansion of the war, which is severely burdening humanity, and thus give the world as fast as possible a lasting and just peace...."

It emphasized the aid of Rome and Berlin in the recovery of Transylvania "without spilling blood and through peaceful means."

"Hungary, thrown to the ground through the unjust, demoralizing Paris peace dictates and during two decades," it said, "turned for help to those powers which were suffering from an equal fate and the same injustices and were fighting for their vital rights...."

Hailed in Tokyo.

TOKYO, Nov. 20 — (AP).—Hungary's entry into the Rome-Berlin-Tokyo alliance was hailed by the Foreign Office to-day as a gain in strength for the treaty partners.

"It unquestionably will contribute," a statement said, "toward attainment of the fundamental object of the tri-partite pact and the strengthening of the respective positions of Japan, Germany, and Italy in East Asia and in Europe."

Those War Appointments

He advised Prime Minister Mackenzie King to review without delay some of the appointments made since the war began to many of the war boards, "particularly to the appointments made to the former Munitions and Supply Board, most of which have since been taken into the Department of Munitions and Supply.

"I want to say most emphatically that at this moment there are men in influential positions who should be retired quickly," Mr. MacInnis said.

"I am not denying that they may know a great deal about business and industry, but they know nothing about democracy.

"Because they know nothing at all about democracy there is liable to be trouble in this country before very long. It may be better to have a little dislocation now than a great upheaval later on."

At another point in his speech, Mr. MacInnis said: "All the Nazi-minded people are not in Germany. Many of them can be found at the head of Canadian industries. I am afraid that a few can be found around the Department of Munitions and Supply."

In modern warfare the morale and temper of the industrial workers was equal in importance to the morale of the soldiers, he contended. Relations between employers and workers in Canada were "not good in Canada today and are daily becoming worse."

Undue Profit From Labor

The worker felt the war contractor was making undue profit out of his labor and the distress of the country and felt he was being ignored by the Government, Mr. MacInnis said.

"He feels the government is working hand in hand with the employers to prevent his having a say as to the terms upon which he will sell his labor...

"Steps should be taken at once to remedy this condition if we are not to have unrest very shortly which will reach greater proportions than the unrest at the end of the last war...

"Employers should be told that the people of Canada pay for these contracts. That these contracts are the result of the determination of the people of this country to destroy Hitlerism, but that in doing so we are not going to allow embryo Hitlers to develop among us."

He urged revision of the procedure in reviewing interment cases to guarantee that innocent persons were not held.

J. G. Diefenbaker (Con. Lake Centre) disagreed with those who claim democratic rights are being lost today, although he said some are being suspended. In wartime there had to be a decree of censorship although in many instances the press was "subject to too censorious a censorship."

Wants CBC Probe

He questioned whether the Canadian Broadcasting Corporation had become a "party vehicle" and urged a complete investigation of its administration.

Because Britain had to have an export market if she were to continue buying war materials, he proposed expansion of the Canadian market for British goods. British exports last July were 22.7 per cent below those of the previous year and British imports in the same month were down 11.2 per cent, he said, and "Britain cannot continue her maximum war effort unless all parts of the empire increase their purchases from her."

A "Buy-British" campaign need not hurt Canadian trade. In the last four years British exports to Canada in many lines had dropped while Japan's exports to Canada had increased.

He sharply criticized Agriculture Minister Gardiner for not laying down some whcrt policy in his speech last week. Instead, Mr. Gardiner had only voiced a hope that the wheat situation would solve itself in the next five years.

Tom Reid (Liberal, New Westminster) proposed immediate erection of a short wave broadcasting station as a powerful weapon for counteracting German propaganda which was being poured forth continually in 20 languages.

In his naval review, Mr. Macdonald described the varied duties of the Canadian Navy, and said 3,500 ships had left Canada with 21,000,000 tons of cargo since the war began because the British and Canadian navies kept the shipping routes open.

In announcing the addition of 100 ships of various sizes by March, 1942, the Minister said this signified two things: That Canada was determined to put forth her fullest effort at sea, no less than on land and in the air, and that Canada had to have a navy sufficient to fulfil her obligations and adequate to the needs of a great trading nation.

Canada long had enjoyed the sheltering protection of the British Navy, never having had a navy of her own commensurate with her trading position.

"I believe that Canadian pride, Canadian dignity, Canadian consciousness of present greatness, Canadian hope for increased stature among the nations of the world, all demand that we should assume our proper share of the burden of naval service hitherto borne so largely by the Motherland," Mr. Macdonald said.

Canada could not have in the near future a navy comparable to that of Britain or any one of the several other great powers, but "in common sense and in honor" Canada had to build a navy not unworthy of Canada and her obligations to the Commonwealth and her close association with the United States in the defence of this continent.

The Naval College would be an essential part of this development, devoted exclusively to training naval men in wartime at least.

Whether it might be used in peacetime partly for training men for the merchant marine would have to be decided.

At the same time, he said young Canadians who had received naval training in England were "in the very heart of the world's naval life," and he hoped that link between Britain and Canada "will always continue."

Headaches are often connected with upset stomach, with colds, or over-indulgence of some kind. You need something to ease the ache quickly. But you want to correct the cause of the trouble too. That's why we recommend Alka-Seltzer ... because it's a double-acting remedy, and also because it's so pleasant to take.

Two-way Relief

Alka-Seltzer is two remedies combined in one. One ingredient is what is known to science as an analgesic. MAIN STREET TOPICS

STRIKES RAILWAY SIGN

Mrs. Violet Harris, 701 George street, reported to police Tuesday night that in swerving her car at the Chamberlen street crossing of the C.P.R. to avoid being hit by a shunter and a number of cars her machine had struck a railway sign post breaking it off and sustaining damage to the fender and running board.

HE IS CHUCKLING.

Joe O'Donnell on Parkhill Road had a great battle with the City Council before they consented to put the sewer from Stewart Street up to his house. Today directly opposite O'Donnell's place there are three one-storey bungalows under construction and all of them will require sewer connections. Actually putting in the sewer for Mr. O'Donnell was a good stroke of business for it made the lots much more desirable.

CAR ON FIRE.

The Peterborough Fire Department was called out on Tuesday night to extinguish a fire in the car belonging to A. Russel of R.R. 9, Peterborough. The car was on Charlotte Street, and, according to Fire Chief George Gimblett, a short circuit was responsible. There was little damage, however, as the Department's men were on the scene quickly, and remedied the result of the faulty wiring.

A DISPATCH RIDER.

George W. Cooper, son of Mr. and Mrs. H. W. Cooper of Euclid Avenue, has been on active service for six months on November 22, and the only mishap to date is a spill from a motorcycle that put him in the Hastings, Prince Edward unit, enlisted as an ambulance driver and was later made a dispatch rider. He has been in England for at least four months.

Tourist Film Receives Praise Of All

Members of the City and County councils and a representative number of citizens and resort owners from all parts of the district paid high tribute to officials of the Peterborough Tourist Bureau at a complimentary dinner held in the Empress Hotel on Tuesday night. It was held for the premier showing of the new tourist film, the "Call of The Kawarthas" and the reception given the film far exceeded anything expected by those responsible for the production of the unique advertising medium.

The highlight of the evening aside from the splendid film was the unstinted praise voiced by two men who are leaders in the field of advertising Ontario as a tourist province, D. J. Taylor, deputy minister of Game and Fisheries, and Douglas Oliver, brilliant newspaper man and now director of the Ontario Travel Bureau. Senator Iva Campbell Fallis and Alderman James Dutton voiced the sentiments of the entire assembly with their fine tributes to Alderman Fred Roy for the splendid photography and to members of the bureau for their vision and work in financing and producing the film.

Truly, the film is not only a valuable advertising effort, but a masterpiece of color photography by a man who is not only a professional camera man but an artist as well. It reflects the genius of Fred Roy in every scene, and it presents in vivid beautiful form the entire gamut of tourist attractions and facilities that exist in the lovely Kawartha district.

Nothing Missed

Not one of the features that makes the Kawartha area an incomparable summer playground has been missed in the film. As was to be expected it portrays in a satisfying manner the splendid fishing for muskies, bass and trout, and tosses in a few shots of the elk being released in the game preserve to whet the appetites of hunts. But, most important, it conveys to everyone who saw it, the thought that the Kawarthas is a place where the entire family may find safe, comfortable hours of leisure and pleasure. It shows tiny tots building sand castles on a gently shelving beach, licked by tiny wavelets, high powered motor boats, zooming across white-capped waves on the broad reaches of the lakes, family groups enjoying bathing, and a view of Lake Chemong, topped off by views of cosy summer homes nestling amid trees on restful stretches of lakeshore. The scenic shots are incomparable, blue skies, studded with fleecy cumulus clouds, the deep green of the pines, the rugged colorful cliffs and islands of rock, and the satisfying vistas of lakeland, all combine to make a picture of unusual beauty. This district's two feature attractions, the Floating Bridge and the Lift Locks, are both given ample treatment.

Harold L. Garner, president of the Tourist Bureau, was chairman at the dinner. He introduced the guests of honor which included besides those mentioned above, Grant Mitchell, business manager of the Ivy Lea Bridge; Warden McColl, Mayor James Hamilton, and Alex L. Elliott, M.P.P.

Mayor's Welcome

Mayor Hamilton tendered a warm welcome to the gathering and voiced his pleasure at the fact that members of the County Council now in session were able to be present in a body. He explained that as representatives of the various townships they have as much interest in the tourist trade as any business man in the city. He urged that they cooperate in assisting the bureau to secure more tourists for this district.

Following the showing of the film, Mr. Garner called on Alderman James Dutton to move a vote of thanks to Mr. Roy for the presentation and his work in the project.

"We in this district are fortunate in having one who is capable of doing such magnificent work," said Mr. Dutton. Mr. Roy is an artist and this particular piece of work is outstanding. He said also that it was the intention of the bureau to show the film in centres from which the majority of the tourists come, and urged that the County Council and resort owners give the bureau their solid support. "Given a fair chance we should enjoy a bumper tourist season next year."

Be of Tremendous Value

Senator Fallis when asked by the chairman for a few comments said the only criticism which she could offer would be a most favorable one, and she was generous in her praise for the work done by the members of the Tourist Bureau. Senator Fallis agreed that the picture, if circulated in the States, should be of inestimable value in publicising the district, and attracting many more Americans to the area.

Douglas Oliver, Director of Publicity for Ontario in commenting on the film described it as "an amazing picture, and he said he was speaking honestly and frankly when he said the picture ranked with the finest he had ever seen. He added that the big problem before the bureau now was suitable distribution of the film in order that the best results might be obtained.

He assured the gathering that the Ontario Travel Bureau would find the right channels for the distribution of the film, and there was a possibility that this service would cost the city nothing.

He gave a detailed report of the great work that had been done by the Ontario Travel Bureau during the past year and endeared himself to the crowd with a few interesting sidelights on the visit of the King and Queen, his last assignment as a newspaper man with a Toronto newspaper.

"Last August after the passport muddle had been cleared up, we brought to Canada 35 editors of American weekly newspapers in the States of Ohio, New Jersey, Michigan, Pennsylvania and New York. They spent a week in Canada and the trip did not cost the province as much as a column of advertising in two high class magazines."

"We obtained approximately a quarter of a million dollars worth of advertising from their visit, and the benefits are not all apparent yet.

"It is my intention to bring another group of American newspapermen over to Canada in June of 1941 from other States. Last year we could not include all sections of Ontario in the itinerary of the group but I can assure you that in 1941 the Kawartha district will not be neglected."

Commenting on the tourist trade during the past year he said we had a bad year due to several reasons, chief of which were the fear psychology, bad weather and the passport muddle, which gave us a black eye. In June there were 21,000 fewer cars from the States entered Canada, in July, 210,000 less, in August 102,000 less and in September we were down 44,000.

"In spite of all this and during July the black month, Ontario had 70 per cent of all the American cars that came into Canada. In August we had 71.4 per cent and in September 68 per cent, so that actually Ontario showed a four per cent gain over the same period in 1939.

"Ontario is making a bid for winter tourists, featuring the skiing and other attractions, and railways are co-operating by running ski trains from the border American cities. We intend to advertise as much as our appropriation will permit and by next year there should be definite results.

"I take a long range view of the tourist business, and I feel that the tourist trade promotes a better understanding between nations, something that is very essential right now." In closing he assured the members of the Tourist Bureau in this city that he would extend them every co-operation.

Car Strikes Tree Driver Injured

Joseph Love, 64, of Smith township, had a miraculous escape from death early Tuesday night when the coupe he was driving slid off Highway 28 a short distance south of the Nassau turn and plunged down a steep embankment to crash head-on into a large elm tree.

Love sustained a broken right arm and an injured hip and was taken to St. Joseph's Hospital by Dr. Moore of Lakefield and Mrs. Wallace Hendren who arrived on the scene shortly after the accident.

After leaving the paved portion of the highway, the car had run some distance at an angle to the road before shooting down into the ditch and smashing into the tree. The coupe was very badly damaged by the impact and Love's escape from more serious injuries under the circumstances is difficult to understand. Provincial Constable David Silvester investigated the accident.

Pan-Handler Seeking Aid From Young Lady Steps Right Into Arms Of Detective Meagher

Spectators waiting at the bus stop at Simcoe and George Streets Tuesday evening were interested in the actions of a transient who was trying to walk along with a passing young woman, obviously trying to obtain the price of a cup of coffee—or something. When the girl turned abruptly away from him the panhandler approached one of the spectators. There he made his mistake, for the intended victim turned out to be none other than Detective-Sergt. Meagher, who escorted the man to the hoosegow.

This morning in police court he pleaded guilty under the name of James Leo Cole, Toronto, to a charge of begging and was remanded by Magistrate Gee for a week. "Give me a chance and I'll get right out of town," the man told the court.

Witness Is Called Up To Put Nickel In Machine In Court

A witness in police court this morning entertained the court frequenters while he placed nickels in a machine, pulled down a lever, and the magistrate, lawyers and general public awaited results.

It was all part of the hearing of a charge against Speros Zachos of operating a common gaming house on George Street. Hon. G. N. Gordon, K.C., appeared for Zachos, who pleaded innocence.

Detective-Sergt. W. E. Meagher told of visiting the tobacco store and pool room of Zachos on George Street and of seeing a machine there that was being operated by a man named Darling who was putting nickels in the machine and pulling a lever.

Mr. Gordon asked to have the machine produced and plugged in so that it could be operated. To defence counsel the witness said that so far as he knew it paid out a package of mints for every nickel inserted.

Constable Archie Menzies, who had accompanied Detective-Sergt. Meagher, gave similar evidence.

R. E. Darling swore that he had operated the machine at Zachos place. He had put in about $2.00 in nickels, he said, and on one occasion the machine indicated that he had won 80 cents so that he had "cashed in" with a man behind the counter who had paid him the money. Later on the same day he had put in 70 cents more in nickels without winning anything. It was then that the police had come in.

"You were not interested in the mints," asked Magistrate Gee and witness replied that he had not been.

"You admit you were gambling there?" asked Mr. Gordon in cross-examination. Darling answered in the affirmative.

Defence counsel produced a dollar in five-cent pieces and had Darling operate the machine. On the second or third pull of the lever witness said the machine showed that he was entitled to four free plays or twenty cents.

"Has any charge been laid against you by the police for gambling?" asked Mr. Gordon.

"No," replied the witness.

Leonard Fry swore that he saw a machine similar to the machine in court in Zachos' place and had seen Darling operating it. He had also seen Darling obtain nickels from a man behind the counter.

Mr. Gordon asked that the case should be dismissed without any defence evidence, quoting authorities which he said justified dismissal, but Magistrate Gee said there was enough evidence to call upon the defence.

When Mr. Gordon said that he was offering no defence evidence, Magistrate Gee reserved judgment.

Fill Vacancy By Election

An election will be necessary in January to choose a member for the Utilities Commission to complete the term of the late Roland Denne, according to the terms of the act by which the commission was created.

Section 4 of the Town of Peterborough Act, 2 Edward VII, Chapter 59, passed in 1902, by which the Board of Water Commissioners was set up reads in part as follows:—

"In case of a vacancy for any cause or causes occurring at any time on the Board, the municipal council of the said town shall forthwith by by-law appoint a Commissioner to hold office until the next annual election, when a new Commissioner shall be elected to fill the said vacancy, who shall hold office for the residue of the term of the Commissioner whose seat during the previous year had become vacant, and the ballots used at the election to fill such vacancy shall be ballots separate from any ballots used at the time of such election for any other purpose."

The act also provides that the person appointed shall not be a member of the council.

In 1914 an Act was passed changing the name from the Board of Water Commissioners to the Peterborough Utilities Commission.

While Council has the power to appoint a commissioner to hold office from now until the election in January, the feeling seems to be that the position will be left open until then.

Sweden purchased nearly $5,000,000 worth of American aeronautic products in the first six months of this year.

ANOTHER SCUTTLED

The story has come to town, and it might be classed as a hunting episode, but in a way would seem to belong in the category of war news. A hunter, well known in Peterborough, was crossing a lake in the deer hunting district north of Peterborough, and he had with him a gun.

The watch that was the objective in this particular manoeuver was across a narrow lake, and the hunter was in a hurry, perhaps lingering too long over an early breakfast. The story goes that upon hearing the dogs, and thinking them to be headed in the direction of the runway he was to watch, the hunter paddled furiously, and before he had completed his journey, he had, in Hitler fashion attempted to scuttle himself. Accidently his gun had discharged, and there, in the bottom of the boat was a gaping hole.

Father Serving In England, Child Is Killed

BONARLAW, Nov. 20 (ENS) — June Preston, six-year-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Harry Preston of Sine, 5 miles north of Stirling was killed when struck by a car on Tuesday afternoon, on Highway 14 a short distance north of Sine village.

The child was returning home from school and is reported to have been knocked down by a southbound car driven by John Dougall of Marmora. She died almost immediately. The car was en route to Belleville from Marmora and there were seven people in it.

Harry Preston, father of the child is on active service in England with the Hastings-Prince Edward Regiment along with his brother, both having enlisted in the early stages of the war.

Provincial Constable R. S. Patterson from headquarters at Belleville is investigating the accident, but the driver of the car was not held. The car however has been retained for police examination.

Dr. E. A. Carleton, coroner of Stirling was called and it is expected an inquest will be held.

It is the third death in the Preston family in the past twelve months. Mrs. Alex Martin, the step-grandmother of the child was killed in a car accident at Stirling last spring and a younger sister, the baby in the family died during the winter.

Miss Jean Preston, Reg.N., and Miss Isobel Preston both of Peterborough are aunts of the little girl.

Given One Month On Fraud Counts

Cecil A. Church was sentenced by Magistrate E. A. Gee in police court this morning to a month in jail on five charges of obtaining money under false pretences from four local banks under the Home Improvement Act loan scheme. The sentences will run concurrently. The total amount involved was $600, but John A. Bradshaw, who appeared for Church, who had previously pleaded guilty to the charges, said that before the charges had been made $480 of the loans had been repaid and since restitution had been made of the balance.

Mr. Bradshaw made an appeal for suspended sentence but Magistrate Gee said that in the interest of society he considered that a short jail sentence should be imposed.

The charges against Church were laid by Constable K. M. Lockwood of the Cobourg detachment of the R.C.M.P., who investigated the case.

Plan Reduction Non-Resident License Charge

A forecast that the Department of Game and Fisheries would give further impetus to the tourist traffic in 1941 by reducing the cost of non-resident fishing licenses was made by the Hon. J. D. Taylor, deputy-minister of Game and Fisheries at a banquet in the Empress Hotel on Tuesday evening.

Mr. Taylor accompanied by Douglas Oliver, director of Publicity for Ontario, was a guest at a dinner given by the Peterborough Tourist Bureau for the premier showing of the film "Call of the Kawarthas."

The Deputy-Minister who has been a visitor to Peterborough on several occasions was accorded a warm welcome by H. L. Garner, president of the Tourist Bureau, who asked for a few comments on the film.

"I can state frankly that I have yet to see anything that surpasses or even equals this effort. It covers the entire field, and I can offer no criticism or suggestion which would add to the beauty or effectiveness of the complete film."

During his remarks, Mr. Taylor added words of appreciation on behalf of the Ontario Department of Game and Fisheries for the generous treatment of the fish hatchery and the fine tributes given the department in the film. He also said that the Department will be able on many instances to assist in finding channels for distribution of the film

Fewer Tourists

"During the past year we have had a decrease in the general tourist traffic. We are in a fortunate position here in Ontario but across Canada the volume was considerably reduced. I feel that much of the adverse propaganda which was circulated in the States did not originate with Fifth Columnists but with resort owners in the States who have been hard hit by Canadian competition.

"The resort owners in Ontario cooperated admirably during the year, keeping prices at the usual level with the result that the Americans got full value for their money.

"I am happy to advise that during this year and even with the drop in the traffic the sale of non-resident fishing licenses exceeded any other year. Along with this and in the face of much red tape, the Department was able to induce many American hunters to come this fall.

"There was no appreciable difference in the number of anglers or hunters from the United States this year and I feel that these two groups constitute the spending tourist body. The Department is giving serious consideration to the reduction in price for non-resident fishing licenses in 1941, even though we may have to take a loss of $100,000 in so doing.

"It is refreshing to receive the fine cooperation that is evident here tonight. With this form of support we can hope to move forward, and do still more towards perpetuating the fine fishing and hunting in Ontario. I am sure that with the healthy interest and assistance which sporting organizations are giving the Department that we can look forward to a substantial increase in tourist traffic next year.

War Guest Relates His Experiences

Highlighting the regular Tuesday meeting of the Knox Young People's Union was a fascinating account, by Stanley Feneron, of his trip to Canada as a war guest; his experiences en route, and his reactions to his new-found home. The program topic was "Interesting People." A question and answer period was included, and members were given an opportunity of putting eager questions to the obliging 14-year-old lad, whose bright and winsome personality soon earned for himself a warm place in the hearts of all.

The balance of the program consisted of an open discussion on the subject of "How to Be Interesting." Led by Orm Benson, the convener in charge, the discussion was entered into whole-heartedly by Y.P.U. members. A brief worship service and business period, the latter led by the acting president, Miss Betty Allen, opened the meeting, which closed with a session of lively games.

Harry Vass presided at the business meeting, at which a nominating committee was set up to meet next Monday at the manse to suggest officers for the coming year. SET FOR SOUTH

By ALICE ALDEN

THE WORLD of fashion is always a couple of jumps ahead of the dateline. While we are thinking in terms of fur coats and gala winter clothes, designers are already showing cruise and resort wear. Which isn't such a bad idea, for the steamship and travel people report heavy advance bookings.

To get you in the mood for the southland, here's Madeleine Carroll wearing the newest cruise suit. It is of heavy white linen tailored on dressmaker lines with a flared skirt. The one-button jacket is nipped in at the waistline. Note the smart set-in pocket detail. The blouse is of navy Irish linen embroidered in stripes of white.

Has Own Ideals About Business

JOHNSTOWN, N.Y., Nov. 20 — (CP). — A phonograph plays "God Bless America" and workers trooping into the spotless, white-walled factory sing an accompaniment. The music stops. Machines begin an all-day clatter that ends as the workers chorus out the National Anthem.

It's not a cutting from an American light opera. It's the Johnstown gelatine plant of Mrs. Charles B. Knox. "I don't have any special philosophy of life or any conventional ready-made formula about business other than hard work and plenty of good commonsense," insists the nearly 83-year-old woman industrialist. "But I think we need to show a little more patriotism right now."

For a person who hasn't any particular philosophy or business theory, the grey-haired, alert Mrs. Knox conceded she has done at least "fairly well" since she took over the gelatine manufacturing business on the death of her husband in 1908.

But—no philosophy? No business theory? "You have to use common sense—horse sense—to succeed in business," asserts the woman industrialist, who barely reaches five feet in height.

"Live and let live," she said when asked how she managed to avoid labor difficulties in her factories. "Don't expect to take it easier because you're a woman, don't try to compete with men but do your job in a woman's way."

To boys and girls undecided on what line of work to follow, she urges: "Take an inventory of yourself. Find out your strong points. Then push and push hard. You must have something to sell these days."

It may be neither philosophy nor theory, but whatever it is, the Knox ideas trebled the output of the gelatine factory in the first 10 years after she took over the business.

Apple Canada's National Fruit

Canadian homemakers can aid tremendously by co-operating with the Dominion Department of Agriculture in its effort to increase the consumption of Canada's national fruit, "the apple," in the country where it is grown.

Continuance of the war has once more made necessary the marketing of Canada's annual apple crop within the boundaries of the Dominion, and homemakers are urged to respond to the appeal, as they did last year, and do their part in meeting with national emergency. To do their part in this connection, however, isn't at all a sacrifice, since the apple is one of the finest fruits, several varieties being delicious to eat raw, while others can be used in making a countless number of tempting desserts.

TEEN-AGE MARRIAGES HAVE LITTLE CHANCE TO SUCCEED
Youths of Today Are Not Trained to Do the Hard Work and Accept Responsibilities That Their Grandparents Faced.

Dear Miss Dix—Why are people so opposed to young marriages today? My great-grandmother and my grandmother both were married at 16 and lived long and happy lives with their husbands. I am a girl of 16, in love with a young man of 20, and we want to be married and set up housekeeping. I am a good cook and housekeeper and like to sew. We want to be married while we are young and spend the best part of our lives working and playing together. I know he will get to the top some day and I want to help him get there. What are our chances for a long and happy marriage? SISSY.

ANSWER—I should say that they are about half what they would be if you waited until you are 23 or 24 to marry. Statistics show that teenage marriages are about as brittle and easily broken as pie crust, and that the number of those that end in divorce are far, far greater than the marriages entered into by mature men and women. The reason older people oppose the marriage of adolescents is because calf love is the most fleeting emotion on earth. It is just a fancy that passes like a summer wind. Boys and girls are too young and undeveloped to be capable of wisely choosing a life mate, because they do not know what they are going to be themselves when they grow up, nor what qualities they are going to need in a husband or wife.

Struggles of Youth

Nor are they mentally or physically fit to assume the burdens and responsibilities of marriage. In all the world there is no sadder sight than a boy husband, broken and beaten in his futile efforts to support a family; unless it is a poor little girl wife, shabby and worn, with crying babies hanging to her skirts, already tired of the lad she married and envying every girl whose feet are dancing of a night while hers walk the colic. Marriage is an adult game. It is not for children. The going is too hard.

The fact that your great-grandmother and grandmother married at 16 and lived happily ever after has no bearing on your case. They lived in a different time when life was simpler and when it did not take so much to make people happy as it does now.

In those days when a couple married they practically retired from the world and spent the balance of their lives in working and saving and rearing a family. They didn't expect to be amused or entertained or take vacations or go on trips, and they thought that they were having a hilarious time when they went to the church supper once a year.

Your grandmother cooked her own food, did the family laundry and sewing, and didn't spend as much on her clothes in a year as you spend at the beauty shop. And, as she had never heard of being style-conscious or belonging to clubs or playing bridge or going to cocktail parties, she never missed them.

But what used to be luxuries are now necessities, and there is no use in saying that you can go back and live the way your great-grandmother did and be happy, because you can't. It simply isn't in nature to do it.

Also, consider this point of view: Your young man has his fortune to make. He is ambitious and you are ambitious for him and want to help him. Can't you realize that the biggest help you can give him is not to burden him with your support while he is trying to get a start?

Let him get well on his feet before he gets married. Give him a chance to save up a little money before he handicaps himself with a family. With a wife and babies coming, and doctors' bills and hospital bills and a million other bills it is mighty hard for a poor young chap to gather together the little nest egg that enables him to take advantage of his chance when opportunity knocks at his door.

So why not wait a few years until you are both grown up before you rush into the great adventure? Marriage lasts a long time and, as a cynic has said, "if you are not happily married it seems longer."

CHILDLESS MARRIAGE CAN BE HAPPY ONE

Dear Dorothy Dix—I am young man of 26, physically fit and mentally mature. I am desirous of marriage, but I don't want to have children. Do you think I can find a girl who feels the same way as I do about children, and that we could be happy without them?

JOHN.

ANSWER—Oh, there are plenty of women who regard children as brats instead of bundles from heaven and would be glad enough to marry a man who is like-minded. So there is no need for you to remain a bachelor because you haven't a perambulator complex.

Nor would your not wanting children keep your marriage from being a success, provided that you got a wife who was allergic to kids as you are. The trouble comes in when the husband wants children and the wife doesn't, or the wife longs for babies and the husband won't have them on the premises.

Some of the happiest marriages in the world are childless. The husband and wife, having no encumbrances, are left free to come and go as they please, to do as they like, to spend their money on themselves. And, being thrown on each other for companionship, they achieve a chumminess that you rarely see between husbands and wives who have children.

But while some people can do without children and like it, there can be no doubt that for the great majority children are the most precious by-product of marriage and do more to keep it a going concern than anything else.

There is no music like the patter of little feet across the floor, no amusement so interesting as watching a child's mind unfold, nothing that keeps you alive like living your life over again in your children. And they are the great panacea for what ails you. For if you have children to support you don't have time to think of your

him, unresisting, into a clump of trees of what looked like a city park. They left him there, and the sight of their faces, revealed in the street light as they slunk back toward the car, struck terror to Lona's heart anew. They were desperate looking, tense and brutal.

Shrinking down, she tried to open the car door on the far side and slip out. But they were too quick for her. The one called Louie caught her in his arms as she almost fell onto the running board. His clutch on her was hard and rough and a startled oath sprang to his twisted lips as he realized what she was doing.

"Askin' fer it, eh?" he growled. She saw his hand come up, the gun butt shining. She tried to scream through her gag as she realized he was about to hit her as he had the warden. Desperately her hands went up to ward off the blow and she crouched, her eyes on that terrible, uplifted gun.

At just that moment, as if at a signal, a screaming wail seemed to rise from the ground on all sides of them—a shrill, unearthly, ear-splitting screech that went up and down until it seemed their startled ear drums must break. With an oath Louie pushed her headlong back into the front seat of the car, his intended blow undelivered.

"The siren! They're on to us!" he ground out, between whitened lips. "Get started!"

They were off before he had slammed the door. Sweating, Lefty crouched over the wheel, his foot on the warden's accelerator. Shooting through the night, that unearthly wail eddying about them, they were out of the city and onto the open highway in what seemed like an instant. With every mile the girl's heart sank farther and farther.

"Attention all cars! Attention all cars! . . ." the warden's radio began to howl as Lefty flipped it on with a nervous hand. . . . "Believed heading northwest. . . . believed heading northwest. . . . using warden and the girl for a screen. . . . girl's father, a fellow convict, is dying in the prison hospital. . . girl is badly needed."

With a sudden oath Louie reached down and tore the gag from Lona's mouth, prodding her into silence with his gun as he did so.

"If we're stopped, you're my wife," he told her, his harsh voice grating against the siren's din, now dying out in the distance behind them. His words were clipped and came from the side of his mouth. "Get me?"

Relieved of the gag, Lona gasped for breath in a long, choking sob. In her ears the radio still dinned. "Girl badly needed . . . girl badly needed . . . father dying . . . father dying. . ."

"Shut up, you!"

"But he's dying! Don't you hear?"

"Let him die. You're goin' places."

"He's dying, I tell you—"

"An' whatd'ya think we'll do if they catch us?"

"Oh, please—"

"Shut up, will you!" The gun dug into her back savagely and she subsided. With burning eyes she watched the miles speeding by, each one carrying her farther and farther away. The sound of the siren had died out completely now, and only the droning radio cut into the night silence, broken by the high-pitched whine of the warden's motor being pushed unmercifully. Over and over again the fateful words beat into her brain: "Girl's father is dying . . . girl's father is dying. . ."

Desperately she watched for signs of pursuit. Despite the warning of the radio and the heaviness of the early evening traffic, nobody seemed to pay them any attention. Each time they whizzed past another speeding car she found herself grow tense, waiting for a shot that never came; at each crossroad it seemed there must be a carload of armed policemen, barring their way, ending this dreadful waiting.

But nothing happened, and gradually it dawned on her that it was because of her they were holding off. "Using the warden and the girl as a screen. . ."the radio droned again, and a frantic resolve took hold of her. Closing her eyes she let her body slump suddenly.

"I'm — going—to—faint—" she brought out, weakly. "Stop—"

"Hey, you can't pass out on us!" The gun prodded into her ribs anew. "You gotta sit up an' be seen. Here! . . .Sit up, you!"

"Sorry," she gasped, and allowed herself to go even limper, her head sinking against the driver's shoulder.

"Get her up!" Lefty shot frantically at the cursing Louie. "Hold her head up. She's gotta be seen."

"Heli—" Fumbling, Louie dropped the gun into his lap as he struggled to lift her relaxed body and prop up her lolling head. It was the chance for which she had been praying. Stiffening suddenly, she threw herself headlong onto the driver, grasping at the wheel.

There was an instant's tussle, a moment of dreadful swaying and being flung about, a piercing scream she couldn't quite check. Then they crashed. The last thing she heard was a rattle of shots from somewhere behind them. After that she knew no more!

BOYS LIKE TO DO THE TALKING

Dear Dorothy Dix—Can you tell me what to talk about to a boy when you are out on a date with him that will make your conversation interesting?

BEWILDERED NAN.

ANSWER — Talk to him about himself. Ask him some personal questions about what he likes and what he does, then follow the lead he gives you. No one ever gets tired of talking about themselves. It is a perfectly enthralling subject to every one.

The Stars Say . . .

By GENEVIEVE KEMBLE.

For Thursday, November 21.

The planetary auspices for this day indicate a state of affairs working at cross-purposes, with the impulses and tendencies disposed to be free, magnanimous, expansive, and aspiring and at the same time timid, conservative, close, and moody, torn between urges of optimism, limitation, and despondency. Such confusion and disaffection may culminate in a mood to dispose of the things that must be done in the easiest way, perhaps, without regard to probity or integrity. This mood may have devastating reactions.

Those whose birthday it is may find themselves in a year in which they should exercise determined resolve to avoid the easiest and debatable ways of accomplishment. They may be torn between great ideas and yearnings to do things in a big way, with emotions expansive, noble and ambitious, then to be shaken by doubts, depressions, apprehension and a sense of frustration. Ultimately yielding to ways of expediency rather than principle, with dire responses on the intimate associations.

A child born on this day may manifest a rather dual mode of conduct with noble, great, generous and magnanimous traits and expansive ambitions and aspirations but with these qualities beset by fears, qualms, depressions, and moods that may thwart its highest fulfilments, unless given early direction in the greater choice.

Mrs. R. Penrose Has High Single

Women bowlers held the usual Tuesday option on Duffus Alleys yesterday when over forty ladies' teams were present for weekly scheduled games. Big scores were again in order, the boards showing eight trundlers with better than 600 totals and thirty-two of them beating the 500 mark.

Mrs. Harold Barker and Mrs. Roy Penrose made a day of it, the former winning first place in individual scoring with a fine 679 for Kawartha Ladies while Mrs. Penrose of the Mercantile League planked down a 351 single in 671. In addition to Mrs. Barker, the Kawartha group had two other clean-up artists in attendance when Mrs. Fred Martin hit 637 and Mrs. J. P. Watts 600 while the Westclox was represented in the first eight by Dorothy Theobald's 640 and Marg Hawthorne's 615 and the C.G.E. girls with Francis Margueratt's 630 and E. Kelly's 602.

D. J. Fitzgerald of Zeller's Store levelled off a 325 in his 723 for the Mercantile men; K. Lee finished second with a neat 715.

Good scores were as follows:

Kawartha Ladies' League: M. Barker 679 (258), V. Martin 637, M. Watts 600, D. Emery 576, B. Smylie 571, B. Muir 556, N. Scott 543, F. Gallon 520, with 215 and 209 singles by G. Hall and M. Miller.

C.G.E. Ladies' League: F. Marguerratt 630 (255), E. Kelly 602, Z. Harvie 530, and E. Graham 516. N. Shaughnessy and M. Alexander hit 223, 218 and 200 singles.

Mercantile League (Ladies Section): Mrs. R. Penrose 671 (351), Miss Parker 576, Mrs. Ward 544, Miss McFadden 522, Miss O'Toole 505 and a 203 single by Miss A. Anderson.

THE RUFFING SQUEEZE

IF YOU want to show your friends a pretty play, you can hardly pick anything more attractive than what is usually called a "trump squeeze," sometimes described as a "ruffing squeeze." It is effective in a situation which shows one defender with ability to keep following with higher cards in a suit you are trying to establish by ruffing his winners. By playing the winning cards of some other suit, you may oblige him to choose between discarding a winner in a third suit or throwing away a necessary card in the suit you have been trying to establish. If he does the latter, you can then ruff up a winner for yourself.

♠ 6 4 ♥ 6 5 4 3 ♦ 10 9 7 5 3 ♣ 8 6	N. W. E. S.	♠ 9 8 5 ♥ K Q J 9 ♦ A K ♣ K Q 7 4

Pass	1 NT	2 ♥	3 ♠
Pass	4 ♠

That bidding never occurred, because this hand never was dealt, but was framed up by Edwin N. Moore, captain of the Union League club team in New York, who is a great enthusiast about squeezes, as a neat example of a trump squeeze. The bidding shown is what might have occurred to get the side into a spade game, with East showing a lot of strength, so that South might read the situation.

Let it be presumed that West, in response to his partner's opening bid, led the club 8 to the Q, declarer ducking in the dummy, and that East cashed his two diamonds and returned the heart K to the A. South can then run all but one of his spades, which would complete the first nine tricks. He would then retain in his own hand two clubs, the diamond J and the spade 3. Dummy would keep the heart 10-8, diamond Q and club A.

To protect the heart situation East would have to hold his heart Q-J, and to guard clubs the K-7. When South leads to the diamond Q, then, what will East toss? If a heart, the ruff of a heart sets up the dummy's other one; if a club, he sets up the winning trick in that suit. Pretty, isn't it?

Tomorrow's Problem

	♠ A 10 8 7 6 5 4 3 ♥ 5 ♦ 6 ♣ K Q 8

(Dealer: South. East-West vulnerable.)

If the first five tricks are the heart K overtaken by the A, the heart 7 ruffed, the club K to the A, the spade J to the A and the spade 10 to the K, the club J being returned, can South make 4-Spades on this deal, and if so, how?

Adrift 84 Hours 12 Jervis Bay Survivors Saved

AN EAST COAST CANADIAN PORT, Nov. 20—(CP).—Their merchant ship sunk by the enemy raider which sank the gallant Jervis Bay, 12 British seamen were recovering from exposure in this port to-day after a harrowing spell at sea in an open boat.

The men were picked up at sea by a Greek freighter after three days and four nights in an open lifeboat bobbing on a choppy Atlantic. Their ship was ablaze from stem to stern and sinking when they took to the boat and hoisting "a rag of sail headed for England."

Two of the seamen, a Scot from Aberdeesn and a Dover man, were wounded and are in hospital here. The others—aside from the effects of the exposure—are ready for sea again.

An Ottawa man, Ordinary Seaman Douglas O'Reilly, and Purser E. A. Warburn, a native of Halifax, were members of the group. Warburn has been following the sea for 20 years and calls Wales his home while O'Reilly joined the merchant navy in London. He was making his second voyage across the Atlantic.

The men said they were given the best of treatment aboard the Greek freighter. The freighter left the other side as a neutral commerce ship. She arrived here with her national flag painted out and an ally of Britain. Warbroke out between Greece and Italy while the ship was at sea.

Smoke Hid Battle.

Retelling the story of how the raider preyed on the convoy, the survivors said they sighted the enemy five or six miles away, but he did not open fire immediately. The survivors did not see the battle between the Jervis Bay and the raider because of a smoke screen laid down by the British armed merchant cruiser, but it was apparently at that moment the Jervis Bay closed in for her suicide fight. Her action enabled the convoy to scatter and 34 of the 38 ships escaped.

When the raider turned her attention to the survivors' ship, it was dark. Blinded by the glare of powerful searchlights, they were forced to stand by helplessly while their ship was raked with shells. Fire raged aboard and there was nothing to do but abandon her.

The survivors landed here included the captain, the second officer, the radio officer, and the purser. The rest of the crew took to another boat and it is believed they were picked up.

There was no doctor aboard the Greek ship to aid the survivors, but a passing vessel was hailed and her doctor treated the wounded pair. The first officer of the Greek merchantman treated the men for the duration of the voyage.

Fewer Study German

NEW YORK, Nov. 19—(AP). — Fewer students are studying the German language in New York city's school system than at any time in the last 10 years, says Dr. Theodore Huebener, acting director of foreign languages. With the beginning of the rise of Hitler in 1934, Huebener said, 22,500 were enrolled in German classes. The figure has dropped steadily until now only 10,421 are taking the course.

Overplayed Hand By Germans Upsets Vichy

(By JOHN A. STEVENSON.)

An acute crisis has quite obviously developed in the relations between the Petain Government of France and its Nazi masters. The former is anxious to move from Vichy to Paris and assume administration of the whole of France, except, of course, such coastal areas as the Germans would insist upon reserving for air bases and submarine nests. The German price for such concessions was naturally high and took the form of demands for closer collaboration for the defeat of Britain and more vigorous measures for checking the growth of the "Free France" movement in the French African colonies. Evidently in the course of the negotiations sharp divergencies of opinion arose in the French Cabinet between two groups, one headed by Marshal Petain, the Premier, and another led by Pierre Laval, Paul Baudoin and Admiral Darlan.

The Anti-British Faction

The aged Marshal, who is probably animated by a spirit of genuine patriotism and accepted the capitulation of last June under the misguided conviction that it was the only means of preserving the integrity of France and her Empire, must have had his illusions about "a just and honorable peace between soldiers" badly shattered by the ruthless methods employed by the Nazis in their administration of occupied France. But he has to cope with three younger and abler men who are all inveterate enemies of Britain. Laval has never forgiven Britain for wrecking his schemes for a deal with Mussolini about Ethiopia, which would pave the way for a concordat between France and Italy, and after working persistently for a policy of appeasement toward Germany and heading the defeatist party which played a sinister part in the downfall of France, he has continually sought to load upon Britain the main responsibility for France's woes and troubles.

Less influential, but more truculent and vocal is Baudoin, the banker, who voices the viewpoint of the famous 200 governing families of France and their willingness to become partners of the Nazi regime, provided they are allowed to retain their financial and economic stranglehold pon the fortunes of their compatriots. He had the effrontery to declare in a broadcast that a new world was born on May 10 and that "the nations of each continent are united to one another by an evergrowing solidarity, out of which will arise a more just, more charitable and more peaceful world." Least important of the trio is Darlan, the Minister of the Navy, a simple sailor, whose animosity against Britain arises mainly from a burning desire to avenge the destruction of part of his beloved navy at Oran last August.

Nazis Overplaying Hand.

There seems to be no limit to the degradations which this anti-British clique of Ministers is willing to accept for France in order to preserve their "loyalty to our conquerors" and incidentally to bring similar disasters and humiliations to Britain, but the Germans with their usual clumsiness have been overplaying their hand to such an extent that they are rapidly destroying the usefulness of Laval and Company as their tools. They ave lately taken the harsh step of ordering the expulsion of over 50,000 French-speaking residents of northern Lorraine, one of the two lost provinces which France recovered by the Treaty of Versailles, to make room for German immigrants. The expelled people, mostly farming families, are only allowed to take with them 2,000 francs each (less than $35), and a suitcase of personal effects and they were given the choice of going to Poland or occupied France, with the result that 96 per cent of them elected to go to France. Most of these unfortunate emigres have trekked to the Lyons area where they are being cared for by the Vichy government, which has actually nerved itself to make its first protest to the German Armistice Commission against a measure vxiolating the terms of capitulation.

Petain Jibs at Expulsion.

Marshal Petain has apparently been greatly upset by this move, for he has arranged to pay a personal visit to the refugees at Lyons and his influence is probably responsible for the breakdown in the negotiations of his Government with the Nazis. However, Laval is bent upon continuing the policy of close collaboration, and the latest news is that he had gone to Paris full of high hopes to reaching some accommodation with them which will damp down the rising tide of indignation with the Vichy Government.

Reactions in North Africa.

He will need to achieve success quickly, as further humiliations for France might produce very important developments in North Africa, where a great mystery surrounds the activities of Marshal Weygand. He was sent there some time ago to frustrate the plans of the "de Gaulle" faction in the French African colonies, but it is rumored thot he has now repented bitterly of his share in France's debacle and, outraged by recent events, is now ready to break with the Vichy Government and throw in his lot with de Gaulle. If he were to take this course, the very substantial French army still mobilized in North Africa would probably follow his lead, and Marshal Graziani, who cannot be any too happy about his present situation, would find his rear threatened from the Tunisian frontier. Another mystery envelopes the sudden departure of most of the surviving remnants of the French fleet for Africa, and various conflicting motives are ascribed for this move. However, the Germans are probably now aware of the dangers of extracting their full pound of flesh from the Vichy Government and they may give Laval terms which will enable him to keep the Vichy Government afloat for a time.

Week Toll At Sea Costs 11 Vessels

LONDON, Nov. 20 (CP)—Thirteen merchant ships totalling 71,749 tons were lost through "enemy action" in the week ending Nov. 10-11, the Admiralty announced today. They included 10 British vessels totalling 61,202 tons, one Allied of 1,930 tons and two neutral totalling 8,617 tons.

The figures included four ships sunk when a still unidentified German raider attacked a convoy of 38 ships guarded by the armed merchant cruiser Jervis Bay No. 5 in the Atlantic and a fifth vessel of the convoy which was attacked later from the air and abandoned.

The Admiralty said that during the week ending Nov. 10-11 Germany claimed to have sunk 140,414 tons of merchant shipping.

The average weekly loss of British, Allied and neutral shipping through enemy action has been 58,575 tons.

The weke's total of 71,747 tons was slightly less than the figure of the previous week and far below the record weekly loss in recent months of 198,030 tons recorded in the week of Oct. 14-21.

The week's sinking raised the weekly average since the war began from 58,575 tons to 58,787 tons, and brought the total sunk since the outbreak of war to 3,644,835 tons.

The enemy, up to Oct. 31, had lost a total of 1,542,000 tons of merchant shipping—a much larger per centage of enemy shipping than British, Allied and neutral losses have been of their merchant fleets.

Duce's Apology Takes Punch From His Roar

WASHINGTON, Nov. 20—(AP).—Mussolini's roaring assurance to his people that the Nazi-Fascist bloc "already has victory in its fist" would have sounded more convincing if it had not of necessity been accompanied by an apology for the poor showing of his armies against little Greece.

He explained to the Italian people what had been clearly demonstrated in Greece: that the mountainous Albanian-Greek border did not lend itself to "blitzkrieg" technique.

"With absolute certainty I tell you we will break Greece's back; whether in two months or twelve months, it little matters," Mussolini claimed.

Considering the odds against Greece, that boast of her ultimate defeat would seem a statement of the obvious. The declaration, however, that it little matters whether it takes Italy two months or twelve to accomplish her "most firm proposal" against Greece is open to dispute. The time element could make all the difference both for Greece and for Britain.

British war leadership hopes, with United States industrial help, to approach air parity with Germany within six months. There is ample evidence that the Royal Air Force is steadily gaining strength. It is already definitely on the offensive, not the defensive, against Italy, and is striking back at Germany. There are many indimations that the British Army in Egypt also is preparing to assume the offensive.

Carry War To Italy.

Although Mussolini belittled the raid by British bombers and torpedo planes on Italian battle craft at Taranto, his own words indicate serious temporary impairment of Fascist sea power. His "victory" address also contained a virtual admission of defeatist whispering in Italy.

"To think or suspect something otherwise (than Axis victory and the smashing of Greece) means not to know me," Il Duce shouted.

British strategy from the moment of the Italian attack on Greece has been to seize every opportunity to carry the war to Italy. It is based on the assumption that Italian public morale is the weak joint in the Axis armor. And the Mussolini speech only adds to that impression.

Unquestionably every unit of increasing British air power that can be spared from the home front will be thrown against Italy. British fleet and air bases in Southern Greece and Crete have already changed war theatre in British favor. They have rendered renewal of the Italian drive in Egypt increasingly difficult, and an Italian disaster there might be the straw to break the back of Italian morale.

Hitler Still Boss.

Mussolini made the best of a bad job in trying to bolster his home front and stimulate Italian hatred of Great Britain as the war-maker. As he spoke his armies were being ousted from their meagre footholds in Greece. Certainly, if it is to take months to retrieve that reverse, the Axis chances of consolidating Continental victories by smashing Britain will be more remote than they were five months ago when the Battle of Britain began.

Actually, Il Duce's partner, Hitler, held the stage centre for the Axis even as Mussolini talked. It was what might flow out of German-Italian - Spanish politico - military conferences at Hitler's mountain hide-away in Bavaria, not Mussolini blustering, that concerned Britain and the world. Il Duce is still very obviously a tail to the Hitler kite, and a tail with painful Greek-British twists in it.

Terror Brew

St. Thomas, Ont., Nov. 20 (CP)

THREE St. Thomas minors, who police said got their idea for a campaign of terror from reading thriller stories, were told to appear in Police Chief McKeown's office today to receive a lecture.

Police rounded up the boys after St. Thomas residents complained about notes being pushed under their doors threatening them with death unless they met demands for money. The boys were said to have told police they got the idea after reading of the exploits of a character called "The Owl."

"You die November 14," said one note.

Another said: "The Eagle squawks at eight o'clock tonight. Leave $25 on the verandah at 10 minutes after."

Expect Sifton In Chester's Job

OTTAWA, Nov. 20—(CP).—The Ottawa Journal in a newspage story said today the appointment of Col. Victor Sifton of Winnipeg, as successor of Philip A. Chester of Winnipeg, in the position of Master-General of the Ordnance in the Department of National Defence is expected.

The paper said:—

"Philip A. Chester, general manager of the Hudson's Bay Company, is going back to Winnipeg shortly to resume that post after two strenuous months in the capital engaged in reorganizing the Ordnance Branch of the Department of National Defence in the position of Master-General of the Ordnance.

"It is expected the government will announce the appointment of Col. Victor Sifton, general manager of The Winnipeg Free Press, as Mr. Chester's successor. The two men have been close friends for years, and Mr. Sifton came from Winnipeg with Mr. Chester and has worked with him on reorganization plans.

Col. Sifton returned to Winnipeg a short time ago after spending several weeks in Ottawa in close association with Mr. Chester and Defence Minister Ralston, the paper added.

Nazi Bombs Fail to Halt Royal Ceremony as King Opens Parliament

SPEECH FROM THRONE DECLARES EMPIRE WILL FIGHT UNTIL FREEDOM IS MADE SECURE—CORDIAL AMERICAN RELATIONS SOURCE OF CHEER AS MUNITION SUPPLIES ROLL ACROSS THE SEAS.

LONDON, Nov. 21 — (CP Cable).—The King opened a new session of parliament today, driving with the Queen through the bombed scarred streets of London between air raid alarms to deliver a message of confidence and resolution to his people.

Not even the vicissitudes of war were permitted to interfere with the ancient ceremony although there was less pageantry than a state opening in time of peace. The whole ceremony lasted 10 minutes and no more than 100 people witnessed it.

The Speech from the Throne recorded the King's confidence "that victory is assured not only by the prowess of the armed forces of my Empire and those of my allies but also by the devotion of the civil defence forces and the tenacity and industry of my peoples."

One of the features of the speech was a reference to Anglo - American relations which it said "could be no more cordial, and I learn with the utmost satisfaction of the ever increasing volume of munitions of war which is arriving from that country."

"It is good to know that in these fateful times how widely shared are the ideals of ordered freedom, justice and security," it added.

The King wore the blue service uniform of an Admiral of the Fleet, while among the peers sat the Duke of Kent in Air Force blue and the Duke of Gloucester in the khaki of the army.

"Full U.K. Aid For Greece" —Churchill

Just Waiting The Day Empire Arms Equal Germans

LONDON, Nov. 21—(CP Cable)—Foreign Secretary Viscount Halifax told the House of Lords to-day that he had "some reason to believe" that British proposals for a trade agreement with Russia would succeed, while in the House of Commons Prime Minister Churchill reiterated Britain's determination to assist the Greeks.

General debate on many aspects of the war began simultaneously in the two Houses of Parliament after the formal opening of a new session by the King.

The Prime Minister said that in helping the Greeks it was necessary to keep in mind the need of defending Egypt and the Suez canal against superior numbers of Italian forces.

"We have both these theatres to consider," he told the House. "I can only say that we shall do our best."

In his speech in the Upper Chamber, Lord Halifax said proposals have been made for "a compromise settlement arising out of Soviet annexations of territory" with regard to British obligations. Friction had arisen out of Russia's absorption of the three Baltic States last summer.

On the broad subject of war aims, Mr. Churchill said that many believed that "example is better than the precept that actions speak louder than words."

Saving British Liberties

But one pledge he could make. That was to safeguard parliamentary institutions and keep them vital and active, even under enemy fire, so that the hard-won liberties of the British people, voluntarily surrendered for the period of the war, could be restored to them in their fullness "when victory has crowned our exertions and our perseverance."

"Up to the present," Mr. Churchill declared, "this war has been waged between fully armed Germany and a half armed or a quarter armed British Empire. We have not done so badly.

"I look forward with confidence and hope to see the time when we ourselves shall be as well armed as our antagonists, and beyond that

Scapegoats For Flop In Greece Campaign Laid By Politicians

LONDON, Nov. 21.—(CP Cable)—Fifty senior officers of the Italian army in Albania were removed after Mussolini's campaign against the Greeks bogged down, it was learned reliably today.

These changes were in addition to the shake-up which sent Gen. Ubaldo Soddu to take command of Duce's army.

The sources believed the Greek campaign was planned by Italian politicians instead of by the military and that these men were made scapegoats for the failure.

It is thought that their return to Italy may create friction.

Arms Confiscated

LEYDEN, The Netherlands, Nov. 21.—(Via Berlin)—(AP)—Because a pot-shot was taken at a German sentry Tuesday night, the chief of police today ordered all inhabitants of this famous university town to turn over all firearms by 10 p.m.

A Greek Government spokesman said the central break-through occurred at Mertzani, Albania, west of the Aoos River and northwest of Konitza, Greece.

Leaving munitions, arms, tanks, automobiles and laggard troopers behind, the Italians are retreating so rapidly that the bayonet-brandishing Greeks are hard put to keep up with them, he said

The Greek high command listed 20 automobiles among the booty captured. The Athens radio predicted a decisive phase of the war was imminent.

In the north, the Greek high command also announced, its hardy mountaineer soldiers had won the summits of the Morava range southeast of Koritza and were pressing

Victoria, Nov. 21 (CP)

GERMAN Sudetenlanders who settled in British Columbia's northern Peace River country after the Nazis took over their homeland, have offered their services to Canada in the war, Glen E. Braden (Lib. Peace River) told the British Columbia Legislature yesterday.

The Peace River member said the Sudeten settlers' leader, W. Wanker, had written Prime Minister Mackenzie King, offering services of every able-bodied man in the colony.

70 Union Heads Held, No Trial Is C.C.F. Charge

OSHAWA, Nov. 21—(CP).—Clarence Gillis, C.C.F. member of parliament for Cape Breton South, charged in a speech before members of the United Automobile Workers of America here last night that 70 Canadian trade union leaders have been lodged in "concentration camps" without trial.

"These leaders may be detrimental to Canada's war effort and again they may not be," he said. "But at least they have the right that belongs to every Britisher—to have a fair trial before being interned."

Mr. Gillis said he feared that the Defence of Canada Regulations would be administered by provincial authorities to "trip up" the trade union movement, and he claimed the arrest of 47 members of the U.A.W.A. for picketing the Chrysler plant in Windsor was an illustration of how the regulations could be used to prevent peaceful picketing.

Mr. Gillis charged that a "mine owners' secret police" is in operation in Kirkland Lake, "organized to protect the mining industry from the trade unions that are being forged in that section of the province."

Unions, he said, are the bulwark of democracy, "and unless trade unionism can be built up in Ontario without fear or hindrance, the road ahead for this province is going to be tough."

Huns Attack In Mass 2 Hrs. Only

Anti-Aircraft Barrage Scares Them Off; Lighter Midland Toll

LONDON, Nov. 21 (CP)—London's sirens sounded two daylight alerts in quick succession today shortly after raiders were reported over scattered towns in England.

The raiders defied a gale over the Channel to make their daylight stabs at Britain, and as they crossed a heavy cross-Channel gun duel raged below them in spite of low visibility.

The first two daylight raids on London were of short duration.

A southeast England village turned out en masse to help firemen control fires caused last night by hundreds of incendiary bombs dropped by Nazi raiders.

In the London area a high explosive bomb killed a family of four, the parents and two daughters.

Terrific anti-aircraft fire was reported to have taken the sting out of the Nazis' second successive night of mass attack on the Midlands and the Government described the raids as "intermittent and on a minor scale."

Beaten Off In 2 Hours

Apparently trying to strike another blow similar to that at Coventry a week ago, swarms of raiders poured over an east Midlands town during the night but were dispersed by ground guns after less than two hours of incendiary bomb-dropping—first step in the technique of total air war.

The all-clear sounded in London a short time after dawn, ending a night of light raids marked by long intervals without any Nazi air activity.

Although the night's attacks were not so widespread as the assaults Tuesday night, when a nine-hour raid left a dozen Midland towns strewn with wreckage and dead and wounded, observers in the east Mid-

London, Nov. 21 (CP)

IN a swift-running machine-gun fight, a Spitfire overhauled and rammed a German Heinkel bomber today, causing both planes to crash and killing the four men in the bomber and the Spitfire's pilot. A fireman also was killed by a bomb exploded by fire in the bomber's wreckage.

The fight occurred between Sittingbourne and Faversham in Kent.

Fire, Explosions Sear Great Hun Inland Port

LONDON, Nov. 21—(CP).—British bombers hammered the German inland port of Duisburg-Rohrort in "a large scale attack" last night, the Air Ministry announced today.

Damage was done to shipping and warehouses, it said, "and many fires and explosions occurred."

Other British air squadrons attacked German air bases and the "invasion ports" of Lorient, Cherbourg, Dunkirk and Ostend, the communique said.

"Several enemy airdromes were bombed. At Amiens-Glisy, a German aircraft in the act of taking off was set on fire.

"One of our aircraft has not returned to its base."

U.K's Eastern Air Deputy Is Captured

New Marshal, 6 Others Nabbed As Bomber Forced Down In Sicily

LONDON, Nov. 21 — (CP). — The Air Ministry announced to-day that Air Marshal Owen Tudor Boyd, Deputy Chief of the Royal Air Force in the Middle East, is a prisoner of war in Italy.

An official announcement said:

"The Air Ministry announces that Air Marshal O. T. Boyd, C.B., O.B.E., M.C., A. F.C., recently appointed deputy to the Air Officer Commanding in Chief, Middle East Command, has been reported missing while crossing the Mediterranean by air.

"It is now learned that he is a prisoner in Italian hands."

ROME, Nov. 21—(AP).—The capture of the new Deputy Commander of the Royal Air Force in the Middle East, Air Marshal Owen Tudor Boyd, was reported today by the Italian high command.

Boyd, former commander of the British balloon barrage forces, and six other men, including four officers, were captured in Sicily when a Wellington bomber made a forced landing, its communique said.

He was reported en route from England to take over the post when his plane went down.

Antonescu In Berlin

Berlin, Nov. 21 (AP)

GEN. Ion Antonescu, premier of Rumania, arrived in Germany today, bringing his country to the fore as the possible next recruit for the expanding axis alliance.

Accompanied by his foreign minister, Costin Sturza, and the German minister to Rumania, Wilhelm Fabricius, the Rumanian premier was greeted at the Austrian border town of Bruck by the German chief of protocol, Baron Alexander von Doernberg, and other Reich officials.

Two More Chutes Sighted In Quebec Bush

OTTAWA, Nov. 21 — (CP). — Sighting of two parchutes in the heavily wooded area near East Lake, Que., where search is being conducted for four missing airmen, was announced at noon to-day by Air Ministry.

In an 80-word statement the Air Ministry svaid the two airmen who presumably parachuted to earth from the plane late on Saturday night or early on Sunday were not to be seen.

"This (the sighting of the parachutes) is regarded as a most important clue and narrows down the search accordingly," said the Air Ministry.

The parachutes were sighted by the crew of a Royal Canadian Air Force twin-engined flying boat engaged in the search for the lost airmen.

To-day's statement was the most encouraging word since yesterday's announcement that one of the crew who had been missing since the plane was abandoned had been sighted.

Rescue on Way.

He was not identified, but emergency rations were dropped to him and ground parties went into the bush to bring him out.

Six men were in the Atlantic coastal patrol plane when it presumably ran out of gas while heading for an inland landing field.

Italians Fleeing City Roads Under Fire; Centre Of Line Cut

ATHENS, Nov. 21—(AP).—Greek forces were reported to have reached the outskirts of the besieged Italian base of Koritza in Albania this morning.

At the same time, in the coastal sector of the fighting zone, Greek columns were said to be marching rapidly on another important Italian base, Argirocastro, also in Albania.

Italian resistance in that zone was reported to have collapsed almost totally.

Latest information from the front said the Greeks were within six miles of Argirocastro, which is said to rank equally with Koritza in strategic value.

It was on these two towns that the Italians had based their drive into Greece. Stores of war material had been assembled in both places.

A thrust through the centre of the Italian lines, putting the Fascist forces to hasty flight at a point six miles within Albania, was the previous high spot of Greek successes reported today all along the 100-mile front from the Ionian Sea to Koritza.

Observers in the Koritza sector reported that the Italians were abandoning the city and all outgoing roads were under fire from Greek artillery.

Pilots flying over the coastal sector reported that the Italians were retreating in such haste that none were sighted immediately in the path of the advancing Greeks.

A Job As Sweeper

Montreal, Nov. 21 (CP)

COUNSEL for Hyde Park Clothes Limited pleaded not guilty today of a charge lodged by J. P. Chartrand that he was not given his job back when he returned from 30 days of compulsory military training. The case will be heard Nov. 28.

In his complaint, Chartrand said that he had been working as a clothes-machine mechanic and contended that when he returned from camp his job was filled by another. He said his employers offered him a job of sweeping in the plant at the same salary he had been earning previously.

Snatching A Snooze

Sapper's Bed With Bomb Shocks Police

LONDON, Nov. 21—(CP).—Bomb splinters from the battle of Britain:

While the sapper guarded a crater where a time bomb awaited "attention," a constable asked permission to look down the big hole. As he walked to the edge, the sapper warned against kicking dirt down "because my mate's having a sleep."

Rays of a torch showed the soldier sleeping beside one of the biggest bombs the constable said he ever saw.

One London motorist who gives office workers free rides home turned up with this note on his windshield: "Lifts given to men only. Meeting the wife."

A woman warden in North London warned an old lady, on her way to return a library book, to take cover because planes and gunfire were heard overhead. The old lady retorted she couldn't possibly stop as she had the book out a fortnight already.

These air raids are turning things topsy-turvy all right. One London dance hall introduced a morning jam session so soldiers and their girls could dance without risking the dangers of going home in night raids.

A high explosive bomb wrecked all of one London house except one room. That was the one where the Pascoe family sat.

Sample of a weather report sent to London from Dover—only place in England where weather can be mentioned: "Wind southwest. Light sea—smooth. Low heavy mist mid-Channel. Starlight overhead. Quiet."

Bulgaria In Line?

Bucharest, Rumania, Nov. 21.

RUMANIAN dispatches from Sofia predicted today that Bulgaria will alter her "attitude of defensive neutrality" soon and present Greece with a note setting forth Bulgarian claims on that country.

This "new offensive neutrality," dispatches said, is a result of current axis political activity.

Long, Grim Road To Victory

Urge Downhearted Think of France, Thank God For Freedom

TORONTO, Nov. 21 — (CP). — Percy J. Philip, Ottawa correspondent of the New York Times, began his address to Toronto Empire Club today with the "flat statement" he was sure Britain would win the war, but he added: "It is going to be a very long, grim business."

Mr. Philip, for 20 years head of the Times' Paris Bureau before he went to Ottawa, said there still is "a long hard road in front of us until we can rid the world of this nightmare in which we are all living and restore decency and freedom.

"We are going to have many heartbreaks and sorrows. We are going to have to be very patient.

"But when we feel impatient and despondent I want you to think of those other peoples who have already lost the war—of those Poles and Danes and Dutch people and Belgians and Norwegians and French who are living, starving and still resisting under the heel of the Nazi oppressor...Let us thank God daily that we are still free."

Mr. Philip, a Briton, said Hitler has announced that he is "the toughest leader the world has ever known," and it was probably true.

"His is the toughness of the deformed—the vitally deformed," he continued. "And he is surrounded by tough men—Goering, Himmler, Hess, Goebbels, and all the rest of the Nazi bandits.

"He is followed by tough men.... terribly tough. They are worth fighting and beating."

Then Mr. Philip said he would let his audience in on a secret — Hitler's followers were not all tough. There was a weak streak in the rank and file, th weak streak of a subject people.

"But we Britishers, Canadians, Australians, Afrikanders, and New Zealanders are tough all through," he said, "from Prime Minister Churchill down to the little Cockney children who brag to each other that the bomb that fell in their street was the biggest ever."

Nazis In U.S. Economic Setup

Far-Sighted Policy Deeper Than Espionage Used In Americas

WASHINGTON, Nov. 21 (AP)—The United States Congressional committee investigating unamerican activities declared today in a special report on Nazi activities in the United States that the German government has been engaged in a 'far-sighted policy' of penetrating the economic structures of the United States and Central and South America.

Making public a 500-page review of several months of inquiry, mostly in New York, the committee said:

"As a result of these investigations, it became apparent that the activities of the German government in this country were not devoted solely toward propaganda and so-called military espionage, but also reflect the fact that the German government over a period of years has been engaged in the far-sighted policy of penetrating into the economic structure of this country and those of Central and South America.

"It is true that the evidence before this committee up until the present time is not all-conclusive."

Quoting from many documents which it had seized, the committee described in detail activities which it attributed to the Transocean News Agency, a German organization (not connected with any Canadian or United States news service); the German Library of Information of New York; the German Railroads Information Office of New York, and the American Fellowship Forum.

The report also said that the committee had seized in files of the Chemical Marketing Company in New York a plan entitled "The Organization of German Industry in America After the War."

This organization, the committee said, was "typically characteristic of the thoroughness of the German mind and its ability to foresee in great detail future developments."

Those "Tail End Charlies"

Bombers' Lonely Rear Gunners Unsung Heroes

LONDON, Nov. 21 (CP)—Unsung heroes of Royal Air Force bombing excursions over Germany are the men who keep lone watch in a diminutive glass turret in the tail of the plane—the rear gunners.

"Tail End Charlies," they're called by their mates of the bomber command and their job is one of the loneliest in the service. And one of the most important, too.

It's the duty and point of honor of the rear gunner to stay in his turret from the moment he enters the aircraft until the time he comes back to earth.

If he is large, and some rear gunners are large, he and the turret are pretty well all in one piece by

New Models Banned During War

Further Restrictions Due Howe Warns To Increase Output

OTTAWA, Nov. 21 (CP)—Gradually increasing wartime restrictions on the life of the average Canadian are indicated in a new order severely limiting new styles in automobiles, refrigerators, bicycles and other appliances during the war.

To reduce the use of machine tools and skilled labor for civilian purposes, the government has prohibited, except under licence, the manufacture of new models of a wide range of equipment and appliances, Munitions Minister Howe announced to the House of Commons yesterday.

"By thus avoiding the economic wastage of machines and men, which mere whims, fads, and fancies of fashion often produce, the ingenuity of a number of skilled artisans and highly trained men will be directed toward the work of winning the war," he said.

In a comprehensive review of the state of Canada's wartime productive effort, the munitions minister warned that added restrictions doubtless would be imposed on the ordinary citizen as time went on.

The minister brought the house up-to-date on the activities of his department, said contracts had been let in Canada for war orders to a total value of $849,000,000, reported on the progress in Canada's various war production fields and climaxed his review with the assertion the Dominion should be producing its maximum of war materials in another eight months.

The next eight months not only would witness a rapid expansion of employment and industrial activity but would be "a testing time for the morale of the Canadian people," Mr. Howe said.

"I have no doubt that our industry and our men and women will justify our confidence in the pro-

For Friday, November 22.

Moderately promising and pleasant conditions foreseen for this day, judging by the lunar propositions, may be brought to a sudden and surprising denouement by an unexpected untoward event. This has a disruptive and disintegrating force, calling for much quiet deliberation and clever manoeuvering rather than agitated and erratic behavior.

Hydro Chairman Visits Engineers

Dr. Thomas H. Hogg, C.E., D. Eng. M.E.I.C., chairman of the Hydro Electric Power Commission, was one of the guest speakers at the 22nd annual E.I.C. dinner held at the Kawartha Club on Wednesday evening.

He spoke for only a few minutes, but brought good news to his associate engineers when he advised that progress had been made toward obtaining assistance for the organization from the Carnegie Foundation. Dr. Hogg said he believes now that some help will be forthcoming for the Engineering Institute's Library, and the grant will also permit the publication of technical documents of interest and value to the profession.

He advised that the E.I.C. had been invited and accepted as an affiliate of the Engineering Council, and three members had been named as a committee, Harry Bennett, Prof. C. R. Young and James A. Vance.

He added, too, that the professional engineers of Alberta, a provincial organization, was joining the E.I.C. and the forms were ready for signing. He voiced the hope that all provincial engineering associations would affiliate with the E.I.C. as the parent organization.

Dr. Hogg was introduced by G. R. Langley, chief engineer at the Canadian General Electric Company, who described the guest as the head of the largest public utility in Canada.

Harry Brandon, brought greeting from the Toronto branch of the E.I.C. and extended an invitation to all engineers to visit the Toronto club at its meeting should they be in Toronto.

There were no peeresses in the gallery and no flashing jewels to catch the light. There were no diplomats and no members of the public. It was the ancient ceremony made to coincide with the grim realities of war.

The King walked into the Peers' Chamber holding the lavender-gloved hand of the Queen, preceded by the Lord Great Chamberlain, the Earl Marshal, and the Garter King-at-Arms, each walking backwards. Various court officials, who in peacetime would be wearing ceremonial costumes symbolical of the distant past, ranged themselves at the sides of the dais.

The King read it in a clear, even voice, seldom hesitating, and his words carrying far into the corners of the Chamber. At the end of the speech Their Majesties rose, bowed to the assembly and walked hand in hand from the Chamber to drive away under lowering clouds through the streets, unrecognized by the passing crowds.

Lakefield Boy Wins Contest

Twelve school children from the county competed at the Normal School Wednesday night in the finals of the oratorical contest, and a high standard of public speaking was the paramount feature of the program.

Four elimination contests had been held at Apsley, Havelock, Lakefield and Warsaw, and three pupils from each centre went on to compete in the finals. Exceptionally keen interest was taken in the contest throughout all the schools of the county, and the project was sponsored by the Peterborough County Women's Institute.

Mrs. C. Weller of Warsaw, president of the County Women's Institute, presided during the finals and the judges were Dr. J. A. Bannister, principal of the Normal School, and forty Normal students who had been given special coaching in the art of judging oratorical contests.

First and second winners of the contest go to Brighton on Friday to take part in the inter-county competition.

Top honors and the championship of the county went to Jack Chittick, a student at the Lakefield Public School, whose address, "Why I Live on the Farm," was an outstanding piece of work. Second place went to Inez Spooner of Havelock, who chose the subject, "How to Make Public Speeches." Third place was taken by Martin O'Brien of S.S. No. 8, Douro, whose topic was "The Stowaway Clover."

Dr. Bannister was liberal in his praise of the 12 candidates who acquitted themselves so nobly before a large audience and he lauded public speaking as one of the finest means of preparing for the problems that will face a pupil once he has graduated and starts to make his way in the business world.

Earlier this week, the sectional contest held at Apsley resulted in three students from different schools winning a spot in the final bracket. These were Reta Wilson, No. 2, Burleigh; Jack Tucker from the Tucker Settlement, and George Rayments from the East Road School. Mrs. Will Lean, president of the Apsley Women's Institute, was chairman during the evening's program.

War Grants In Counties Total $10,000

COBOURG, Nov. 21—(Special).—Report of the County Property committee was given by the chairman, Reeve P. Gooding of Brighton Township at the session of Counties Council Wednesday afternoon. The report was brief, and covered work done in maintenance of county buildings during the period since the June session of the Counties Council. Deputy-Reeve W. J. Crowhurst of Port Hope took exception of the failure of the committee to provide the registrar at the registry office in that town with a new typewriter as requested, pointing out that whereas the Counties Council had furnished the typewriters in the other registry offices, the registrar in Port Hope had been supplying his own machine. Reeve Gooding stated in reply that the committee had taken into consideration the fact that some $200 had been spent in a new roof for the registry office at Port Hope this year and in view of the extensive expenditures in registry offices throughout the counties, it was felt that enough had been spent in Port Hope. The council finally passed a resolution that the purchase of the new typewriter be recommended to the 1941 council.

The report of the Board of Management showed that at the present time there were 94 inmates at the counties home and that during the period just ended there had been 20 committed; five deceased; one discharged; four absconded. Of the 94 inmates, 46 were male and 48 females. Deputy-Reeve W. R. Pickle of Darlington Township, chairman of the special committee appointed last June to look into the organization of a civil guard, stated that organization had not taken place as yet, but that the committee had been in communication with Attorney-General Gordon Conant, who had said that if the committee thought that there were enough aliens in the counties to warrant it, to go ahead and form the civil guard. The committee had not felt that they should take upon themselves the authority to form a civil guard for the time at least in view of several circumstances.

Equalize Bridge Rate

In response to a query from Reeve G. A. Edmondstone of Bowmanville as to when the bridge rate was going to be equalized, council passed a resolution instructing the clerk to get in touch with the road office for a report on the matter to be supplied when council met on Thursday morning. Reeve Edmondstone declared that the council had had enough trouble and lawsuits before, for the reason that the equalization had not been carried out and to prevent a repetition, the bridge rate should be tackled now. The counties clerk informed the council the amount involved was so small as to mean only a few cents levy on each municipality. However, the bridge rate equalization had been referred to the road office at the last session and it was decided to get the particulars from the road office. The bridge equalization dates back many years and is an extra levy on the county which has had the greater portion of bridge construction or expenditure during the year, the levy being the difference in the amounts spent in the counties.

Council directed that letters be written expressing the sympathy of the council to ex-Warden James McCamus of Cavan Township in his illness and condolences to Reeve Devitt of Cartwright and Deputy Reeve W. J. Patton of Clarke, for recent bereavements in their families.

The special committee for patriotic grants recommended grants of $2,000 to the Navy League and $1,000 each to the Canadian Legion and the Knights of Columbus Army Huts. To Reeve S. Gifford's comment that the Port Hope's I.O.D.E.'s request for a grant merited consideration, it was pointed out that the I.O.D.E. organization did not come under the War Charities Act, and for that reason no grant could be made by the Counties Council. Total grants for the year for patriotic purposes reached the total of $10,000 with these latest grants, the sum of $10,000 being the amount set aside for the year for that purpose.

War Stamp Idea Is Superior Engineers Told

An interesting and highly educational talk on the valuable part War Savings Certificates are playing in Canada's War effort highlighted the 22nd annual meeting of the local branch, Engineering Institute of Canada at the Kawartha Club Wednesday night. The talk was given by de Gaspe Beaubien of Montreal, joint chairman of the National War Savings Committee.

Ross Dobbin, chairman, called on J. Mercier, a junior engineer at the C.G.E. Company from Montreal to introduce the speaker, and Mr. Mercier made the introduction in both French and English.

Appeals to All Classes

Let me first draw your attention to the fact that a government loan, by means of War Savings Certificates, does not only appeal to a different class of the community than its usual war loan, by the limitation imposed by law on the amounts that can be held by any one person, but it has a quite different effect on the economics of the country. The war loan draws on supply of money which is already accumulated, and which is in search of investment, while the War Savings Certificates causes the accumulation of money as it goes in circulation, and creates savings where otherwise there would be no savings at all. In other words, they are savings in process of formation rather than savings as an accomplished fact. Money that is invested in War Loans is not in danger of being spent, while money intercepted in its course to buy War Savings Certificates most likely would be.

It is this difference between the two types of loans that prompted Dr. Clark, Deputy-Minister of Finance, to state that the War Savings Certificate loan was worth six times as much to the country as the War Loan. It is the consequences of the War Savings Certificate loan on the economics of the country that I wish to discuss, and the sheer necessity of it for Canada.

War results in many more people being gainfully employed, in fact it is estimated that $900,000,000 will be paid annually in the form of increased wages partly from the war effort and also on account of the requirements of Great Britain. This sum is over and above what was paid for wages in former years, so that there is added to the sums which the mass of people can normally spend, this enormous additional sum. The purchasing power in the country is thus materially increased.

Curtail Inflation

It is necessary therefore to curtail inflation, by materially reducing this newly created purchasing power. New taxes were imposed but it is difficult to reach labor in an equitable form of taxation. Still labor is the class in whose hands this additional purchasing power has been placed. The instrument by which the Finance Department of the Government hopes to combat inflation is the War Savings Certificate.

Labor must buy these as a savings program and reduce purchasing power, and it is the hope of everyone that by the time these securities mature in seven and half years the war will be over.

The certificates are income tax free, and this being so it was necessary to prevent their being accumulated and their being used by large holders to avoid paying income tax. A limit of purchase was set at $400 a year. Today the Government is asking for ten millions of dollars a month from this plan.

Mr. Beaubien paid generous tribute to the managers and branch managers of the different insurance companies across Canada for the unstinted effort in putting over the sale of War Savings Certificates.

He went on to explain the elaborate system of committees and the organization that has been set in motion to give impetus to the sale of certificates and to handle them. The backbone however of the entire setup, said the speaker, are the local committees who get right at the root of the purchases and on their shoulders to a greater extent rests the success or failure of the plan.

If everyone does his or her part in purchasing certificates we will win the war, we will save our liberty and the War Savings Certificates when redeemed will permit industry to go on, and if some employees lose their job, they will find another. When the period of readjustment is over we will have an era of prosperity such as we have never known.

"In building our war machine, we have developed an enormous production capacity that will allow us to supply almost any of the variety of needs this sadly crippled old world will need for its rebuilding.

"How encouraging it is to know that we will be left in a strong position to supply a large share of the world's requirements and that according to economists, we can expect an era of unprecedented abundance. Is that not worth the sacrifice of tightening our belts for a few years. Join the army of two million savers now, and invest every month as heavily as the law will permit."

The thanks of the gathering for the fine talk was voiced by Ross Dobbin, chairman.

Ciechanowski, it was said, plans to leave for Washington in "about 10 days"

Sees Fight Of UK Still Battle By All France

NEW YORK, Nov. 21 — (CP). — Eugene J. Houdry, 48-year-old mechanical engineer, and one of the world's foremost petroleum authorities, believes that the Battle of Britain is still the Battle of France, and that victory in the Battle of Britain will prevent the Battle of America.

A sturdy, broad - shouldered Frenchman who was born in the Paris region and is head of a petroleum processing corporation that bears his name, Houdry is the elected leader of the "Free Frenchmen" of the United States, who have banded themselves into an organization known as "France Quand Meme" which they freely translate, "France Forever."

In the offices of "France Quand Meme" high in Rockefeller Centre, amidst a legion of workers, Mr. Houdry explained why he and other French leaders in the United States banded together and signed the charter of their organization last September 28, in Independence Hall at Philadelphia.

His manner was blunt. He spoke emphatically.

"I can explain our aims very simply. They are three-fold.

"First, we want to aid our compatriots, those in France under German domination, those under Vichy, under indirect German domination, those abroad fighting for a Free France.

"Second, we have created an extensive service of information, a press service to fight the lies of Nazis propaganda directed against France.

"Third, we think constantly of national defence, ways and means by which we can aid Gen. de Gaulle; improvement of research facilities, and to contribute our share to United States defence.

Giving Britian All Aid.

"Naturally we are co-operating with Great Britain to the fullest extent possible."

An ex-soldier, lieutenant in the tank corps during the first Great War, who was wounded in 1917 at the battle of Juvincourt, M. Houdry likes nothing better than to cut through red tape and get straight down to issues at hand.

"The first thing I'm suspicious about," he said, "is when anyone insists that 'all is going well,' that 'things are going smoothly.' We just keep checking, investigating, improving. Things are never perfect; there's always room for improvement. That's the attitude that's needed in defence matters."

As a former soldier, he feels deeply the predicament of Marshal Petain.

These are the words in which he speaks of Vichy:

"For us the French government no longer exists. There remains only in Vichy a very old and tired marshal of France, who was so greatly beloved by the men who fought under him in the last war. We regret that his conception of loyalty, honor, duty, as well as his wisdom, are the object of a painful discussion and criticism throughout the world.

"We declare that such a government is without a legal or moral authority."

Lewis Greets Likely Successor

Sober-faced John L. Lewis, former head of the C.I.O., is pictured here as he shook hands with Phillip Murray, steel workers' organizing committee chairman, at the C. I. O. national convention at Atlantic City. It was at this convention that Lewis resigned as head of the C.I.O. Murray may succeed him.

MADE IN PETERBOROUGH

A Friendly Invitation to Become Acquainted with "Made-in-Peterborough" Food Products

Peterborough is a city of skilled people and the phrase or mark "Made in Peterborough" has travelled far. Among these goods so marked probably Food Products enjoy a wider distribution across the nation and throughout the world than any other.

This is a fact which the people of this community, whether as primary producers, manufacturers, merchants or consumers, may well take pride. And so, Peterborough merchants this week are seeking to give deserved recognition to foods manufactured right here in our own city—made by people whom you know—made by people who provide markets also for the farmers in this district.

In your newspaper tonight you will find their many offerings. There is nothing boastful about their claims but rather an invitation to become acquainted with the quality and the extent of "Made in Peterborough" Food Products—products which have been successful in competition with other good products the world over. We are glad to join Peterborough merchants in this friendly invitation.

Should Make a Start

"Wouldn't it be awful if we were cut off from our supply of oranges and grapefruit?" Possibly there should have been an exclamation mark at the end of that because it was spoken with considerable feeling by a lady who had been reading that such a thing might come to pass. The reason would be to keep our money from going to United States.

Possibly we are living so comfortably in a time when the fate of our country and our empire hangs in the balance that we have not realized how serious are the days in which we live.

We read of the shrunken frames of the defenders of China, and of the work being done there by men who get a handful of rice each day.

We learn of the troubles in the countries where German domination has sapped the supply of food. People are eating stuff which they call bread and there are all manner of substitutes in it. They would eat horse meat if they could get it.

There is no butter and milk is restricted to small children. There are no grapefruit or oranges.

In Britain people do their buying according to rations. The store where they deal today may be bombed out tomorrow. The folk from a bombed-out home who have lived through the experience have no supplies on which to draw. They do not sit down to the breakfast table and expect to find their oranges or grapefruit waiting for them.

If doing without things is going to make us any more effective in war effort; if it is going to turn our minds sharply away from ourselves and our own likes and dislikes—then perhaps we should make an early start on the serious business of doing without things.

Counting In Billions

There are those who even in war time will keep records and try to find what the world war is costing. Possibly it is advisable to keep such records, but at best it is ineffective. We can do nothing about it. We are spending today at a tremendous rate because Hitler has been spending for the last seven or eight years; he has been taking as much as 50 per cent. of the total national revenue for war purposes.

In Canada we have a national income of about $4,000,000,000 a year, a national debt of something over $3,250,000,000, and our armament budget for the current year is $810,000,000. And it will grow away beyond that figure.

During the fiscal year United States will have spent $5,000,000,000 on armament out of a total budget of $12,058,000,000 but United States has a national income of $75,000,000,000.

In Britain the present rate of spending is $20,000,000,000 per year, but even that enormous figure is subject to upward revision without notice. Britain will spend every last penny which can be raised.

Those who add up figures and claim they have something like the right answer announce that the six major nations are spending at the rate of $50,000,000,000 per year.

United States could make her aid to Britain more effective by loosening up on the regulations which call for cash on the counter before the goods are delivered. There ought to be credit extended, and that feeling is exhibiting a healthy growth in United States where some fearless and clear-thinking people are now saying openly that their country is putting dollars ahead of security, safety and everything else.

Made-in-Peterborough Film

One good way to create a desire in the mind of the prospective tourist to visit a district is to let that prospect see what it is like. Tell him about it and show him pictures of it. The Examiner has been doing that for several years in its annual Tourist Edition.

The Peterborough Tourist Bureau is now in possession of a film which is a made-in-Peterborough product. Made by Fred Roy. It is not a new venture for this artistic gentleman because he has previously gone far afield in search of material. This time he has covered the Kawartha Lakes district; with the full assistance of the Department of Game and Fisheries there is shown exactly what takes place in the fish hatcheries. Those who saw the picture for the first time on Tuesday evening were certain the Tourist Bureau has come into possession of something which can travel widely and tell the story of the Kawarthas effectively.

There is a touch of romance at the start by presenting an Indian who quietly goes down to the water's edge and shoves off in his canoe, and he would be doing that in the days when Champlain first came through here. It is fitting the canoe should be at the start because it has never left our lakes and rivers.

We liked the film particularly because Mr. Roy has such a keen appreciation of good composition in a picture. That is, he gets the best out of any situation—wind-blown trees with fleecy clouds behind; roughened waters with rock-bound shores to contain them; the sun sinking to rest amid a riot of color and the reflections are cast upon still waters.

In a way the man is a genius because when he follows a fishing party the members always catch fish; not the kind which one looks upon and then tosses back to allow of maturity and growth, but large fish possessed of girth and length.

In all Fred Roy's film is a faithful and accurate presentation of all the varying moods of this remarkable outdoor country. The quiet cabin close to water's edge for those who desire solitude; the exuberance of youth as it seeks diving towers and tests its stroke and strength in regattas. It is all there and the amount of territory covered is particularly generous.

Back To The Old Plan

An Order-in-Council was passed at Ottawa to discourage the custom of one war plant raiding the personnel of another, and the ruling as published stated that it was necessary to explain in advertising for mechanics that those working in war plants elsewhere could not be engaged.

Following that order there were several advertisements which complied with the stipulation, but apparently that idea has been dropped. There appeared in Toronto papers an appeal for tool designers and mechanical draughtsmen "for highly important war work necessitating precision adaptability." In regard to the applicants it was explained:

> "Applications treated in complete confidence and interviews arranged. Excellent commencing wages are offered with progressive opportunity...Out-of-town applicants are invited to communicate immediately."

We have no particular interest in the matter apart from it being so widely divergent from the recently announced regulations enacted at Ottawa.

No Salary Attached

Acting Master-General of the Ordnance Branch of the Defence Department. That is the title attached to the office to be occupied by Victor W. Sifton of Winnipeg, who in other times would be in Winnipeg helping direct the affairs and publication of the Free Press of that city. The titular designation of his office is more impressive than the extent of the salary attached to it, for of salary Mr. Sifton receives none at all.

Mr. Sifton has been at Ottawa for weeks working with P. A. Chester who now returns to his post as manager of the Hudson Bay Co. If Defence Minister Ralston had been seeking a man of tremendous energy and sane executive ability—and doubtless he was—then he has made a wise choice. His associates in the Canadian daily newspaper field are impressed by his capacity to the extent of advancing him to the position of First Vice-President of the Canadian Press. We can guarantee that anything which comes under Mr. Sifton's hand in the war effort will be well done.

The Old System Survives

Miss Edith Johnson has been named postmaster of the city of Des Moines, Ia., and the position is worth $7,000 per year. A number of faithful politicians are annoyed but they can do little or nothing about it.

Miss Johnson is 39, good looking and intelligent. Her employer became governor of Iowa and afterward U.S. senator from the state, and his secretary went along to the big centre.

The senator was faced with the job of naming a postmaster for Des Moines and he named his secretary. And $7,000 a year is nice money in any man's language.

But what does Miss Johnson know about a post office or about the postal system? Apparently nothing at all. There would be a dozen or so in the office at Des Moines who would know all about it, but they were passed over.

We used to do things that way in Canada, but we have wisely moved on toward a better plan where qualified men already in the service are moved up to the better positions.

It is not difficult to remember the days when a vacancy in a postmastership meant that some man with a sound political record would circulate a petition around the business section, and that would be duly presented. He might have been doing anything under the sun except working in a post office, but he had been a good party man and he wanted a good reward for services rendered.

That is how Miss Johnson, 39, and good looking, comes to be postmaster of Des Moines today, and that is also why we are quite pleased that we have ceased doing things that way in Canada.

Children Not Wanted?

The population of United States and its possessions has been officially placed at 150,362,326, and that is an increase of 11,923,257 over the census returns of 1930.

The population in the territories or possessions had increased three times as fast as that in United States proper, and that return had been anticipated because the birth rate has been dropping. In the well-to-do sections of the nation's cities the decrease is sharpest, and in many homes it has reached the zero point.

And that is not a healthy condition. It is a sign of national decay and it conforms neither with the laws of God nor of nature.

Possibly we feel the same drift in our own land, and there are many reminders that children are not wanted. Looking through the classified pages of several Ontario newspapers we came upon the stipulation in the "To Let" section that a house or an apartment was available "for adults only." In other cases it was even more plainly stated: "No children."

United States has tremendous area and so has Canada. Between these two lands we account for most of the North American continent.

It is not difficult to recall the size of the families in rural areas of our province. Six, seven or eight children in a home was not unusual. It meant that as a people we were sending our own young people out into our own country, and that is the most desirable basis for population and stability.

It has changed now. Changed here and in United States as well. That is why the census figures show that natural increase in population is three times as great in U.S. possessions as it is in United States itself.

NOTE AND COMMENT

The average hen in United States lays 100 eggs per year. Not high of course, but then what does the hen get out of it?

It takes much longer, according to Hon. J. G. Gardiner, to train a soldier than it does to train labor. Hence, we suppose, the 30-day training plan.

Prison camp near Raleigh, N.C., is having trouble because the four cooks escaped during the night. But surely the average inmate would know how to boil water and burn the toast.

Constance Bennett of the movies has been divorced from her husband, the Marquise de la Folaise de la Coudraye. Must have been quite a struggle getting rid of a name like that all in one movement.

There are some Canadian papers which laid themselves wide open to reprisal when they put Mussolini's latest message on an inside page with a small heading. And we are willing to agree they were showing rare good taste.

Despatch from St. Catharines tells of a number of U.S. patrol boats going through the Welland Canal, and adds that their destination is "veiled in secrecy." And that in turn bears some resemblance to that old favorite of the police reporter of other days—"Shrouded in mystery."

PATRIOT

(By A.R.K.)

¶ When people sing God Save the King, he stands as straight as anything, up come his chest and chin; he sings as loudly as he can, to show he is a splendid man, no wobble spine in him.

¶ At times he raises up a flag, and of its freedom likes to brag, he knows its history too; and he'll make speeches now and then, about the daring of our men, the gallant things they do.

¶ He sings that song of England now, and pleasure seems to touch his brow, sings loud as loud can be; he ends up with a mighty shout, when he comes to that line about, the land that shall be free.

¶ He's well informed about the war, knows what his land is fighting for, has maps and everything; he knows each move that has been made, says that today he's not afraid, like what he was last spring.

¶ Upon his car he pastes up signs, to stiffen up the people's spines, he seems stuffed full of vim; he shakes his finger here and there, and often stops to plain declare, just how and when we'll win.

¶ But when the war bonds come for sale, he has the movements of a snail, he's such a backward gent; of loyalty he talks and sings, but when the call for money rings—he never gives a cent.

CAP and BELLS . .

By SAMUEL MARCHBANKS

TOMORROW is the festival day of Saint Cecilia, the patroness of music. Although she is honored by both the Anglican and the Roman churches there is some doubt as to whether this lady ever existed; hagidlogists, as those who study the lore of the saints are so impressively called, say that she was the wife of a Roman caled Valerian, whom she converted and with whom she was martyred, and that her singing was so beautiful that she was once visited by an angel. Until quite recently it was the custom to give concerts upon her day; by a coincidence it comes this year upon the anniversary of the beginning of the concerts which are given at the National Gallery in London at lunch-time; here the finest musicians in Great Britain play and sing for an hour each day to an enormous and enthusiastic audience. Now that London is undergoing the worst that a determined enemy can do, her people turn more and more to music for the relaxation and the increased courage which it can give. Readers may have heard reports on the radio of the use which is being made in Britain of music in factories engaged in vital war-time industries; they are equipped with large amplifying systems and work goes on to the strains of — no, decidedly not "There'll Always By An England"—but valses by Chopin, symphonies by Brahms, and the virile airs of Bach and Handel. It has been proved that this dissemination of fine music calms the nerves of the workers and actually increases production! Nor is there any nonsense about the music being non-Germanic; the symphonies of Beethoven are used to speed the wheels of British industry, and there can be no doubt that so great an apostle of liberty as Beethoven would be glad that this is so.

CANADA is receiving some unexpected immigrants, who enter the country unknown to the government and without passports! Dr. Thaddius Surber, a seventy years old naturalist, reports that the herds of moose which formerly roamed the forests of Minnesota are now crossing the border into Canada, to avoid the noise of tourist traffic. Most of Minnesota's moose are here already, he says, and we may expect the remaining 2,500 within a few years. We can only suggest that a committee be set up at once to deal with these new evacuees.

Psychologists might devote some of their time to the task of discovering what quirk it is in the human mind which makes it so hard to return a borrowed book; even the most honest person is quit capable of borrowing a book and keeping it until the owner becomes exasperated and takes steps for its recovery. Sometimes the borrower keeps the book for so long that he becomes ashamed to face the owner. A library in the New England States has had so much trouble of this kind that it recently adopted a novel plan for the recovery of its property. A barrel was placed on the library steps and a notice was placed in the local paper that anyone who wished to return a book long overdue might do so at night; no fine would be imposed and no questions would be asked. Within two weeks books to the value of $120 were returned in this way, some of them having been missing for eight years and more; the most ancient of these returning prodigals had been borrowed from the library in 1919!

REUTER'S, the famous news-gathering agency, recently made an amusing mistake, and an item appeared under their name which read thus: "My little daughter Jean, aged 131, was taking a packet of cigarettes to an airman when the raid began." The extra '1' called forth ribald comment in many London papers, and one wrote: "If the aged child now has the nerve to claim that she is the Old Etonian as well," said the Secretary of the Old Turks' Methuselah League to the reporter, "we shall know that this is a Nazi propaganda move, designed to shake the British people's unswerving confidence in their Uncle Reuter." Reuter's reputation for strictest accuracy is a byword among newspapermen, and such an opportunity as this to give them a little gentle ribbing was not to be passed up.

C & B

Perhaps the 131 years old Jean did not spring from Dr. Goebbel's fertile imagination, but another numerical error did. Recently a German short-wave broadcast in English announced that German planes had bombed Croydon so heavily that the mechanism of Big Ben, the clock on the Parliament Buildings, was upset, and that he struck thirteen! This was deepest insult to Londoners, who are very jealous of Big Ben's reputation for incorruptibility; it was also a lie, for Ben's works do not permit him to strike more than twelve. Dr. Goebbels must have been thinking about one of those cheap German clocks.

C & B

The Anglo-Saxons called November the Wind-Month, and saw it come with dread. And well they might; anyone who has tried to cope with a smoking chimney in November will appreciate their feelings. When it was still the custom to build an open fire in the centre of the principal room in the house and to trust to the smoke to find its way out of a hole in the roof the situation must have been vastly worse. The Wind-Month is here, summer has gone, and from the West come reports of snow. But we have cause to be of good cheer; we can await the coming of the spring with infinitely greater confidence than our enemies.

• The Lights that Burn in London

I WHO am known as London, have faced stern times before,
Having fought and ruled and traded for a thousand years and more.
I knew the Roman legions and the harsh voiced Danish hordes,
I heard the Saxon revels, saw blood on the Norman swords,
But though I am scarred by battle, my grim defenders vow
Never was I so stately, or so well beloved as now.

THE LIGHTS that burn and glitter, in the exile's lonely dream:
The lights of Piccadilly and those that used to gleam
Down Regent street and Kingsway may now no longer shine,
But other lights keep burning, and their splendor, too, is mine.
Seen in the work-worn faces, and glimpsed in the steadfast eyes
When little homes lie broken, and death descends from the skies.
The Bombs have shattered my churches, have torn my streets apart,
But they have not bent my spirit, and they shall not break my heart.

For my people's faith and courage, are lights of London town,
Which still would shine in legends, though my last broad bridge were down.

—GRETA BRIGGS in London Telegraph.

• The Peterborough Wolf and Anaemia

SOME FRIENDS and well wishers of Algoma are a little disturbed about the tale of a Peterborough hunter who had thought well enough of a deer's liver to out it out and strap it to his (the hunter's) back. The agitation arises from a fear expressed eloquently by the Globe and Mail and also the Toronto Star, that when a wolf jumped on the liver to make off with it that the circumstances might jeopardize the $100 this paper should have,—the same $100 it offered 16 years ago for proof of a hostile wolk attack. Well wishers may be interested in knowing that there has yet been no search in this office to find out if we still have the $100.

The Peterborough hunter was interviewed by Editor Art Kennedy of the Examiner, and thus the whole affair may deserve a little suspicion. At any rate Old Sam Martin got an idea out of it.

"Why not," says he, "have the Algoma Wolf Club boys all tie livers on their backs and thus avoid the trouble and expense of having to stumble over rocks, fallen trees and rough stuff to meet up with wolves?" Also as Sam pointed out it would not be necessary in future to drag carcasses of dead horses to strategic points for wolf bait.

As to the $100, about which we are not worrying up to now, the best judgment dictates that when located it will be necessary for Peterborough wolves to show more vigor than merely to grab a liver off a man's back when he isn't looking. Perhaps they are the "decadent" species the hunters convention in Toronto resoluted about,—the kind the resolution said were so anaemic that no bounty should be paid on them. Of course liver is good for that trouble. Is it possible Peterborough needs a course of Vitamin B1?—Sault Ste. Marie Star.

To The Editor

TRAPS FOR CHILDREN

Editor Examiner:

Sir,—With the very best of intentions the city council has tried for four or five years to put some form and force into a parking bylaw, and just what they have succeeded in doing is more than I know. I don't think the bylaw as it stands and also its enforcement are responsible for the fact that the number of accidents to children has been fortunately very slight.

I should like to make this proposal, even if no one in authority pays any attention to it. We all see lines of cars parked in public places, residential places, either on one side of a street or both. To me they seem to be traffic traps for children who in spite of all the training and warning they get at home cannot appreciate the constant necessity of looking before they walk or run from behind parked cars into the road.

I am not suggesting that this kind of parking be prohibited. There is no use in asking for that, but there should be a local law, and parents should demand it, requiring car and truck drivers not to exceed ten miles an hour on such streets. That would give the driver a better chance to stop, and would also give children a chance, the children and their homes and all that each of them means to the state.

When you see the most reckless speeding up to 35 and 40 miles an hour along streets lined with cars parked in parallel, you wonder about the wisdom of the whole community that permits it.

HIS FACE BLANCHED

A German airman recently shot down was taken to an officers' mess to await escort.

He was not the arrogant, gutter-snipe type of baby-killer, but he was supremely confident.

His information was that the cream of the British army was lost in Flanders, that Germany commanded the air over Britain, and that our people were rioting every day in demands for peace at any price.

As he learned the true news his face blanched, and he collapsed. —London Daily Express.

Sure Sign

A Yorkshire mill-hand charged with having set fire to a large hayrick, was defended on the ground that he was not altogether responsible for his actions. One of the witnesses, a typical Yorkshireman, declared that the prisoner was "wrang in his head."

"Can you mention any occasion on which the prisoner behaved in a manner to warrant your statement?" he was asked.

"Yes," answered the witness. "Ah mind once he got hauf a crown too much for his wages, an'—"

"Well?" said counsel, as the witness hesitated.

"He took it back to t'manager!"

A Bible Message For Today . . . .

Belshazzar the king made a great feast to a thousand of his lords, and drank wine before the thousand.... They drank wine, and praised the gods of gold, and of silver, of brass, of iron, of wood, and of stone. In the same hour came forth fingers of a man's hand, and wrote over against the candlestick upon the plaster of the wall of the king's palace: and the king saw the part of the hand that wrote. Then the king's countenance was changed, and his thoughts troubled him, so that the joints of his loins were loosed, and his knees smote one against another....

TORONTO LEAFS SHOWING GOOD FORM UNDER DAY'S COACHING

Hap Day Making Fine Job Coach Business

TORONTO, Nov. 21 — (CP). — For a fellow who claims he's only trying to make the team himself, Clarence (Hap) Day is doing all right in his first try at coaching. His Toronto Leafs are leading the National Hockey League, and on his record to date he looks like the coach of the year.

The Leafs lost their first game to New York Rangers and then won four straight, beating Detroit, Canadiens twice and Boston. One of the last to start pre-season training, the team seems to have been the first to hit its stride.

Day, a defenceman and league linesman before he embarked on a tutoring career, lays claim to no new ideas. He does emphasize two-way hockey, however, and his team is skating faster, perhaps, than any other club.

The players are also combining, with the result there has been a remarkable distribution of scoring power. All but three are listed in the scoring records, and one of these, Bob Davidson, is on the injured list.

Gordie Drillon and Syl Apps have six points each; Nick Metz, Wally Stanowski, and Hank Goldup four each, and Pete Langelle and Billy (The Kid) Taylor three each.

40 Points Each.

Aggregate points of the 13 players reaches 40. An average of eight points for each of the five games played.

These factors, along with the good work of the younger members of the team, have helped Day to a good start. Stanowski, Taylor, Goldup and Langelle are playing effective hockey. Day, however, doesn't take credit for the work of these sophomores.

But he'll have to accept credit for one thing—the juggling of his lines. When Davidson hurt his knee and disrupted the team's most effective scoring unit, Day brought in Nick Metz to play with Aps and Drillon.

This line has worked so well, Davidson is expected to have trouble regaining his old berth. Metz, with his speed and ability to score, has taken a lot of opposition pressure from the starry Apps and the high-scoring Drillon.

When the shift was made Taylor and Don Metz were left without a left-wing, so Day took the veteran Schriner and plunked him alongside of these youngsters. The team work of the cagey Schriner and the shifty Taylor has been a feature of recent games.

Day isn't even thinking of the Stanley Cup so early in the season, but it goes without saying that he would like to present it to his boss, Conn Smythe, some time next spring. Then he would be the coach of the year.

Turkey Dinner

CANTON, O., Nov. 21—(AP). — Eighty-five child refugees from Britain enjoyed their first Thanksgiving dinner last night. H. W. Hoover, president of the Hoover Company, was host at the feast of turkey and trimmings. The refugees are children of Hoover Company employees working in a subsidiary factory near London.

Badminton Club Elects Officer

CAMPBELLFORD, Nov. 21. — (ENS).—The local Badminton Club which began its second year this fall when it was announced a room in the old high school building would be made available to them, have elected officers for the current year. During the meeting the retiring president, Bud Jewell, drew attention to the improved facilities for playing provided by the larger room which now made it possible for them to have two courts and thus cut down on the waiting period caused by the larger membership. Ernest Sloggett presided during the election of officers which resulted in Bill Burgess being voted president; Miss H. Parker, vice-president, Miss Helen Partridge, secretary, Archie Crozier, treasurer, Mrs. W. A. Kingston, Miss Eleanor Ferris, Mrs. J. D. Mills, Mrs. E. Cloggett, Mrs. D. Meyers, Mrs. J. Fink, and Miss Viola Couch were placed on the social committee. The duties of coach and captain were awarded to Bud Jewell and George Ralph, two of the most experienced members of the club.

More Power to Em!

"Never, in the field of human conflict was so much owed by so many to so few."

Three Canadian fighter squadrons already in the thick of it. The Royal Canadian Air Force, with 25,000 officers and men to take up the task so gallantly begun.....6,000 in training under the Commonwealth Plan—2,000 more to be enlisted almost at once.

Faster...faster the wheels of industry turn to provide the machines so urgently needed now. Orders for aircraft, totalling $100,000,000 already placed. More coming.....

The price of freedom comes high.....in lives, in personal sacrifice.....in hard cold dollars. Canadians gladly pay that price.

At this proud hour it is the plain duty of every working Canadian to save, that he may be prepared to lend his savings to the nation when the call for money comes. For come it will if Canada is to play her part worthily in this struggle for freedom and human decency.

Build up your savings now.....Keep at it.

SPORTS – DAY BY DAY

By FRED D. CRAIG

There will be plenty of action in the Y.W.C.A. gymnasium Friday night when the Ladies' Basketball League, one of the most successful girls' sport organizations in the city will open its long schedule with a double-header that will serve to introduce four of the strongest clubs in this well-balanced league. In the opening half of the twin bill Quaker Aces, a very strong team are scheduled to clash with the Westclox, the latter organization expecting a better season than a year ago. Two old rivals, the Y.W.C.A. Gym and St. John's are the contending teams in the second game. Both contests promise to be full of interest. The clubs are stronger, according to advance reports, than in any previous year, and they are all looking forward to a good season. Some of the clubs will be decked out in smart new uniforms and everything points to a memorable campaign.

* * * * * *

Speaking of basketball the P.C.I. senior cage squad has commenced practice this week for the interscholastic season that is coming up. Like the football club the basketeers have lost a number of players since last season and in addition the team will be without the services of Eric Taylor who was injured in a car accident several weeks ago and will be missed. However, Coach Bamforth is hopeful of rounding up a senior team that will put up a determined battle for group honors. Chief opposition this season looks to be the Bowmanville High outfit which with McIlveen, Colville, Slemon and Company still available will trot out a formidable cage machine. The situation so far as junior and girls' basketball is concerned is a bit hazy at present and there may be some difficulty in organizing the group.

* * * * * *

The fact that although Canada is at war the National Hockey League has turned up this season with a full quota of players and no enlistments since last year had drawn some comment from that well known sport commentator Joe Williams who has the following to say in the New York World Telegram: "Baseball owners are resigned to the fact that a certain percentage of their stars will not be available for full time, if any duty next season. Draft eligibles will simply march off to camp and that will be that. No efforts will be made to obtain deferred service. This being so, it strikes us as strange, if not inconsistent, that hockey will probably not lose a single star this season. Practically all hockey players come from Canada. If our understanding is correct, any hockey star who has served a month's militia hitch has done his duty for the time being. We are told all the stars have done this and will be on hand when the ice games start. All of which is fine for the hockey owners, much finer than it threatens to be for the baseball owners. What makes this seem strange to us is that Canada is actually at war and America is never going to war. Anyway, it's too delicate a subject for us to rassle with at length. We just can't help wondering about it, that's all."

A Merited Tribute

It is to be imagined there will be unanimity at the annual meeting of the Ontario Hockey Association Saturday over the proposal to recognize the services rendered hockey by James T. Sutherland of Kingston and the late Sheriff Paxton of Whitby. The trophy awarded the junior B winners is henceforth to be called the Sutherland Cup and the Association's intermediate B trophy will be known as the Paxton Cup, if the meeting approves. And it undoubtedly will. Jim Sutherland, past president and life member has been one of the fathers of the O.H.A., his connection with the organization dating back more years than he likes to recall. The late Sheriff Paxton was treasurer of the organization for a long period and is remembered by old timers as a faithful worker for hockey in Ontario. It is fitting that the names of these two fine friends of a fine game should be kept before the hockey public.

* * * * * *

Peterborough's connection with Jim Sutherland in the old days recalls a series of defeats which local teams sustained at the hands of Sutherland-managed clubs. We never did have much luck playing Kingston teams at that period, particularly in the junior series, when the Frontenacs coached by James T. were one of the strongest clubs ever to perform in the 'teen age division. The Petes were thrown against the powerful Sutherland machine in a number of seasons and candor compels the admission that the honors all went to Kingston. That Frontenac club, sparked by the late Scotty Davidson, was tough. They won their games so far away that Kingston supporters complained that they could not get a bet up and that the Frontenacs killed all their home gates by winning by a city block away from home. But under Sutherland's leadership they kept piling up the scores in spite of the protests.

* * * * * *

Being an iron man in baseball is not a particularly easy task. The big league records show that in the season recently ended only nine players, seven of them in the American League, succeeded in getting into every game their clubs played during the campaign. The seven American Leaguers to go through the long schedule without missing a game were Babe Dahlgren and Joe Gordon of the Yanks, Rudy York of the Tigers, Joe Kuhel, White Sox, Dick Siebert, Athletics, Lou Beaudreau, Cleveland Indians and George Case of the Senators while the only two National Leaguers who never failed to answer roll call were Frank McCormick of the Cincinnati Reds and Arky Vaughan of the Pirates. It is getting to be a habit with McCormick who has not been out of a game for three consecutive years. Strangely enough in view of the old baseball saying that outfielders should pay their way into the park, Case is the only gardener among the nine 1940 iron men.

* * * * * *

The expectation that Group Captain T. A. Lawrence would soon be back at Trenton has been verified by the announcement from Ottawa that the officer who has been on duty at R.C.A.F. headquarters at Ottawa has been appointed as commanding officer at Trenton. That should be good news for hockey fans. Group Captain Lawrence when at Trenton before was a hockey enthusiast to the nth degree and the Fliers team had its greatest seasons at that time. Undoubtedly his return to Trenton as officer commanding will mean that the R.C.A.F. will have a team in the O.H.A. this season. At least nothing will be thrown in the way of the Fliers' participation in organized hockey as Group Captain Lawrence is a firm believer in the value of sport. Let us hope the Airmen will line up in this group with a fighting squad.

Walt Gerow who played first base for the Petes in the Inter-City Major Loop this past season until he enlisted for overseas is going great guns as a member of the 3-47 Battery hockey team in the Van Horne series at Kingston. Walt has with him on the ace line of the artillery team Leary and Currie, the two wings who played with him in Napanee and in a game the other night the line clicked for three goals with Gerow sniping two of them. Freddie McGuire, former Belleville player, is also with the 3-47 team. Incidentally the Belleville intermediates have lost a player they were counting on for this season in the person of Pete Morgan. The latter who formerly played in Belleville has been figurin hockey at Coniston for several years but came back to his old home town a month ago, apparently to stay. Now he has hit the trail for Northern Ontario again.

The Oshawa G-Men have served notice on all interested parties that they do not propose to be the doormats of the senior O.H.A. group any longer. Winning their second game in a row last night Oshawa defeated the Marlboros in overtime at Toronto by 4 goals to 3, and thereby pulled themselves out of the basement. Incidentally they also hauled the Dukes down into second place in the group race. The senior division is a wide open affair and should produce heaps of hectic hockey before they decide which team is to be eliminated from the playoffs.

It is a busy Thursday night for the N.H.L. with three games on the cards. Toronto Maple Leafs play the Amerks in New York and should waltz home as the Amerks will be without their injured goalie Earl Robertson. Canadiens meet Red Wings in Detroit. You can mark that down for Jack Adams' team. Boston Bruins are guests at Chicago. The Bruins have to start winning sometime and we think that tonight will be the time.

NEW YORK, Nov. 21 (AP).—Everybody is keeping quiet with fingers crossed, but the sale of Boston Bees may be accomplished before the major league meetings which are three weeks away....The buyers will not be the persons whose names have been given publicity in that connection, but Bob Quinn is going to remain at the helm and may even be the organizer of the syndicate.

Joe Cooper will handle both games, with Sybil Ecobichon timer and scorer.

On Monday evening at 7 p.m. Quaker Cubs play the new Jr. "Y" Club entry to round out the three games of the week.

ST. CATHARINES AND OSHAWA CAPTURE SENIOR O. H. A. GAMES

Oshawa Shades Marlboros 4-3, Overtime

TORONTO, Nov. 21 — (CP). — Toronto Marlboros today aren't boasting of their home-ice record in the still-young Senior Ontario Hockey Association. A glance at their record in games away from home is more cheerful—to the Marlies.

Raring to take over the league leadership from Hamilton Tigers, Marlboros had the lowly Oshawa club as guests last night and muffed their chances with a 4-3 overtime loss. It was their second loss in three tries on their own ice, the other game ending in a deadlock.

The loss still left Toronto in the runner-up spot, one point behind Hamilton and one point up on the idle Niagara Falls team. The other game on the two-match program saw St. Catharines whip the cellar-placed London Streamliners 4-1 at London.

Don Dunbar sent Toronto into the lead two minutes after the game opened on a pass from George McNamara and that ended the first period scoring.

Regina Tisdall made at 1-1 early in the second period on a neat passing play with oCoper and Durling. Danny Daniels made it 2-1 for Oshawa on a pass from Ritchie, and Kirby evened matters before the period ended with Ezeard and George McNamara getting assists.

Into the Lead.

Ebby Edmison shot the visitors in front at 14:05 of the third period and McNamara, playing his first game of the season with Marlboros, deadlocked the count at 17:13. Johnny Thompson fired the overtime clincher.

Roy Heximer paced the St. Catharines attack with two goals—one each in the second and third periods—and an assist. Rudy Pilous scored the first St. Catharines goal early in the first period on a combination play with Pete Backor and George Hastle scored the other with Heximer assisting.

The London goal came in the final period when Bobby Hales netted on a pass from George Legg.

Coach Jerry Laflamme took Tommy Dunn out of the London nets in the final minute of play and the Londoners swarmed around Ran Forder in the St. Catharines goal but couldn't score. Heximer broke from a ganging attack and made it 4-1 with only one second to play.

American And Ranger Fracas Costs Four Men

(By the Canadian Press.)

From a distance, one can almost picture Red Dutton brushing off the blackboard in the New York Americans' dressing room. If things keep up, Red might need his famous old sign: "Keep Punching, Boys!"

The Americans' hated city rivals, the Rangers, gave the Duttoneers a 3-2 beating Tuesday night, and Wednesday the doctors gave Red an even worse mauling by telling him he had lost Goalie Earl Robertson for one game at least, and Defenceman Pete Slobodian for a month.

The losses hit Dutton just when he needed the players most—on the eve of the season's first engagement against the happy warriors of Happy Day, whose Toronto Maple Leafs are flying high in front of the National Hockey League. They play at New York tonight in one part of the three-game program

The Ranger-Americans clash was anything but a tea party Robertson suffered a bruised shoulder and Slobodian a fractured cheekbone, while the Rangers' Dutch Hiller had a bad ankle cut and Art Coulter a fractured shoulder bone. Coulter also will be out of the game for a month.

Calls Out Rookie

In the crisis, Dutton had to call on a raw rookie to fill Robertson's place. Charlie Rayner, who starred with Kenora's amateur Thistles last season, will be brought up from Eddie Shore's Springfield club, and Hooley Smith will fill out the defence.

The Leafs are rolling on four straight victories, with a one-point edge on the surprising Detroit Red Wings who are at home to Montreal Canadiens tonight, and a two-point edge on Chicago Black Hawks, who entertain Boston Bruins.

The Bruins and Canadiens still are the league's only winless club. Their defences have been reeling in the early games, and Boston could not protect a 4-2 lead against the Red Wings in the third period Tuesday night. Their third-period wilting in two straight games, including a 4-2 loss to Toronto Sunday night, indicates the Bruin powerhouse hasn't yet the staying power and late speed of the lighter clubs.

The Canadiens will have big Jack Portland in uniform tonight to aid their back door. Purchased from Chicago last week, Portland's experience may give Bert Gardiner in the Canadien goal some greater measure of protection

Certain it is that he needs it. The opposition has fired 18 goals against the Canadiens in five games.

Canadiens Buy Janke

MONTREAL, Nov. 21 — (CP). — Officials of Montreal Canadiens of the National Hockey League announced Wednesday that they have acquired Bert Janke, 22-year-old defenceman of Montreal Royals in the Quebec Senior Hockey League, from Detroit Red Wings' reserve list at the waiver price of approximately $5,000.

Janke is expected to sign a contract with Canadiens and see action Saturday night in their game here against New York Americans.

Hornets Beaten 2-1 By Indians; Barons Win 4-3

(By the Canadian Press.)

Early as the season is, Springfield Indians and Cleveland Barons already are threatening to stage runaway races in their respective divisions in the American Hockey League.

Both the Barons and the Indians have tasted only one defeat. Springfield is leading the Eastern Section with a record of five victories and three draws in nine starts, while Cleveland has won six of their seven games in the Western Section.

Both clubs enhanced their records in last night's games. The Indians defeated Pittsburg, 2-1, while the Barons turned in a 4-3 victory over New Haven. In the only other game, Hershey played a 5-5 tie with Philadelphia.

Cleveland went into overtime at noon to defeat at New Haven, second place club in the Eastern Section Jake Milford's goal nine seconds after the start of the extra session broke a 3-3 deadlock and gave them the victory.

Eagles Perk Up

Cleveland had run up a 3-1 lead in the first period on goals by Desilets, Adolph and Summerhill against one by Peggy O'Neil of New Haven. The Eagles got goals from O'Neil in the second period and Mancuso in the third, however, to force the tie at the end of regulation time.

At Pittsburgh meanwhile, the visiting Springfield squad took a one-goal lead in the second period when Len Halldorson scored on a pass from Lloyd Finkbeiner. Freddie Thurier made it 2-0 unassisted in the third period, while Eddie Convey averted a shut-out for the Hornets with only two seconds of play remaining.

Hershey Bears moved into undisputed possession of second place in the Western Section by coming from behind at Philadelphia to force a tie with the Ramblers, tied for last place in the Eastern Section. The Bears rammed in two goals in the second period, and two more in third to overcome their 3-1 first period deficit.

Purcell Scores Four Victories

EDMONTON, Nov. 21 — (CP).—Jack Purcell of Toronto, Canadian professional badminton champion, scored four victories at the Edmonton Club last night, in exhibition games arranged by the Canadian Badminton Association to aid the Canadian Red Cross Society.

Purcell's stiffest struggle came in a singles match with George Roberts of Edmonton, a former Alberta champion. After Purcell took the first game 15-8, Roberts came back to lead 5-0 and 11-8 in the second before the professional won 15-11.

Purcell, bothered somewhat by an old leg injury, paired with Bill Delf to defeat Jack Wallis, Edmonton Club professional, and Harry Buker 15-12, 15-7. Then with Wallis as his partner, Purcell hung up his third triumph 15-5, 15-4 over Buker and Roberts.

In the mixed doubles, Purcell and Barbara Mitchell, Alberta singles champion, defeated Lyle Hoar and Louis Marshall, 15-10, 15-6.

Toronto's Fate Comes Before League

TORONTO, Nov. 21.—The fate of Toronto's professional baseball future may be decided next Monday at Rochester, when the International Baseball League Board of Governors hold their annual meeting.

At Monday's meeting, the problems confronting the Toronto Baseball Club will quite likely be given top billing on the agenda.

The Toronto club, it became known recently, will ask for a larger share of Sunday "road gates" to help atone for their inability to play Sunday baseball in Toronto. League officials are expected to decide on the question Monday.

The meeting, which will get under way at 10.30 a.m. Monday at the Powers Hotel in Rochester, has only routine business and the financial statement to consider, besides the Toronto case. Senator Salter Hayden, K.C., president of the Toronto club, and probably Secretary-Treasurer Arthur Leman, will represent the Maple Leafs.

Explosion Wrecks Third Plant In One Week

An unexplained explosion, the third in a week in a plant of the American Cyanamid and Chemical Corporation, caused this damage to one large building at the corporation's Bridgeville, Pa., works, injuring two men. Hardly a window remains. The plant was one employing the catalytic oxidation of naphthalene process to manufacture phthalic anhydride, a raw material used in chemicals, especially for synthetic resins. The plant manager said the corporation did not have national defence contracts. Explosions at the company's plants in Bound Brook, N.J., and near New Castle, Pa., took four lives.

Over 140 Attend Millbrook Novel Dinner

MILLBROOK, Nov. 21—(ENS).—Over one hundred and forty guests were served at the "Plunkett dinner," held in the basement of St. Andrew's Church, on Thursday, at 6.30 p.m., under the auspices of the Women's Association.

To secure this popular event, it had been necessary to book the company last June, and so general was the satisfaction expressed with the four-course meal, with its almost too abundant menu beautifully cooked and served, that the W.A., through its president, Mrs. P. I. Bentley, made arrangements for a return visit in October, 1941.

Those awarded prizes, at the conclusion of the moving pictures, in color, shower for a half hour following the dinner, included: 1, The president of the hostess society, by virtue of her office, presented with a quart jar of fine coffee; 2, The minister, Rev. A. L. Sisco, also by virtue of his office, a similar quantity of fine tea; 3, Mrs. Gordon Muspratt, the most recent bride present; 4, Mrs. J. McKnight, who had sold the most tickets for the dinner (40); 5, Mrs. Edgar Fallis, the guest present whose birthday fell in the current month; 6, Mrs. H. J. Armstrong, whose wedding anniversary, November 27, came nearest to the date of the dinner; 7, Mrs. H. M. Trick, the mother with the largest family (7) among the guests of the evening; 8, Miss Dorothy Clydesdale, the guest who had come the longest distance to the banquet; 9, Miss Crystal Stewart, Reg.N., who responded to the call for the "bachelor lady" in attendance; 10, Mrs. M. Sutton, the guest most recently a grandmother—in her case, however, a great-grandmother; 11, Mrs. J. Stewart, the guest with the largest number of grandchildren; 12, Mr. T. G. McPherson, who came forward on the request, "Anyone Scotch present?"; 13, C. B. Sutton, the bachelor among the guests; 14, Connie Stinson, who was given the last parcel on the table.

The event was in charge of Messrs. S. E. Hunt and Donald McDonald, both of Toronto; Mr. Haldane Plunkett, who is the head of the company, was not present on Thursday evening. Last year 200 dinners were served in Ontario, and church societies, of various denominations, enriched their coffers to the extent of $12,000 through this popular means of raising money.

Lodge Euchre

Carmel L.O.L. No. 921, held a progressive euchre in aid of Red Cross funds in the Orange Hall on Tuesday evening, with seven tables in use for play, and an enjoyable time spent.

Prizes went to Miss Mina Gibson, who received a pyrex dish, and to Delbert Olan, who was given a pack of cards, these two holding the high score for lady and gentleman, respectively. J. Elmer took the consolation, and the prize for the one having the lucky chair went to Ronald Gibson.

The service of lunch, and a social time completed an enjoyable evening.

Afternoon Tea

Mrs. A. Raeburn Gibson was hostess at the Manse on Friday from three to six o'clock for an enjoyable afternoon tea; Mrs. H. A. Kerr and members of her group of the Ladies' Aid Society of Grace Presbyterian Church, being associate hostesses with the minister's wife, for the event.

Unfortunately the weather conditions, with the first continuous snow storm of the season, prevented many from attending, but under the circumstances, the number of guests was satisfactory, coming as they did from the three churches of the community.

Mrs. Gibson receiving the incoming guests, and Miss Agnes Johnston acted as cashier. In the tea room, Mrs. A. S. Hall and Mrs. Joseph Lancashire poured tea at a table that was attractive with lace cloth, crystal bowl of late Fall blossoms on the central reflector, and four tall tapers burning in silver holders. Assistants in tea room were Mrs. V. R. Hunter, Miss Vanita Ingram, Miss Mary Eakins, Mrs. Alex Miller, Mrs. D. L. Armstrong, and the group convener, Mrs. H. A. Kerr.

Approximately $20 was realized from the event, in spite of the handicap which the weather proved, especially for those who would like to have come in from the country.

Get Year In Jail For Not Registering

Four of eight divinity students from the Union Theological Seminary in New York, who received one year jail sentences for refusing to register for selective military service, are pictured in the "black maria" after hearing their sentences. Although offered suspended sentence if they changed their minds and agreed to registration, the students rejected the compromise.

9 Have Near Call As Threshing Mill Plunges Through Barn Floor

JANETVILLE, Nov. 21—(ENS).—That miracles still happen was amply proved on Saturday evening when eight or more men narrowly escaped being crushed to death.

Threshing operations had just been completed on the farm of Allan Suggitt, west of Janetville, and the men, eight on one side and one on the other, were in the act of pushing the separator toward the door when without a moment's warning the machine crashed through the barn floor, pinning the men underneath.

Fortunately one end was caught and held up enough that the men were not crushed, and were able to make their escape as soon as they caught their breath and the dust had cleared a little.

The man on the opposite side found himself sitting straddled the rear wheel and hanging on with a death-like grip.

Little Laverne, nine-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. Suggitt, had the narrowest escape. Verne was helping by pushing the front wheel, and after the crash his hat was found pinned between the machine and a beam.

Another fortunate angle to the affair was that Mr. Suggitt, not ten minutes before, had turned out 15 head of young cattle, which had been directly underneath.

Richard Suggitt, Sr., who was standing on the opposite threshing floor, in describing the accident, said that "one moment the men were pushing on the machine and the next moment there was a terrific crash and there was nothing to be seen but a cloud of dust.

The outfit, which belongs to A. Bailey of Blackstock, was left as it was over Sunday, during which time it was visited by people from miles around who congratulated the men on their escape, and discussed ways and means of extricating the machine, which was not thought to be badly broken.

Young People Hold Rally At Brighton

After the supper a splendid program was enjoyed. Miss Eva Weir had charge of the worship period. The meeting opened with a sing-song of familiar hymns. A vocal solo by Miss Helen Black; Miss Bessie Grant read the Scripture lesson and the topic 'The Touch of the Master's Hand,' given by Miss Eva Weir, was much enjoyed.

The guest speaker of the evening was Rev. A. Raeburn Gibson of Millbrook, gave a very inspiring address, "Wings Above the Church," after which the benediction was pronounced.

Do You Suffer From Headaches?

It is hard to struggle along with a head that aches and pains all the time.

A headache need not be an illness in itself, but it may be a warning symptom that there is intestinal sluggishness within.

To help overcome the cause of headache it is necessary to eliminate the waste matter from the system. Burdock Blood Bitters helps to remove the cause of headaches by regulating the digestive and biliary organs, neutralizing acidity, regulating the constipated bowels and toning up the sluggish liver, and when this has been accomplished the headaches should disappear.

Britain Cancels Offer To India Of Greater Power

LONDON, Nov. 21—(CP) Britain withdrew today her offer to give India's political leaders greater voice in the Executive Council and on the war effort, because the offer of last August 8 to give India "free and equal" partnership in the British Commonwealth of Nations failed to gain "sufficient representative support."

The Marquess of Linlithgow, Viceroy of India, declared "we note with regret" that India's "major political parties are not in present circumstances prepared to take advantage" of the proposal.

(The offer was announced in the House of Commons and in India in an appeal to India's millions to aid in the Empire's fight against the Axis powers).

He said Britain "still is prepared to give effect to them (proposals looking toward eventual Dominion status) as soon as "it is convinced that a sufficient degree of representative support is forthcoming."

"But as that degree of support has evidently not yet manifested itself," the Viceroy's statement added, "His Majesty's Government have decided that I should not be justified in expansion of my Executive Council, or establishment of a War Advisory Council at the present moment.

"I do not wish to conceal from you the deep disappointment I feel at this failure to secure within the framework of a constitution due expression of the ultimate essential unity in which the hopes and labors of so many of us were founded and on which must depend the future position and influence of India in time to come."

COL. CRUTCHLEY DEAD

ductive capacity of this great Dominion," he added.

The Chief Items

These were among the major items mentioned by the munitions minister:—

Appointment of a wartime requirements board, headed by H. R. MacMillan of Vancouver, also timber controller, to see that war needs are given priority over all other needs and minimize disturbance to the Canadian economy.

Completion of arrangements with the United Kingdom for the building in St. Lawrence River and Pacific coast yards of 18 large merchant ships for Britain.

Maintenance of war industry profits at levels "much lower than in peacetime."

Reorganization of Canadian aircraft production on production-line basis. The government also is studying the possibility of making airplane engines in Canada.

Automotive orders now on hand to keep Canada's automotive industry at maximum production up to September, 1941, the rate soon to reach 600 units a day.

Expansion of explosives and shell plants so production will be at least 2,000,000 shells a month.

Arrangements made to produce the new Anglo-American tank "in a very substantial way."

Practically every type of gun used in this war to be produced in Canada within short time.

Contracts Increase.

The minister reported that the letting of war contracts had increased from 1,910 per month in the first quarter this year to 7,500 a month in the third quarter, with the result that at November 11 Canadian orders had been placed totalling $540,000,000 and British orders totalling $309,000,000.

Exports to the United Kingdom for the first nine months of this year totalled $380,817,000, compared to $242,725,000 a year ago, an increase of 56 per cent.

The Government's system of financing plants where this could not be done by private industry had resulted in $255,000,000 being invested in production premises and production machinery, he said. Of this sum about 30 per cent. was on behalf of the Canadian Government, the rest for the British Government.

While some members of Parliament had raised the question of the distribution of war orders by provinces, Mr. Howe emphasized that the question of distribution was secondary to efficient production and ample Hydro-Electric power was essential to low-cost production. Large blocks of surplus power were available only in Quebec and Ontario.

Three Reasons Why.

Mr. Howe gave three major reasons for the setting up of wholly-owned Government companies to co-ordinate and administer industry and obtain supplies:

"(1) The opportunity it gave of getting men of known organizing, construction and production ability to assist us in our war effort.

"(2) The opportunity it gave of decentralizing, with all the attending advantages that accrue from decentralization in an operation such as this.

"(3) It has been proven that the corporate method of administration has been successful in the management of industries and business men understand such administration."

T. L. Church, Conservative-Toronto Broadview, said the government had given the House no information regarding the war effort, despite the lengthy reports of some cabinet ministers. The government apparently believed that the pen was mightier than the sword.

The government talked of 1943 and 1945. He wanted to know what the situation was at the moment.

The series of weekly radio talks entitled "Let's face the facts," had dealt with half-truths, not fact. He also criticized the large proportion of Americans invited to speak on that series.

(The series is arranged by G. H. Lash, director of public information, and broadcast on Sunday evenings over a national network of the Canadian Broadcasting Corporation.)

Not Enough to the Farmer

W. F. Rickard (Lib. Durham) said that while Ontario farmers were not getting enough for their produce, they were getting more under the present government than under the last Conservative government.

He was glad to see labor getting a better deal in industry's wartime activity, but the farmer also was entitled to a fair return.

Hundreds of farmers were leaving their farms to take jobs in industry where they would make as much in two weeks as in three or four months on the farm.

There was a surplus of many farm products now but if the present situation continued, there would be no surplus. There might even be a shortage.

Mr. Rickard was not at all satisfied with the bacon price established in Agriculture Minister Gardiner's new agreement with the United Kingdom but if it was to be a stable all-year price it might not be so bad.

With The Engineers

Sapper Eddie Cairns is another of the south-end crowd who is now on active service. He is the son of Mr. and Mrs. J. Cairns, 275 Prince Street, and is serving with the 3rd Field Park Company, Royal Canadian Engineers.

Warsaw Girls Organize Club

WARSAW, Nov. 21—(ENS). — A group of local girls met at the home of Mrs. George Weller on Saturday afternoon, organized for the project "The Club Girl on Guard" sponsored by the Department of Agriculture, the Womens Institute Branch.

The following officers were elected: Mrs. George Weller, leader; Mrs. H. G. Digweed, assistant leader; Miss Lois Clysdale, president; Miss Lenore McIlvena, secretary-treasurer; Mrs. Digweed, press secretary.

The girls chose the name "Warsaw Homemakers' Club" for their enterprise, and the meetings will be held weekly at the home of the leader. Mrs. Weller spoke on Good Food, Clean Habits, and Posture.

The meeting closed with the singing of "God Save the King."

down the western slopes of that besieged Italian base.

On the southernmost front, near the sea, the only place where the Italian invaders remain on Greek soil, successful progress was reported without details.

The forceful Greek counter-offensive in the centre, along the only road in that region, was declared to have followed the virtual cessation of Italian air bombardment which previously had slowed the Greek advance.

The Greek command said the Italians bombed two cities in Epirus and Thessaly yesterday, killing a few persons, but that was all. The Greeks' own aviation was asserted to have bombed and strafed the retreating Italians and to have attacked the airdrome at Argyrocastro, deep in southern Albania.

British Royal Air Forces which are aiding the Greeks reported that they alone had shot down 11 Italian planes in 24 hours.

(It was reported in the Yugoslav border town of Bitolj that British planes also bombarded Koritza while Greek field guns maintained a terrible fire into the town and that the Italians appeared ready to abandon the place.)

The Greek spokesman also said the Italians were having difficulties with the conquered Albanians. A battalion of Albanians in the Italian central forces revolted and had to be disarmed, he said.

BLUE TICKETS.

The number of blue tickets noticed on parked cars in the downtown area these days suggests that busy days are ahead for the local traffic court. Illegal parking has been on the increase and the tickets are a gentle reminder that there is a bylaw covering the matter.

FRANK OLDFIELD SINGS

Frank Oldfield, baritone, was guest artist at the 22nd annual E.I.C. dinner held at the Kawartha Club Wednesday evening. He delighted the 90 men present with many of the current patriotic songs, including the song "Let's All Stick Together," and the "Handsome Territorial."

THE USUAL COMPLAINT.

Mayor Hamilton voiced a complaint at the meeting of the Police Commission Wednesday over the size of the automobile repair bills and gasoline bills of the police department. "It seems to me they use a tremendous amount of gas," commented the Mayor. "There's nothing we can do but pay them." Judge Smoke remarked, and the bills were ordered paid.

A NICE GESTURE

Usually the local branch of the Engineering Institute of Canada provides a speaker who gives an address on an engineering topic for the benefit of the members, but at the annual dinner last night, they turned the meeting over to the War Saving Committee almost throughout, as a gesture of patriotism. Alex Sollitt and Gordon S. Matthews, both of whom have done valuable work on the campaign, were guests.

WELL LOOKED AFTER.

Attorney-General Gordon Conant's home county, Ontario, is well looked after in the matter of provincial police and traffic officers. There are six in the county: W. M. Clark, Oshawa; James Sutherland, Whitby; Arthur Runciman, Pickering; A. McDonald and R. Waude, working out of Whitby North and George Yuile at Beaverton.

GOT FULL QUOTA.

Reporting that deer and bear were quite numerous in their hunting area, members of the Eagle Lake Hunt Club returned home on Monday with their full quota of six fine deer. The party consisted of Peter Nicholls and his two sons, Theodore and Gratton Nicholls, Wilford Nicholls, Everett Nicholls and Howard Pearson.

CONSCIENTIOUS OBJECTORS.

The National War Services Board for Division "C" has authorized His Honor Judge Smoke to determine whether certain named persons, residing in the county, are entitled to the postponement of their military training indefinitely on the ground that they are "conscientious objectors." It is understood the hearings will be in camera.

FIFTH COLUMN?

For some reason, a rumor was circulated in Peterborough last night to the effect that the tickets for the "Smash Hitler Night," at the three theatres, had all been sold, and that those who wished to attend one of them could not be accommodated. This was rather distantly removed from the truth, as any of the theatres could have held many more.

A BENEDICT SERVES

Alf Parker, a smoke eater from the Pacific coast, is the only man in the C.G.E. junior engineers' group who is married. At the E.I.C. banquet last night his buddies decked Parker out in a chef's hat, removed his coat, rolled up his sleeves and handed him a carving set Parker scarcely had time to get a mouthful of ham himself, the horde kept him so busy, and they made short work of a large ham. The dinner was a great success.

BANK CLEARINGS.

Clearings passing through the Peterborough Exchange during the past week ending today amounted to $666,191.

AT EXECUTIVE MEETING.

City Clerk is attending a meeting of the executive of the Ontario Municipal Association in Toronto to-day.

PAY CITY $100.

The county's contribution of $100 to the city for the care of Victoria Park was directed Wednesday to be paid in a resolution by Reeve A. B. Mann, seconded by Deputy-Reeve Archibald.

LIFE IN LILAC BUDS.

Buds are green on the lilac bushes, and have burgeoned a bit of late. Recent high winds swept the trees clean of last summer's leaves, turning on a blast that seemed to say to the dry lilac foliage, "It's time you were gone out of here. Don't ou know your day is done?"

IN BARRIEFIELD

Morley B. Plunkett, member of the famous Dumbells, and resident of Peterborough for the past few years, has gone to Barriefield. He is in charge of the Canadian Legion Hut there, and, with his broad experience in entertaining troops, is considered to be a most valuable addition to the staff.

RABBIT HUNTERS

A picture from Delbert, Nova Scotia, where the Engineers are quartered, shows Ab Quinlan and Max Vincent after returning from a rabbit hunt. Max is holding aloft three large snowshoe rabbits. The boys report that small game hunting is excellent in the vicinity of the camp, and they have little trouble getting permission to hunt.

A MASTER CARVER

Reporters have a habit of sitting close to the source of supply when at a banquet, and at the Kawartha Club Wednesday night an Examiner reporter made no mistake when he sat near A. L. Killaly. Mr. Killaly had been named official carver, and he sliced up a large tendersweet ham like a veteran, which he probably is. The reporter was more ham than human when the dinner was over.

COUNCIL GRATEFUL.

The county council's appreciation of the hospitality of the Peterborough Tourist Bureau was expressed in a resolution by Reeves Gifford and W. A. Anderson Wednesday afternoon. "We also appreciate the splendid work done by Fred Roy under the direction of the Bureau. It should provide most favorable advertising for this county, and Peterborough is fortunate in having an artist of Mr. Roy's ability to do such a fine job of color photography."

MUCH MAIL LOST.

The difficulty of making certain that parcels, mail matter or gifts addressed to Canadian soldiers in England arrive at their destination is something which the Post Office Department cannot always solve. One of the most recent sinkings announced was the C.P.R. freighter "Beaverford," it being a member of a convoy attacked in the North Atlantic. No exact information has been made known, but it is a fact that this vessel was carrying mail for overseas troops, parcels, etc., and the volume was quite large. There will undoubtedly be complaint made in time that letters and parcels have not arrived, but the Post Office Department can do nothing about it, since the mail is at the bottom of the ocean.

Evidence Given Of Drinking At Double Probe

WARWORTH, Nov. 21—(Special to The Examiner).—John Kemp of Morganston was named the driver of the car which is alleged to have struck William and Robert Greenley near here on October 26, by a coroner's jury which brought in a verdict late yesterday afternoon after deliberating an hour and ten minutes. It was the most definite verdict brought in by a coroner's jury in this county in many inquests, was the opinion expressed by police. The jury found that Kemp was accompanied by Gordon Beggs and Stewart McCubbin of Warkworth and that all three young men had been drinking and the verdict suggested that they had been aware that something had been struck by the car and had failed to return to the scene. Following was the verdict:

"We, the jury, find that Robert and William Greenley were struck by a car driven by John Kemp of Morganston, at Warkworth on the night of October 26, and lated died. With Kemp at the time were Gordon Beggs and Stewart McCubbin. These men had been drinking and we believe they were aware that they had struck something and failed to return. We recommend more strict penalties for hit-and-run drivers and for people engaged in the illicit sale of liquor."

Coroner Dr. J. Rundle of Colborne, in summing up the evidence, said:

"It is the wish of the Attorney-General to make our roads safe. Perhaps you may have some suggestion to help. There has been evidence of drinking in this case and it is the usual thing of beer and gas not mixing very well. I believe that if there had been no liquor concerned, the men wouldn't have left the scene and left a man to die. I do not think that they went to express their sympathy to his family. They must have been very callous and to my mind there is nothing too bad for people like that," declared the coroner. The members of the jury were John Diamond, Fred Moore, Benoni Isaac, Clayton Dudley, and Andrew Weatherton. Harry Deyman of Cobourg represented the Crown.

Returning from Warkworth

Evidence revealed that on the night of October 26, William Greenley, a district farmer, and his son, Robert, had gone to Warkworth for the evening. They left for home shortly before midnight. They were travelling on foot. Later two of William Greenley's sons, David and Lorne, started to drive home. On their way they encountered Robert, walking along dazed and bleeding. He was unable to tell them what had happened. As a result they searched the locality and found their father lying unconscious in a ditch.

William Greenley died later the same day and his son passed away in Belleville General Hospital, on the following Thursday.

Charles Greenley of Warkworth testified that he had seen his brother in Warkworth on the night of the accident and knew that he had started off for home with his father at 11.40 p.m.

"When we were driving home," related Charles Greenley, "and about a mile and a half from the village Lorne and I saw Robert staggering along the road. We stopped and saw that he was badly hurt, his head bleeding and he was dazed and knew nothing of what had happened. He had his father's cap on his head. We later found our father lying in a ditch. He was unconscious."

Wanted to Surrender

Dr. Armstrong told of attending the injured men and later performed a post mortem examination. Robert Greenley was suffering from shock, concussion, broken right arm, broken left collar-bone and chest injuries later found to consist of a punctured lung. The father had a broken leg, jaw broken on both sides, fractured left cheek-bone and concussion of the brain. Dr. Armstrong said that Stewart McCubbin had come to his office on the afternoon of Sunday, October 27th, and asked him to call the provincial police at Campbellford as Beggs and Kemp wanted to give themselves up.

Frank Jones of Warkworth testified that Kemp, McCubbin and Beggs had been at his home during the evening of the accident and had left about midnight. There had been drinking going on, he said.

William Robinson, Bruce Hope, Arnold Cole and Frank Lockhart testified that they had been at the Jones house that night and stated that Kemp, Beggs and McCubbin had been drinking and showed the effects of the beer they had been drinking in the fact that they were talkative.

Drank Six Quarts of Beer

Stewart McCubbin testified that the three of them had consumed six quarts of beer at the Jones house and they had left before midnight Kemp was driving and he, the witness, was in the back seat. Beggs was sitting with the driver. During the trip home the glass in the window next to the driver went out and he asked what had happened. Kemp had replied that his elbow had gone through it, related McCubbin. Learning Saturday morning that there had been an accident he went to see Kemp and Beggs. At that time Kemp had said that he did not hit anything as far as he knew.

Gordon Beggs admitted that they had been drinking beer at Jones' home, but that on the way home he fell asleep in the front seat. He was awakened by something.

"I asked Kemp what it was and he told me that his elbow had gone through the window," testified Beggs.

Tried to Fix Up Car

Beggs related further than he had took the remains of a damaged fender-light and also tried to take the dents out of a left rear fender on Sunday afternoon. He said that he applied paint to the damaged part of the fender after straightening it out. Witness testified that when he talked the matter over with Kemp that the latter suggested that he, Beggs, should say that he was driving because Kemp had no driver's permit. Beggs also that that he had found some watery-grey substance adhering to the left rear window on Sunday as though someone had been sick and he wiped this off.

Provincial Constable Donald Carruthers of Campbellford told of examining the scene of accident and finding a large spot of blood where William Greenley had been found, and there were bloodstains around that locality. Where the accident occurred, the road was straight, although there was a bend in the road further on. The officer told of finding a fender-light 47 feet west of where William Greenley was found. Glass was scattered about the ditch for a distance of 55 feet after the accident.

Provincial Constable David Adair of Cobourg told of examining the car and finding that the parking light had been knocked off the left front fender. He found also that the left rear door had been cleaned but found stains on the hood and the left rear side of the car. It was also plainly visible that the left rear fender had been dented.

Frontiersmen Offer Services

A proposal that the Peterborough squadron of the Legion of Frontiersmen should be used as a municipal police reserve here was before the board of police commissioners at the regular meeting of that body on Wednesday.

The suggestion came in a communication from Major Collins of the provincial command of the Frontiersmen who asked that a by-law should be passed by the police commission, setting up a police reserve and paving the way for the swearing in of members of the Legion as special constables, ready for duty in any emergency that might arise. Major Collins pointed out that the services of the Frontiersmen were entirely voluntary, and the members of the organization were not allowed to accept any remuneration. Already two Ontario cities, Toronto and London, had used the Frontiersmen to set up municipal police reserves. In the west, Major Collins said, the organization had done good work in assisting the Royal Canadian Mounted Police.

The attitude of the commission in regard to the matter was that more information should be available before any action was taken. A motion by Judge S. L. Smoke, seconded by Magistrate Gee that Toronto and London be asked for a copy of the bylaws they had passed and that the advice of Attorney-General Conant should be sought in the matter was passed.

Chief Constable Newhall reported in regard to the purchase of war savings stamps by members of the police department. A number had been purchasing stamps through children at school and others were buying them through the city treasury, the chief constable stated.

"We are not trying to coerce anybody," Judge Smoke remarked. Present at the meeting were Judge Smoke, chairman, Magistrate E. A. Gee and Mayor James Hamilton.

CAMPBELLFORD

Night Constable Prevents Fire

CAMPBELLFORD, Nov. 21 (ENS)—A cigarette butt is thought to have been the cause of an early morning fire which brought the department to H. G. Denike's grocery store at 1.30 Tuesday. The alarm was sent in by Night Constable P. Bartley, who on making his rounds, saw smoke coming from the side of the two storey building located on Front street. Mr. Denike still downtown was located and opened the door for firemen, who discovered a smouldering floor carpet responsible for the smoke. Alertness of the night constable was commended by Fire Chief Williams, who felt that a serious fire had been avoided.

Governor-General Will Inspect Highlanders At Lansdowne Park

OTTAWA, Nov. 21—(Special to The Examiner). — His Excellency, the Earl of Athlone, Governor-General of Canada, will inspect the Stormont, Dundas and Glengarry Highlanders at Lansdowne Park here on Friday afternoon, it was learne dofficially today.

Announcement of the inspection was made today and brought a wave of excitement into camp, though ordinary training was continued as usual. The Governor-General will watch the Highlanders in the same review that they staged for Brigadier Logie Armstrong, O.B.E., officer commanding Military District 3, in middle October, when hundreds of Peterborough people were on hand at Exhibition Park camp in Kingston.

The Glengarrians, here for a fortnight now, have already made a place for themselves in the hearts of residents of this, the nation's capital.
